CHARLEVOIX WINS FROM HARBOR "5"

COPPED-TWELFTH VICTORY BY 41 TO 20 SCORE

Close Pre-Tournament Schedule Friday Night With Boyne City on Home Hardwood

Charlevoix's Red Rayders, undefeated in twelve games this season, close their pre-tournament schedule on the home court Friday night

The contest, bringing together Charlevoix, the Little Eight class C conference leaders, and Boyne City, the runners-up, is a "natural." Boyne has been defeated once, a 34 to 19 set-back administered by Charlevoix. A win for Boyne means a tie for the conference title, while a Charlevoix victory will give them their second consecutive championship.

The situation parallels that of a year ago when Charlevoix and Boyne fought it out for the conference leadership. The second of two one-point victories for Charlevoix lost them Carey, star forward, with a broken ankle. The mishap broke up what was apparently a tournament-bound combination which lost to Boyne in the district event. Boyne went on to win the regional and reach the quarter-finals of the state tournament.

Friday night's bill is a double-header, featuring the varsity and reserve teams. Charlevoix's reserves, who have lost but two games, one of them to Boyne, will attempt to even the count. The two games promise to be the feature home contests of the season.

Win from Harbor Springs

The Rayders hung up their 12th victory last Friday night with a 41 to 20 win over Harbor Springs on the home court.

With the varsity and subs alternating play, Charlevoix led 17 to 4 at the quarter, 25 to 8 at the half and 36 to 10 at the third intermission. They won by a wide margin on Harbor's court earlier in the season.

Carey and Brown shared scoring honors for Charlevoix, the former with 15 points and the latter with 14. Bergmann and Gallagher accounted for 6 points each.

The line-ups:

Charlevoix (41)	FG	FT	P
Carey	7	1	0
Brown	7	0	1
Gallagher	3	0	1
Bergmann	2	2	1
Withers	0	0	1
Pearl	0	0	3
	19	3	7
Harbor (20)	FG	FT	P
Hanna	1	1	1
Mosier	2	0	1
Shepherd	0	1	1
Brower	3	1	3
Bradfield	1	1	1

Charlevoix's reserves won a thriller by a 17 to 16 score after one overtime period. Leading 7 to 0 at the quarter and 10 to 2 at the half, Charlevoix saw Harbor draw away to a 13 to 12 advantage at the third intermission. The regulation play ended with the score tied 16-all. Tom Carey's free throw in the extra session proved Charlevoix's margin of victory.

SOIL MANAGEMENT IS TOPIC FOR MEETINGS

Series of Four Gatherings Scheduled for Coming Week

An instructive series of four meetings, covering soil management and pasture recommendation, will be held in Charlevoix county next week.

In charge of the meetings will be E. L. Longnecker, soil specialist, and C. M. Harrison, farm crops specialist from Michigan State College.

With spring rapidly approaching, these meetings will provide farmers a wonderful opportunity to obtain the latest information on soil management and pasture recommendations, as well as to learn the merits of smooth brome grass combined with alfalfa, one of the subjects to be explained. In the soil conservation discussion, payments for various legume seedings and mixtures will be explained.

Meetings will be held as follows: March 3, 10 a. m., Marion Center town hall; March 3, 2 p. m., East Jordan community building; March 4, 10 a. m., Boyne City library; March 4, 2 p. m., I. O. O. F. hall, Horton Bay.

TODD REPORTS ON ADVERTISING TRIP

MET MANY GROUPS IN FOUR MID-WEST CITIES

Charlevoix's Resort Attractions and Facilities for Industry Told — Given Fine Cooperation

In the following statement, Gordon Todd, secretary of the Charlevoix Board of Commerce, reports on his recent publicity trip, during which he appeared before groups and individuals in four-mid-west cities:

"On my recent trip to Grand Rapids, Detroit, Chicago, and Cincinnati I showed movies to Kiwanis Clubs, conventions, and many different organizations with the purpose in mind to advertise Charlevoix as a summer resort. Also at each meeting, I told of different sites suitable for factories and what we had to offer any concern which might be interested in locating at Charlevoix.

"I received splendid cooperation from the newspapers in every city that I was in. I also found that Charlevoix is not as well advertised in and around Detroit as in other parts of the country. For instance, I came in contact with one man who has a fine large yacht who did not know that it is possible to get into Charlevoix harbor. I found many similar instances many places where I went.

"I found that many of the winter resorts in Florida were showing pictures to attract the tourist trade; I also met a man from Scotland who was in the United States for this same purpose. I certainly was made to realize that with the whole state of Michigan now in the resort business, we really have to advertise. The tourist trade is changing; people are no longer satisfied to settle in one place for any great length of time. We must accept this change and go ahead with these new ideas or Charlevoix will soon pass out of the picture as a resort center.

DETROIT BALLISTIC EXPERT KNOWN HERE

James Payne Cited for Fine Record With Detroit Police Force

James Payne, who is the son-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. William Woods, this city, is cited in a recent article by the Detroit Free Press for his record as firearms expert of the Detroit police scientific laboratory.

The article states that Detective Payne has examined about a million bullets, checked 14,600 guns and testified in more than 400 court cases in the last ten years. In 1936, Payne's testimony was the essential evidence in a murder trial in Toledo against four men charged with murder. All four were convicted and sentenced to die in the electric chair.

Payne has testified in cases in all sections of the United States and several Canadian cities. The evidence he gave in the trial of the Purple gangsters played an important part in sending three killers to prison for life.

Payne is described by prosecutors and defense lawyers as an excellent witness for the reason that when testifying he gives assurance to everyone that what he says is absolute.

In addition to his own literature, Mr. Clothier will distribute advertising for Charlevoix and this city's resort institutions as well.

The Chicago show is the largest and most colorful event of its kind staged in the mid-west. It is expected over 300,000 persons will attend. Leading boat builders and accessory manufacturers of the United States have displays.

CHARLEVOIX-DETROIT CLUB TO HAVE PARTY

Annual Get-Together Is Scheduled for Friday, March 4th

A communication from W. A. Carey of Detroit, president of the Charlevoix-Detroit Club, outlines plans for the annual Club party. Mr. Carey's letter follows:

"Following a meeting of the executive board of the Charlevoix-Detroit Club at the home of Doris Kane Borhan on Thursday evening, February 3, committees were selected through which we hope to have one of our most successful and largest attended parties.

"The date was set last year for March 4th, the first Friday in the month, to be held in the Highland Park Y. W. C. A. building, 13130 Woodward avenue. Our experience last year convinces us that this location is the most suitable for all who are interested in this fine get-together party.

"There will be a pot luck dinner for all from 6:30 to 7:30 p. m., followed with about two hours of entertainment which will include special music and moving pictures. Several films from Charlevoix will be shown, thanks to the fine cooperation of Gordon B. Todd, secretary of the Board of Commerce, who has agreed to send the films.

DOGS HARRYING DEER HERDS IN THIS COUNTY

Two Killed in Oyster Bay District, One on Peninsula

Evidence that unleashed dogs are making the usual inroads into the deer herds of the western portion of the county is revealed by a report of Conservation Officer Ed. Deuel of Boyne City, that three have been found killed recently.

Two deer were killed by dogs after being chased from the Oyster Bay district near Camp Charlevoix out onto the ice of Lake Charlevoix. Another dead deer was chased similarly off the peninsula east of Ironton.

Conservation officers are patroling the deer areas and will destroy dogs found chasing deer in the future, it is understood.

UNION GOOD FRIDAY SERVICES PLANNED

Charlevoix County Churches Will Again Join Cooperative Plan

At a recent meeting held here, plans were formulated to hold simultaneous union Good Friday service in the three cities of Charlevoix county as in previous years.

There will be five speakers in each city to talk on topics which will be announced later. These union services have made a strong appeal the past few years in the county.

A committee was also appointed to consider the feasability of holding a preaching mission in each of the three cities sometime before Easter.

CERTIFIED SEED POTATOES ARE EXEMPTED

Only Variety Not Included in Inter-State Shipping Regulations

Only certified seed potatoes are exempt from inter-state shipping regulations, State Agriculture Commissioner John B. Strange warned today.

He cited a recent federal order that all potatoes moving interstate must be U. S. commercial grade or better.

"Seed potatoes moving within the state may be transported by the grower within the state," Strange said. "There are no size requirements for these potatoes. The grower is required to have a permit for transportation. This can be obtained from the district inspector.

"It must be remembered that this permit does not allow the grower to move this stock outside the boundary of the state of Michigan unless he complies with the requirements covering table stock which must be of A grade at least 80 per cent U. S. No. 1 (commercial) 1 7-8 inch minimum unless otherwise specified as to size."

SOCIAL SECURITY ACT IS OPERATIVE

INCREASE OF PAYMENTS IS SHOWN IN REPORT

Claims Certified in Michigan During January Were 1,094; Total of 3,322 Made to Date

Claims for lump-sum payments under the old-age insurance plan of the social security act were certified during January at the rate of 942 per working day, the Social Security Board announced today. Six months ago, in August, the daily rate was 165 from which level it climbed steadily through September, October, November, and December, the successive average daily rates for each month being 228, 363, 581 and 590.

During January a total of $745,691 was certified for payment to 23,538 claimants—workers who reached the age of 65 and the estates of workers who died. The average amount of each payment was $31.68, or almost double the average of $17.00 for all claims paid up to the end of August.

Pennsylvania with 2,929 headed the list with the largest number of claims certified, but the greatest amount of money went to New York where $97,175 was distributed among 2,768 claimants.

The largest claim that has been certified went to an employee who reached the age of 65. He received a lump-sum payment in January of $525. The largest death claim certified was for $420.

Since the Government's old-age insurance plan went into effect on January 1, 1937, $2,023,207 has been certified for payment to 76,775 claimants. Each of the claims paid amounts to 3½ per cent of the total wages paid to these wage earners.

Clifton H. Little, manager of the Traverse City office of the Social Security Board, announced that in Michigan 1,094 claims were certified during January for a total of $35,391.44, or an average of $32.35 per claimant. To date, the total number of claims certified in Michigan is 3,322 and the total amount of payments $90,649.83.

PYTHIAN BENEFIT PROGRAM MONDAY

MINSTREL AND COMEDY AT SCHOOL GYMNASIUM

Funds to Be Used for 5-Year Program of Scholastic Recognition in Public Schools

Sponsored by Pine Lake Lodge No. 122, Knights of Pythias, and with casts entirely of Pythian members, a minstrel show and three-act comedy will be presented Monday evening, February 28th, at the school gymnasium.

The minstrel, billed as different than the usual end-man type, has its setting in a Negro cafeteria. Songs and localized jokes will be featured. The comedy, entitled "Rube and His Ma," has a barnyard setting—between the house and barn on a typical American farm—to be exact. The sponsors acclaim the comedy presents rural wit at its best. The casts are entirely male. A. C. Belding is the director.

The entertainment is primarily a benefit affair, given to raise funds for a 5-year program sponsored by the Knights of Pythias in recognition of scholastic attainment in the five upper grades of Charlevoix public schools.

Under the plan, a student maintaining an average grade of B or better for two semesters, will be presented with a bronze medal upon initial attainment. If the same student maintains the required average in future consecutive semesters, they may win awards of green gold, silver plate, gold plate and sterling silver medals in their order. Thus the plan provides recognition from the 8th through the 12th grades.

The plan is already operative and, during the intermission between the minstrel show and comedy Monday night, twenty-five students will be presented with bronze medals as rewards for their scholastic record in the last semester of the 1936-37 school year and the first semester of the 1937-38 year.

Receiving awards will be the following: Seniors—Lyle Beattie, Jeanne Campbell, Rosemary Cooper, Charles Dhasleer, Eleanore Jacobson, Alice McHugh, Benjamin Palmer and Florence Palmer. Juniors—Edward Fochtman, Mary Gengle, Donald Tillotson, Marielle VanAllsburg and Harry Withers. Sophomores—Robert Craig, Marjorie Lusk, Frances Meggison and Betty Willis. Freshmen — Mary Bettis, Amy Peterson, Phyllis VanAllsburg and Freda Willis. 8th grade—Ruth Edwards, Lillian King, Howard North and Gerald Novotny.

The public is extended an invitation to enjoy the Pythian entertainment and thus extend their assistance in carrying out this very worthy plan of scholastic recognition.

GRAND LODGE VISITORS HONOR LOCAL PYTHIANS

Grand Chancellor Garnett and Three Others Here Monday Night

Present at the meeting were Grand Chancellor Sherman W. F. Garnett of Owosso, Grand Prelate George A. Cram of Pontiac, Grand Master at Arms George Bigby of Bay City, and Grand Inner Guard Ray H. Burrell of Ypsilanti.

A lunch was provided for the Grand Lodge visitors as well as for delegations of Pythians from East Jordan and Central Lake. Each of the visiting officers spoke briefly. Second degree work was carried out by the entertaining lodge members.

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

The paradoxical situation whereby vast surplus stocks of Michigan apples and putatoes remain in Michigan warehouses while outstate apples and potatoes arrive daily for sale here has prompted state officials to burn midnight oil in quest of a solution.

Two conclusions are being advanced by experts in the state department of agriculture:

1. Apples, potatoes and similar foodstucs should be graded. The state department, cooperating with the federal government, undertook a grading program last fall. But only the surface is being scratched.

2. Merchandising foodstuffs in attractive packages would stimulate consumer buying. Instead of placing pages of yesterday's newspaper around the bottom of a bushel basket, the grower would use attractive green or red paper. Paper cartons would be utilized for retail presentation of pears, peaches, etc.

Mr. and Mrs. Burton Russell are staying with her uncle, Henry Syers at his home at Central Lake for a short time, as business is a little slack in Detroit. Mrs. Andy Warner reports that her brother there, could get work, but he won't work, because he is a member of the CIO.

Burr Sage was out Saturday looking after Traverse Bay Telephone Company interests. He recently returned from Lansing where he has a position as director on an accident company for telephone employees. His son Kenneth has a good position with an electric company at Saginaw.

Louis DeYoung, who runs a gas station at junction of M-88 and US-31 at Eastport, was over this way Saturday on business connected with his work. He has been quite ill for the last month, and submitted recently to a minor operation by Dr. Benker of East Jordan, and is just able to get out again.

It looks from here as though the weather man Saturday and Sunday completed congealing the ice on old Torch, and the icemen are jubilant, as it looked for awhile as though they weren't going to be able to put up ice this spring. Mr. Kaufmun at Eastport, has an electric refrigerator, and doesn't have to bother with putting up ice any more.

The snow is going down in the streets of Central Lake, but most of the sidewalks on the side streets have not been cleared of snow, which is the worst for several years. Thanks to the County Road Commission, however, the main roads have been kept cleared of snow in splendid shape this winter. Some hills out Eastport way have had to be sanded again lately.

We have an invitation from Com. Wm. C. Palmer of Charlevoix to attend a Teacher's County Institute at Charlevoix this week Wednesday. A fine program has been arranged for an all day meeting. More about this will be given in our items next week. Mr. Palmer is a livewire commissioner, and is always on the alert to furnish something good for his teachers. We are glad to hear that he is improved in health.

People of Central Lake and vicinity were shocked Sunday to hear of the sudden death of Mrs. F. M. Malone, which occurred at the Stevens home at 2 o'clock Sunday morning. She got up, saying it was hard for her to breath, and was cared for by Mrs. Ona Vandenberg and daughter, Nola, and others, but in 15 minutes had passed away of heart trouble, before the physician who was summoned could arrived. Mrs. Vandenberg is stopping at the Stevens home during Mrs. Steven's absence in the west. Mrs. Malone was a kindly lady, member of the Central Lake Congregational church, and will be missed by her many relatives and friends. She leaves to mourn her loss, three sons, Sam and Frank of Grand Rapids, and James of Traverse City. Her husband passed away about two years ago. Mrs. Malone was about 60 years of age. Mrs. Malone had been employed for many years at the Central Lake Traverse Bay Telephone office. Her husband was manager for quite a while of the Central Lake canning factory, and was appointed its receiver when it failed several years ago.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE NEWS BULLETIN

Destroy Old Plates Case Tells Drivers

Leon D. Case, secretary of state, cautions all motorists to destroy their 1937 motor vehicle license plates as soon as they install 1938 plates to their cars.

Instances in which criminals have picked up cast-off plates for temporary use on their own cars in the commission of a crime, are not unknown to police, it is pointed out.

The dangers of this possibility grows during the last few days preceding a license plate deadline, with hundreds of thousands of plates being carelessly thrown away, thus available to anyone who might want to use them perhaps for only a few hours.

Until March 1, the only way a motorist can be assured that no one else might use his old plates, is to see to it personally that the plates are mutilated, Case stresses.

RESPONSIBLE TO THE PUBLIC
TELEPHONE SERVICE, so interwoven with every phase of modern life, is a public necessity. It is needed day and night. It vitally concerns the general welfare.
Michigan's telephone workers realize they carry a responsibility not imposed on the average industry. How fully they accept that responsibility is shown by the "spirit of service" that has long been a tradition among them . . . a tradition that grew out of the faithful discharge of routine duty, and a ready sacrifice of personal convenience and comfort when emergencies have endangered the service.

CHAPTER III

"Very well, indeed. She has been taught to sew, spin, cook and will be a good wife for a good soldier. But need I remind you that the Indian neophytes are wards of the Church, and we are responsible for their welfare? We have not deemed it well for the Indian maids to associate with the—with the—"

"With the soldiery, I suppose? Well, good Father, do not be afraid. She will associate with my wife, and I assure you she is not a soldier-like person at all, and will not corrupt the little one's morals."

The father protested. "I do not mean that . . ."

"And there will be another woman, too. There is the Dona Angustias. Ha! She will make that Indian maid adhere to the straight and narrow path. She is my wife's duena, a very thin female with mustachios like a grenadier, a pious churchwoman, and a militant virgin."

Serra smiled. "Ah, my son, your humor is dear to me. You are responsible for many a smile that would not otherwise have lightened my face, just as you are responsible for many a heartache—but none of that. Come with me, Don Pedro, and you shall see Indizuela."

They paced slowly together, and stopped before an unpretentious structure, built as all the other mission buildings were built, long and low, with a thatched roof.

"Hola!" called Serra. The chattering and laughter that rollicked through the high barred window apertures stopped. A song ceased suddenly in a singer's throat.

It was the quarters of the young Indian women, half facetiously called the monjera—the nunnery. The sun shone on the warm red of tiled floors, and vividly emphasized bright colors on blankets and cloth which some of the girls were weaving. It shone on sleek blue-black heads raised for a moment from fine needlework, and seemed to point out to Fages' eyes a young girl, whose half-opened mouth had still a fragment of song lingering on the lips.

"Indizuela!" called a woman's voice excitedly. "Girls! Do you not see? It is El Gobernador himself! And Fray Junipero! Rise, all of you!" There was a great fluttering, as the Spanish matron and her flock of dark doves made their obeisances. When they were seated again, and pretending to work, Fray Junipero walked to Indizuela and took her by the hand, saying, "Your benefactor, El Gobernador, wishes to speak to you, child."

The singing girl walked toward the Governor with grace and poise. "Somehow lighter, somehow taller, somehow fairer-formed than other Indians," he thought as she came the long length of the room.

She waited for him to speak first, but he only twisted his beard, so she spoke in careful Spanish.

"I hope you are well, Senor el Gobernador. I pray God for your good health and deliverance from all infirmities. I thank God daily for your kindness in saving me from death and horror."

Fages started at her words. "Someone has taught you to say that! You have learned it word by word. Haven't you?"

"Si, Senor el Gobernador. Padre Junipero and Dona Maria have taught me."

Fages laughed, twinkling his eyes and opening his mouth widely. The other girls and the matron looked at one another. Serra looked at the floor.

"Have you, then, so little gratitude that you must have words put into your mouth to thank me for bringing you here from the desert of the Colorado where I found you deserted and starving? What say you?"

The girl looked at the matron—then proceeded along her own lines.

"They would not let me say the things I think myself, Senor. For I have said you are the most wonderful man in the world. I think you are a god, surely, and that—"

"Ai, ai! Indizuela." The matron hurried forward, and Father Serra lifted a restraining hand. But Fages only roared louder.

"You are right, Dona Maria, and Fray Junipero! Don't let her talk about me! A god—a hero! Ai, ai, ai! Ho, ho—" He stopped breathlessly. The girls giggled, and Indizuela sat indifferently down to her weaving.

At last Fages got his breath. "After all, Padre Junipero," he said, "she is just a child."

"My son," answered the friar, "I am pleased at your unworldliness. Come with me and see this dovecote." He led the Governor through the long dormitory where he could see little straw pallets beneath barred windows.

"Nests where they sleep at night, safe from harm," explained the priest.

They went into the kitchen where great bowls of mush boiled and bubbled, and curious girls watched the process that they might learn it.

Then they passed into the garden.

"Now, Pedro Fages," said Serra gravely, "think well on what you have seen. Remember this dovecote where ignorant Indian girls are made into useful, pious women, where they are kept safe from the evils of the world. Most of the girls you have seen so busily engaged, would have been depraved animals had it not been for the teaching we bring them."

"I know," replied the Governor thoughtfully.

"Do you not think they are better off as they are?" inquired Serra anxiously. "Do you not think they are really happier? Think of their lives as savages! You know as well as I the frightful, filthy customs that attend the Indian women at their child-bearing—"

"Ugh, indeed I do, Padre." He put his hand on the other's shoulder. "You are a wonder worker," he said respectfully.

"Thank you. Oh, I have prayed, my son, that the blessed Santa Maria would soften your heart toward her poor savage children. If that had happened—if that could happen—the way of Junipero Serra would have been much easier in this land."

Fages looked thoughtful.

"You are right. But Our Lady does not seem to think her servant worthy of being filled with the milk of human kindness. I am sorry. You have deserved better."

Serra raised a hand in protest. "I have received what I have deserved. It is my destiny to irrigate this vine - covered field with my blood."

Fages fingered his beard uncomfortably. "Um-m. I should call that destiny a doom. To mingle one's blood with the soil of California! There could be more dreadful dooms."

"Well," spoke Serra with heartiness, "we will not consider that now. I could sing for joy at the news you have brought me! My heart's wish, my Mission Santa Barbara! At last, at last!"

"Yes, and my Eulalia and my young Pedro, at last! Now I must go, I am departing early on the morrow, and will not see you again until I lead that train from far-away Mexico with your two good men of God, into the Royal Presidio of Monterey. And then what plans we shall make for the Mission of Santa Barbara."

CHAPTER IV

The Lady Eulalia huddled herself into as small a bundle as she could on the doubtful seat of the lancha which was pulling rapidly away from the unfriendly harbor of San Blas. As the standing oarsmen bent to their long sweeps she could glimpse between them the low warehouses on the shore, and the bare ribs of a ship under construction in the shipyard. But her tear-filled eyes watched, until it was no larger than a watermelon seed, her comfortable coach sitting on the shore.

Resolutely she looked about her in the craft. There sat Angustias, with her pet Capuchin monkey in her arms, cuddling the shivering little beast to her gaunt breast, her eyes as dismal as the monkey's.

Pedro the Younger sat beside her. Soon a huge shadow loomed over them. They looked up.

There, with screaming gulls wheeling and whirling about her, rose the steep sides and high, ungainly poop of the paquebut San Carlos, sometimes called the Golden Fleece.

For a few terrifying moments, Eulalia hung between heaving sea and uncertain sky, clambering up the bulging unfriendly sides of the San Carlos to the deck.

Immediately, in her stuffy cabin, began a suspension of time and faculties, broken only once, as she roused herself to ask a question of the drear Angustias, wan with worry over her seasick monkey.

"My chests — they are safe—aboard?"

Being reassured that the 50 chests of raiment, jewels, linens and silks were safely stowed, she relapsed again into her coma of mareamiento, seasickness, and emerged not until she was safely on the shores of Baja California.

California! Anxiously she regarded the ancient mission settlement of Loreto, the first outpost of that mysterious land to which she was summoned. Here was the sordidness for which she had been prepared, but where were the glories that had been mentioned?

"Beautiful California!" she sneered. "Lovely California! My home. Ha." Then she smiled graciously at the young officer come to escort her to quarters in the quadrangle. Once within its bare white walls she felt she could abandon herself to all her weakness, her desolation, her fear of this strange country and the dreaded journey before her. But she discovered some of the million black evil bugs.

"Ha!" she said again. "So! This beautiful land sends a scourge of vermin to plague me! Very well. I shall not weep—I shall not weaken. I shall conquer this California—or I will die."

Famous for her portrayals as the ideal American wife, Miss Loy now deviates from her usual roles to play a single woman whose man is stolen by a rival.

Mulford's latest action romance, "Partners of the Plains," opening Wednesday, March 2 at the Palace Theatre. In a surprise attack Gwen Gaze challenger William Boyd, and the flower of the British aristocracy makes the cowboy forget his long-time preference for cactus.

SHOVE WITH YOUR CAR!

Your Mileage Merchant Advises...

Try to have the two cars slightly "staggered"—not exactly in line with each other. This often helps if bumpers lock, especially when the car with its bumper below can reach a drain or similar depression. Another way is for the car with its bumper on top to get up on a curb or "hump." That's all "just in case."

Now ask the poor fellow who wants your help to get into HIGH—keeping his clutch pedal down—letting it back gradually only after you get his car under way.

Push with your LOW gear. That's easiest on your car . . . for half a block. Then if the other fellow's car hasn't started, have him get into neutral and push him up to a nearby Mileage Merchant for Special Winter Blend Conoco Bronze like yours. That can't help but get him started . . . Then the way to dodge further battery trouble, dangerous oil dilution—and embarrassment—is to get sure-starting Conoco Bronze all winter! WELFARE WILL GET POTATOES

As the result of insistent demands made by E. R. Eaton, editor of The Plymouth Mail and state representative from the rural district of Wayne county, a part of Michigan's surplus potato crop will be used for welfare purposes instead of being entirely destroyed. An announcement has just been made by the state agricultural commissioner that the Federal Surplus Commodities corporation has agreed to purchase Michigan potatoes for welfare purposes. This plan will divert some of the potatoes from the pig pens of Michigan to the dining tables of unemployed people.

It was stated by the state agriculture department some two weeks ago that Michigan surplus potatoes were to be destroyed or fed to livestock. Eaton's strong protest to the destruction followed, with the recommendation that the potatoes be bought from the farmers and used for welfare purposes, which the department now consents to do. He has written the state commissioner of agriculture commending him for changing his plan. Eaton further recommends that all ungraded potatoes be bought from the growers and used for welfare purposes. He contends that this proposed purchase would in no way affect the market for good potatoes, as exceedingly few people on welfare now buy any potatoes at all.

The United States bureau of agricultural economics reports the demand for apples is expected to improve during the next few years with further rise in the general price level, increased employment and increased industrial activity.

There isn't any magic formula whereby some man becomes greater than others. There is no guarded secret about success. It's just a case of ordinary intelligence, backed by a determination never to be licked. Success lies in prompt decision and energetic action.—Grit.

MORE "MUST" LEGISLATION

Once more the Congress of the United States has surrendered to the dictates of the White House and passed a piece of "must" legislation, this time the newest crop control bill. The bill has been opposed by many of the staunchest liberals in the Congress, among them being such men as Borah and Johnson of the Senate. It was opposed by many of the Southern Democrats who declare the bill makes the farmers "vassals" of Secretary Wallace. It was opposed by the National Grange, the oldest and greatest of all the farm organizations and by many other lesser farmer groups. It was opposed by the cattle raisers who, under its terms, may not even feed cattle on land taken out of production for other crops. It was opposed by numerous individuals and groups on the ground that it is designed to produce a scarcity of foods when the President says one-third the people of the United States are underfed. It was opposed by labor groups, since it is designed to raise the price of food at a time when perhaps 16,000,000 workers are unemployed and many others on part time and so are unable to pay even lower prices for their food.

It is admitted by about everybody in the Congress that not more than a dozen members in the two branches can explain what the Act really contains, what its results will be, yet it was jammed through with only limited debate and without time for anybody fully to read and understand its purport. It was opposed by many economists, since it will require millions, even hundreds of millions of dollars to pay the bounties provided and so will serve further to unbalance the budget and create more deficits and greater debt. It pays bounties to farmers for not producing crops and provides penalties for those who do produce crops. It was passed only because members of the Congress had not the will power to oppose the demands of the President and Secretary Wallace and who figure in this fall's campaign they will be able to garner votes through having voted to "aid the farmer."

So, once more, we have legislation born solely of political expediency and a brain truster's penchant for experimentation. We have an act of most doubtful constitutionality, one which regiments the farmer as not even the original AAA did. It tells him what he may grow and how much he may grow on his own land. It denies him any use whatever of land ordered out of production. It will provide another army of inspectors and snoopers whose duty it will be to fix quotas for farmers and then watch him lest he grow crops in excess of his quota.

—If flood or drouth or frost or excessive heat, grasshoppers or other crop-destroying pest should produce a scarcity of food in this country once more, we shall face the necessity, as under AAA, for buying grain and meat from foreign lands and paying American money to foreign farmers for supplying us with food, while at the same time paying American money to some farmers for failure to supply American people with food. It's just another sample of weird "must" legislation.

REPORT PROGRESS ON AGRICULTURAL CONSERVATION PROGRAM

Payments farmers will receive through the Agricultural Conservation Program for soil-building practices and depleting crop acreage adjustment will be calculated from farm summaries now being received at the state office.

All summaries covering farms which have received inspections in Charlevoix county have been forwarded to Lansing. According to Maurice A. Dean, chairman of the state committee, 49,000 of these summaries have been received throughout the state. After payments have been determined participating farmers will receive an application for payment which when signed will be submitted for payment. 50 per cent of these applications have been received and signed in this county, which are now being submitted for payment.

Payment checks have already been received in two counties; Kalkaska and Luce. The counties having a large acreage of cropland and a greater number of farms will probably require more time, but most of the payments should be made during the spring.

Present indications are that the total number of co-operating farms will be about the same as in 1936. In that year about 64 per cent of the crop acres and 59 per cent of the farms in Michigan participated in the program.

PARENTS CAN AID SON UP WITH SUN

"Does your child wake at dawn and insist that the affairs of the household begin even if parents want to sleep?"

That's an age old question which an assistant in child development and training at Michigan State College believes can be answered to better advantage than most parents answer it. The teaching of self care and responsibility and interest in things that a child can do without disturbing an entire household are involved.

At the age of four, or even younger, says Ruth Wagner, a youngster can learn to help himself until the adults of a household get up for the day.

It's best to teach the idea as a valuable experience for the small boy or girl. Miss Wagner sees the ability of a child to learn such self help as an experience no child should miss.

The boy or girl should be taught to dress sufficiently to keep warm and to find a spot in the house where it is warm enough to play with toys. A new game or a new book occasionally can be used as a surprise that will make the "early bird" happy to cooperate in this childhood adventure.

"If you have an early riser in your household, you'll find it worth your effort to work out such a plan," Miss Wagner says. "The system adds to convenience of tired sleepers and adds to the development of the child as well."

APPLE JUICE ONE OF THE BEST HEALTH PRODUCTS OF ITS KIND

Already several different brands of apple juice are beginning to show themselves on our markets and within another year the volume will increase considerably.

The process which has been developed at the Michigan State College in the past year or two is being used by some manufacturers in the state and the product is a treat to any palate. No preservative is used in this process but the products will keep indefinitely, as long as the container is kept closed. This makes a product that can be sold at all seasons of the year and the amount that could be sold is enormous.

THIS WEEK'S RECIPE

Fried Apples with Sausage
(Southern Style)

One pound sausage, one cup sugar (brown or white), six apples.

Partially fry sausage. Remove to another pan to finish cooking. Quarter and core apples, slice the quarters with skins on into the sausage pan. Add a little water. Cover and cook until tender. Add sugar and cook until slightly brown. The amount of sugar may be varied according to taste. Bacon, ham and other meats may be cooked the same way. Serve with pancakes, waffles or hot biscuits—at breakfast, luncheon or dinner. This is an unusual and unique apple recipe that has come from the south to furnish a welcome addition to the family menu.

..NOTICE..

The Charlevoix Courier is printing a list of delinquent taxes for Charlevoix County which will be offered for sale May 1st.

Due to the complications through the fact that there has been no tax sale for the past five years; the matter of a ten year payment plan, etc., a great deal of complicated bookkeeping has resulted.

The tax list was prepared and submitted by the Auditor General for publication in the Courier and not at this office, and contains many descriptions of property on which the tax has been paid. These descriptions will not be offered for sale.

We mention this, so that if you see property advertised in the tax list, on which you know you have paid the tax, you need not feel unduly alarmed, nor will you have to check again with the county treasurer. No property on which the tax has been paid, will be offered at the May tax sale.

She summoned little Pedro to her, and all afternoon, to the accompaniment of a dismal sand-scattering breeze, beguiled his imagination and comforted her desolation with stories that began, "When I was a little girl in beautiful Barcelona—"

For several days the ancient capital of Baja California stirred from its sun-and-sand-smitten lethargy to prepare La Gobernadora, as they already called Dona Eulalia, for her long journey to Monterey in California Alta. But the troubles with stubborn Indians trying to dispose of more stubborn burros, the difficulty in finding and buying satisfactory riding and pack animals, the labor of packing and provisioning food, water and clothing for a trip that would endure for months, concerned the lady not at all.

When at last the long caravan left Loreto, Eulalia was fairly comfortable on a white Spanish jennet.

It was a strange assortment of pilgrims which rode away from Loreto that morning at sunrise: La Gobernadora herself, hiding her trepidation beneath a demeanor carefully calm, but unusually pale; small Pedro, triumphant on a burro almost as small as himself; Angustias, her brittle bones boring her flesh agonizingly before Loretu was a mile behind, holding Chichi, the monkey, who was as afraid of the mule as the mule was of him. At the head of the van rode one Capitan Canete, serious, troubled by his responsibility, a seasoned traveler and admiring friend of Pedro Fages. There were cooks, muleteers, water-tenders, vaqueros, Indian runners and bearers, tortilla-makers, wood-cutters, soldiers and stragglers.

A little to themselves, heads withdrawn into the cowls of their Franciscan robes, two priests rode, their presence in the expedition an answer to Junipero Serra's prayers.

In the northern reaches of California Alta a hurrying party of horsemen followed the flying horse of the Governor of the Californias, spurred and lashed by his rider as tha rider was spurred and lashed by hot impatience.

CHAPTER V

Leagues of Eulalia's journey lay behind; many terrible leagues traversed doggedly, day and night, with heat, dust, thirst, weariness and an awful numbing fear of the unknown that robbed her of rest. When, at the end of a day's travel, Eulalia lay on her pallet and felt sleep must come, that the blessing of complete oblivion and release from suffering would at last requite her, the blessing was denied. Always at the moment when she seemed slipping into unconsciousness, a rude hand gripped her weary heart and shook it cruelly, until her whole body trembled and sweat coldly.

During the first nights she would cry out, and creep to little Pedro's side for comfort, or summon Angustias to her. Then she grew ashamed of her childishness, and only lay the quieter when her fear specter haunted her.

Sitting before her campfire one night at the end of a trying day, she questioned herself. Why had she been persuaded to come on this journey? She, who was born to luxury, soft cushions and luxurious coaches?

Lifting her face she stared at the fire.

"Queen of the Californias!" she muttered bitterly.

"The two priests are coming to call on you, Dona Eulalia," she announced.

Eulalia did not move.

"Yes?" she questioned dully.

"Yes, and I think it's about time. Do you know, nina, I think there is something queer about those two. I have heard—"

Eulalia snuffed as her duena, with Chichi in her arms, hunched closer to the fire.

"You would hear gossip on a desert isle, and you the only soul on it," she remarked, heeding her ear, nevertheless, closer to her companion.

"I have heard," continued Angustias, "that there are two people on this journey who are being sent to California as a punishment for their sins, and I wondered . . ."

Eulalia flung out her arms dramatically.

"A punishment for their sins! And I am sent to reap a reward for my virtues! A strange country, this California, to which, at the same time, people are sent for punishment and reward!"

Angustias nodded.

"Yes, it is. I am wondering who will get what. Sh-h-h, here they come."

Into the light of the fire two brown-clad figures loomed out of the shadows.

"Greetings, Senora La Gobernadora," said a solemn voice, "I am Fray Mariano, and this is Fray Bartolome, two poor brothers of the mendicant order of San Francisco."

"Greetings to you, good Fathers," replied Eulalia. "Will you not sit down by my fire?"

They disposed themselves on the ground and stared fixedly at the lady. Then they exchanged a long look and nodded.

Eulalia was in her turn studying them. They were young for friars, and looked strangely alike, though one, Fray Mariano, looked slightly older. Their tonsures were quite black, and their black eyes very much alive. But Fray Mariano's look was direct to the point of impudence, and Fray Bartolome's glances slid about indirectly. Both had sensual mouths, but again with a difference; the lips of one turned up in a sly grin, the other turned down the corners of his mouth with a sanctimonious sneer. They were silent, and Eulalia tried uncomfortably to open a conversation.

"You resemble each other very much," she said. "Are you brothers?"

"Ah, no, only brothers in God," intoned Fray Mariano. "My family name is Ruhi, and Fray Bartolome's name is Gili."

"I see. And are you enjoying this journey?"

This started a long tirade from Fray Mariano. They decidedly were not. He complained of everything: the escort, the trails, the food, the tents provided for them, their mules, everything.

Fray Bartolome coughed slightly, and gave his companion a nudge, which the skeptical Angustias observed. The other stopped suddenly.

"But we are resigned," he intoned. "Yes, we are resigned. It is God's will we should make this pilgrimage, so we do not complain. Do you think we are complaining?" he asked Eulalia anxiously.

"If you do I am sure it is with good cause," she replied.

Later, after the two priests departed and Angustias was brushing her mistress' hair, she remarked:

"I don't know how it appears to you, but those do not seem true religious men to me."

"They are strange. I can not understand them, Angustias. Their eyes! And how they stare. But they are Franciscans, after all, and must be but I don't understand them. They make me feel uncomfortable, Angustias."

SCHOOL, SOCIAL PROGRAMS FEATURE SUNSHINE LADY

Marion Martin, Sunshine Lady of the Michigan bakery in Traverse City, is taking part in social and school activities this week at Harbor Springs, Northport, Alanson, Boyne City, East Jordan, Gaylord and Sattons Bay.

Before members of the Harbor Springs Women's club on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, Mrs. Martin is presenting a demonstration of fancy sandwiches and explaining to the ladies the art of making the sandwich varieties. This club meeting will be held at the library, with Mrs. Cummings in charge.

Mrs. Martin will be in charge of the assembly programs of high school and grade students in Alanson on Wednesday afternoon from 1 to 3 o'clock, showing educational motion pictures. Before the Home Economics class of the school during the remainder of the afternoon, she will demonstrate sandwich-making.

At Boyne City, East Jordan, Sattons Bay, and Gaylord on Thursday and Friday, Mrs. Martin is conferring with school superintendents relative to the new copyrighted baking file which is already being used in many schools throughout Northern Michigan. The file is one of the most recent educational projects of the Michigan Bakeries. It is for school study of the various ingredients of bread and rolls, of large-scale modern baking methods and of the purposes and equipment of a bakery laboratory.

Superintendent Richter of the school at Northport will introduce Mrs. Martin before assemblies of students at that school on Friday. Moving pictures will feature the Sunshine Lady's programs during morning and afternoon.

Oldsmobile's production facilities in Lansing, Mich., including the Lansing Fischer Body plant which makes Oldsmobile bodies, now cover 140 acres and comprise 79 buildings. There are 4,005,027 square feet of floor area in the two plants, making Oldsmobile's production facilities among the largest in the automobile industry.

A NEW BATH FOR BABY? . . . NO!

It's An Electric Washer With A New Principle

Although the inventor does state that this washer was made to wash clothes, not babies, it is still possible to place a baby in the tub, fill the washer with water, set the machine in full operation and then let the youngster splash around in it to his heart's content. It would be all fun, no discomfort and above all else, safe, as there are no moving parts in the washing compartment. The illustration merely explains how easy this new washing principle is on clothes

No Agitator!

The necessity for an agitator is done away with, just as the self-starter did away with cranking cars. Soap and water alone do the work. An aluminum pump (which does not come in contact with the clothes in any way) maintains a continuous circulation of hot suds water at high velocity.

The surging suds water pushes through the fabric, taking the dirt with it to the bottom of the tub. The clothes are alternately opened up and squeezed together in the turbulent suds water — not too much, not too little, just enough — to insure the finest type of washing. While the action is the most gentle known, the clothes come out absolutely clean — soft and fluffy — practically like new materials. Wear is reduced to the very minimum.

* WASHINGTON NEWSLETTER *
* By Congressman John Luecke *
* 11th Michigan District *
* * * * * * * * * * * *

Washington D. C., February 19, 1938

Michigan

The past and coming week may be termed Michigan Week in Congress. In the first place there is the hearing being held on the Parsons Bill which would permit a continued flow of 5,000 cubic feet of water per second for the use of the Illinois Drainage Canal. A Supreme Court order reduces the flow after January 1, 1939 to 1,500 feet. The Parsons Bill would circumvent that order and therein lies the fight. Michigan interests are battling the bill with all the forces they can marshal. The lake levels have fallen consistently during the past ten years and all are agreed that a continued flow of 5,000 CFS would jeopardize the whole area. What Illinois wants is the right to use an average over the year of 5,000 CFS, but wants to draw it only when the water in the lower Mississippi is low. It is said that means as much as 14,000 CFS would be diverted when Lake Michigan is the lowest. Army engineers have testified that with such a large amount being diverted the lake level would fall six inches. If that be true the situation is serious and there is no time to be lost in combating it.

In the second instance, a bill will come up Monday (Feb. 21) which will permit State compacts on the Great Lakes for the purpose of establishing uniform fishing laws and regulations. That means much to Michigan because the state has more coast line than any other state in the union, bar none, and its fishing industry means a livelihood to thousands of its citizens. The bill should pass as no apparent opposition has developed so far. It is sponsored by your congressman.

Michigan was injected again into national affairs when the increase in WPA funds was granted by Congress this week. The unemployment in the auto centers and storm conditions over the whole state were brought to the attention of the White House by every official of the state. Needless to say that had much to do with the President asking that funds be provided.

War Profits

Petitions are beginning to arrive from all parts of the state asking that such legislation be considered. Things were well on their way for such action when something happened in the committee which handles such legislation. The original Hill-Sheppard Bill was discarded and the new May bill put in its place. Now the May bill is an entirely new thing and no hearings have been held on it. In spite of that the chairman of the committee is making repeated attempts to bring it out. The original bill placed a 95% tax on war profits. But the May bill says—"war profits shall be a normal fair return". In addition to that the draft provision which was taken out of the Hill-Sheppard bill has been restored. That puts every labor organization against it, and it is doubtful whether or not such a bill can be passed. The President who asked for a "universal service" bill is said to be opposed to it as is.

Petitions

While on that subject it might be said that this is a petition Congress. Old timers say so. The latest to come to the Congressmen's desks is one bearing 5,500 signatures. It comes from Cincinnati and asks revision of the undistributed profits tax. The signatures are on six pages which are 2 feet 6 inches by 3 feet six inches.

War Talk

There is altogether too much war talk going on down here. Some fear that the result will be a war hysteria which can only end in war. Of course things are bad the world over. It is on fire in a number of places, and it may spread across the ocean. But why pour oil on the flames? The significant thing about the whole mess is that men who saw war are the ones who refuse to go along with the militarists. They say we are not afraid of a scrap and we don't think the American people are. But why look for a fight? At the hearings on the naval expansion bill the percentage for and against is about even. Significant, however, is the fact that old army generals and navy admirals are opposed to arming to the teeth as if for war. With our present navy and 74 ships building at this time these old timers say we are safe from attack.

A Titled Gold Digger Hits the Top

An article in The American Weekly with the February 27 issue of The Detroit Sunday Times, will discuss the engagement of a titled young woman to a European prince—a rich and proud bachelor — showing how much she has learned since she roped in the grandson of an American multi-millionaire.

American naval bands off the Chinese coast should strike up "We're Going Home to Dinah Moore!" — and do just that.

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT

Leading Causes of Death in Charlevoix County

Falling desth rates, major attacks upon syphilis, tuberculosis and pneumonia, increased health protection for mothers and children, enactment of progressive health legislation and the extension of health services into rural areas of the state have made 1937 one of the most significant milestones in the 65-year history of the Michigan Department of Health.

The general death rate, the infant mortality rate and the maternal mortality rate—all accepted indices of the state of our health—have declined over the past year. Practically every one of the ten major causes of death either remained statlonery or showed definite decreases throughout Michigan.

Deaths from heart disease, cancer, apoplexy, nephritis, accidental deaths (excluding automobile accidents), diabetes, pneumonia, suicides, typhoid fever, and diarrhea and enteritis declined in 1937 throughout the state of Michigan. Deaths due to automobile accidents showed the greatest single increase—the 1937 toll will run well over 2,100 in our state compared with 1,913 in 1936.

This past year marked the beginning of Michigan's peace-time war against the scourge of syphilis. A state tuberculosis control program has also been inaugurnted during the past year and plans have been developed for the prevention of pneumonia deaths. The new $250,000 laboratory of the State Department of Health, dedicated in 1937, made possible increased diagnostic services to local health departments and physicians. All these contributing measures have helped to reduce mortality and make the world safer for all.

Within our own district composed of the counties of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego, our tentative figures, based on the birth and death certificates received in the office at Charlevoix, we find the infant mortality for 1937 was 58, compared with 57.6 in 1937. Our maternal mortality rate for 1937 was 3.1 compared with 0.9 for 1936.

The ten leading causes of death for Charlevoix county were as follows:

Heart disease	59
Apoplexy	20
Cancer	20
Violent and accidental	16
Pneumonia	12
Nephritis	9
Tuberculosis	5
Diabetes	5
Premature birth	5
Other dis. of circulatory system	1

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SOCIETY

Sunday morning service 10:45.

Sunday school, 12 o'clock.

Meets first Wednesday evening each month at 7:45 p. m.

Reading room open Saturday, 5 to 5 p. m.

We cordially invite the public to our service and readiag room.

"Christ Jesus" will be the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, February 27.

The Golden Text, from II Corinthians 4:5, is "We preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus the Lord; nnd ourselves your servants for Jesus' snke."

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Matthew 9:35): "And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every sickness and every disease among the people."

Correlative passnges to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 131): "The mission of Jesus confirmed prophecy, and explained the so-cnlled miracles of olden time as natural demonstrations of the divine power, demonstrations which were not understood."

Callahan's Potatoes

Grading and merchandising of surplus foodstuffs would put Michigan produce on a parity with outstate produce.

The third and final plank—utilize newspaper advertising to create mass consumption—is yet to be added.

A large part of the Michigan surplus stocks could be sold in Michigan through a cooperative advertising campaign whereby the growers would offer allowances to retailers for partial payment of newspaper advertising space.

And if business conditions improve so that the state might afford to make a modest annual appropriation to match the funds of growers, each $1 of public funds could be pyramided easily into $4 worth of advertising benefits. Growers would have better prices. And, instead of feeding foodstuffs to animals, growers would realize a fair profit through sale of surplus stocks to consumers.

Michigan's A-1 advocate of the "Advertise Michigan foodstuffs in Michigan" is State Senator Miles Callahan of Reed City. Callahan knows his potatoes!

Lumbermen Happy

Michigan is still an important lumber state, and lumbermen are jubilant over 1938 prospects.

Passage by congress of the new home building act — whereby $600 down will finance a $0,000 home with monthly payments of less than $33—has provided the silver lining.

The Michigan Building and Loan league estimates that a total of fourteen millions of dollars are available immediately to Michigan citizens for home construction in 1938.

This amount represents the combined cash of the 75 associations plus their credit from the federal home loan bank system with which most associations are affiliated.

According to Grant H. Longnecker, executive secretary, "These funds are available to responsible persons who are interested in huying, building, repairing or remodeling residential property."

No wonder the lumbermen are optimistic.

With clearing of the present industrial clouds, Michigan will witness a marked improvement in the building trades and supply business field.

No Special Session?

Like the famed "off agin, on agin, Finnigan" report of a railroad wreck is the last-minute word in Lansing that the much-tooted special session of the legislature is not going to be held after all.

Two weeks ago it was a sure bet that legislators would be summoned to appropriate additional funds for unemployment relief.

Resourceful budget workers convinced the governor that upwards of $3,000,000 could be obtained by requiring liquor firms to store goods in state warehouses for sale to the state "if and when needed". This system is used in Ohio. It would automatically solve the problem of putting millions of dollars of state funds into liquor stocks in anticipation that the public may buy them.

United States Senator Prentiss Brown counseled the governor publicly not to take the chances of a legislative battle this year.

If the unemployed can be fed and housed, there is little likelihood of a special session in Lansing. As Homer Martin of the UAW put it recently at Flint, "we want relief and we don't care where we get it."

Presidential Hopes

The importance of Michigan in the 1940 presidential campaign may be deducted from the fact that John Hamilton, republican national chairman, chose Grand Rapids for a Lincoln Day address and that President Franklin D. Roosevelt will visit Michigan next September.

Senator Vandenberg of Grand Rapids is "most popularly" mentioned for GOP nomination, according to the American Institute of Public Opinion — the service that accurately forecast Roosevelt's re-election in 1932.

Governor Frank Murphy is still in the first ten favored candidates for the democratic nomination as the successor of President Roosevelt. Murphy's 1938 hurdle comes next fall. After that—well, who knows?

Used Car Problem

Convinced that automobile factories cannot hum with activity again until the used car jam is broken, manufacturers and dealers are planning a "super bargain sale" this spring.

Prices will be cut to the well-known rock bottom, while dealers center attentions on improved reconditioning methods.

The used car business is a two billion dollar industry.

The Petroleum Institute estimated recently that of the 29,000,000 automobile owners in this country, 10,000,000 of them had never owned a new car.

For every new car a dealer sells, he receives a used car.

It is an economic cycle that functions just a slong as there is a market for used automobiles. When the market jams, then the backlog starts that ends in shutdown of automobila factories.

The used car industry is more important to Michigan than to any other state in the country. Remember, one of every six persons owe their livelihood in America to the automotive industry and its many ramifications. Verily, Michigan is on the national map in heavy black letters.

What Every Driver Must Know

REPORTING ACCIDENTS

Accident reporting is very important to safety agencies because it helps them plan the never-ending war against death on the highway. The law is explained here because you may be asked about it when applying for your next driver's license, and because it is fundamental information for every motorist.

A driver involved in an accident resulting in death, injury, or property damage, must stop, give his name, address, vehicle registration number, and show his driver's license. If death or injury has resulted, he must be of whatever help he can to the victims. All accidents involving injury or death or such damage to a vehicle that it cannot be driven away under its own power, must be reported to the most convenient police station. The report should be made immediately but in any case, it must be reported within 48 hours.

A booklet entitled "The Japanese Way," a photographic record of Japan's destruction of civilian life and property in China since July 7, 1937, is brought to this writer's desk, released by the Trans-Pacific News Service.

Its pictorial contents reveals the most revolting views of the outrages and atrocities wrought by Japan among the Chinese people by the use of modern engines of destruction, that one could imagine. Babies mangled beyond recognition by bombs. Little children, their parents killed in aerial raids, sitting in the ruins of their homes. Civilians lying dead in the streets by the hundreds. Words cannot express the horrifying scenes.

In conclusion, the folders, under the caption of "It Can Be Stopped!" quotes the following from the text of a letter of former Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, published in The New York Times on October 7, 1937:

"Americans are shocked and outraged at what is taking place in the Far East. But to many of them it presents merely a confused picture of distant horrors with which they think we have no necessary connection and to which they can close their eyes and turn their backs in the belief that we owe no duty except to keep out of it and forget it.

"Our American people are aroused and angry at the callous brutality of the Japanese. There is apparently no difference of opinion in their minds as to the merits of the controversy. Their abhorrence of injustice and oppression causes them immediately and universally to sympathize with China, but they do not see how anything can be done about it.

"In Japan's tottering financial condition she is able to make purchases of raw material for her guns and ammunition only by selling enough of her own products to obtain the requisite foreign exchange to pay for her purchases.

"We need a factory to keep the people employed, but we want a factory that is able to stand on its own feet, and we are making every effort to secure one. But we also owe our living to the resort business and we must get together and boost. We can well afford to have both resort and factory.

As an example of cooperation I would like to tell of the fine help given me by Hubert McCann, assistant manager of the Hotel Sinton in Cincinnati. He arranged for many fine meetings, and a radio broadcast. Mr. McCann did not have to do this, but he believes in Charlevoix and knows that we are trying to keep Charlevoix before the people. He put forth every effort to help us, and I believe the citizens of Charlevoix owe Mr. McCann a big vote of thanks for his interest and fine spirit of cooperation."

LOCAL DISTRIBUTOR FORESEES GOOD YEAR

Falconer Returns from Kelvinator Field Meeting in Detroit

With the forecast that 1938 will be a good selling year for commercial refrigeration, automatic heating equipment, liquid cooling and commercial and residential air conditioning Ivon J. Falconer of Radio-Electric Appliance Co., returned Friday, February 18 from the second annual commercial field meeting of Kelvinator Division, Nash-Kelvinator Corporation held in Detroit, February 16.

The meeting which Mr. Falconer attended was held to acquaint Kelvinator commercial distributors in this region with the company's sales program for the coming year and the 1938 commercial products. It was addressed by J. A. Harlan, manager of the Kelvinator commercial division of Nash-Kelvinator Corporation and by other commercial executives of the firm in Detroit.

Mr. Falconer was particularly enthusiastic regarding Kelvinator 1938 commercial sales plans which will be based on effective utilization of a careful and detailed business census now being conducted by the distributor in each selling area.

"All of us who attended the meeting in Detroit are agreed that 1938 will be a good selling year for commercial refrigeration, liquid cooling, automatic heating and commercial and residential air conditioning," said Mr. Falconer upon his return. "As shown by the Kelvinator business survey now being made in each selling area the market potentialities for these products are very large, and the economy, efficiency, health, and comfort values thereof are more widely recognized today than ever before.

"Industrialists, retailers and home owners are keenly alive to the necessity of having the most up-to-date equipment possible to increase efficiency, attract consumers and avoid costly obsolescence. Kelvinator with its comprehensive line of products and a highly efficient selling plan is putting itself in position to reap its full share of the business in these great markets."

PREPARING TOWNSHIP SOIL MAPS IN COUNTY

Reveal Best Farm Areas and Areas Not Suited to Agriculture

(By R. C. Mellencamp)

During the past week five township soil maps have been completed. In each township the supervisor, members of the soil conservation program and others who are closely connected with agriculture have met together and assisted the county agent in making a decision relative to the various farming areas.

The results are indeed very gratifying. It is surprising to note that when townships are merged together that the best farming areas tie together very nicely. Also on the map is indicated farm areas, that should not be farmed, areas that might be cleared to good advantage and areas that we recommend should always keep out of farms.

When each township is completed, for the first time, we can prepare a county map, which will guide all efforts in perfecting an agricultural program, that will be of most benefit to the entire county. Within the next ten days, the County Land Planning Committee will meet and discuss a long time agricultural program for the county. This map will be of great value to the committee as they can then make a more accurate decision in regard to the farming areas in the county.

MASONS SCORE VICTORY IN CRIBBAGE

Halt Three Week Losing Streak With 481 Points Win Over Odd Fellows

—Staging a come-back after losing for three consecutive weeks, the Masons defeated the Odd Fellows by 481 points in Monday night's contest of the winter cribbage series.

The series, with two more contests to be played, appears to be anyone's. The Masonic victory left the Odd Fellows leading by 721 points, which, in view of past results, is not a safe margin.

Thirteen tables played Monday night. Team scores gave the Masons 23,588 points to 23,107 for the Odd Fellows. The winners were led by William Mayne's high card of 956, one point less than the score turned in by John Geer, the Odd Fellow leader.

The series continues Monday evening, March 7, at the Masonic temple.

Maybe after a while it will seem necessary or advisable to hold meetings to consider whether America should, in defense of the national honor, start out to wallow in war and be bathed in blood. We suggest that the preliminary meetings be held in the various government hospitals, where some of the by-products of military glory can be seen at first hand.

INDUSTRY IS USING MICHIGAN PRODUCE

Growers Are Given Boost Through Use of Potato Flour

Cooperating with the aim of the state Farm Chemurgic council, an organization promoting the policy of "Let agriculture produce that which industry can use", Michigan Bakeries, Inc. is furthering buyer-appreciation of home-grown products upon bringing out a new loaf of "Michigan" potato bread.

This concern, the largest producers of bread and rolls in the state, is calling consumers' attention to the value and high quality of flour made from Michigan potatoes, supporting its long established policy of purchasing Michigan products such as potatoes, salt, Northern Michigan cherries, beet sugar, honey, bran, and others.

A definite program is in progress to aid the state growers. Field representatives of the Michigan Agricultural department have met with the potato growers of the state, urging them to grade, wash, and improve the appearance of potatoes to promote buyer interest.

Every Michigan housewife knows that Michigan potatoes are unexcelled. Northern Michigan's sandy soil particularly favors the potato raiser and makes possible the distinctive potato flavor. Michigan is alive to the value of the further sale of its own potatoes and forward-thinking manufacturers are helping producers, distributors, and processors by broadening this sale in many lines.

Michigan Bakeries' own bakery laboratory, the only one in Michigan and reputedly the most complete in the country, has made investigation of all potato flours and subscribes to "Michigan potato flour ranks highest". It is revealed that to one pound of potato flour, there are five pounds of cleaned and peeled potatoes used.

Roger Brandenburg, general baking superintendent of all plants of Michigan Bakeries, Inc., says: "In my long experience abroad and in this country in supervising the baking of highest grade bakery products, Michigan potato flour keeps the loaf moist and fresh and gives the bread a most delicious flavor."

BEGIN PLANS FOR TROUT FESTIVAL IN MICHIGAN

Plans for the 1938 Trout Festival at Kalkaska are moving along rapidly and the biggest celebration ever is expected to be held for the opening of the season. With the feud between the old died-in-the-wool May 1 openers and the new breed of "last Saturday in April" openers as close to calendar settlement as possible it is expected that both factions will cooperate to make the event a success. This year the last Saturday in April also is the last day of the month.

RECEIVE MANY PROTESTS ON TAX LISTS

NON-DELINQUENTS ARE FINDING PROPERTY LISTED

Newspaper and County Treasurer Are Not at Fault — List Furnished by Auditor General

A number of telephone calls have been received by the Courier from property owners whose property is listed for sale in the annual tax sale but who have paid their taxes and have their receipts to prove it.

Auditor General George T. Gundry warned of this condition two weeks ago when he explained that the machinery for preparing the tax sales for publication was so cumbersome and such a long process that property, on which the taxes have been paid, was sure to be listed for sale.

County Treasurer Lillis M. Flanders reports that taxes have been paid on hundreds of descriptions which are advertised for sale. The state started collecting the information on which it is basing its tax sale months ago, Miss Flanders explained. Since then property owners have paid up their taxes hut the description is published on the list of property for sale for taxes.

"If those who have their tax receipts are at all in doubt about the atatus of their property they may hring their receipts to my office and we will check up," Miss Flanders explained.

A number of injured persons are blaming the Courier for their property being listed. The delinquent tax list is furnished the Courier by the auditor general's department and is a paid advertisement. The Courier has no method of checking on the paid or unpaid taxes and would have no authority to make corrections if it could, any more than it would have authority to change any advertising copy furnished it, although thoroughly in sympathy with those who have paid their taxes but yet find their property listed for sale.

PYTHIAN PROGRAM WAS FINE ENTERTAINMENT

Comedy and Minstrel Show Monday Night Made a Big "Hit"

A large attendance received a generous portion of entertainment at the Pythian benefit program Monday evening at the school gymnasium.

Selections by the city band opened the evening's hill and were followed by a 3-act comedy, "Rube and Ilis Ma," which justifiod advance publicity as a portrayal uf rural wit at its bast.

Speaking in the language of most apectators, the minstrel show was a "scream." The skit was a take-off on the city council in a regular sossion and, whlle recognizing the spirit of fun intended, it is with some hesitation that the correctness of detail ia montioned. The pre-billing of the minstrel as a hit of localized humor could not have been truer.

On the more serious side, scholarship awards were presented twenty-five students of Charlevoix public schools in recognition of attainment for two consecutive semesters. In addition to those students named last week, Louise Young, a sophomore, received a medul.

PETOSKEY MAYOR KIWANIS SPEAKER TUESDAY EVENING

Dr. B. H. VanLeuven, mayor of Petoskey, was the guest speaker at Tuesday evening's meeting of the Kiwanis Club. Dr. VanLeuven gave a very interesting talk on medicine and its use.

THIS WEEK'S WEATHER

Concluding a week of moderate weather, March smiled in like the meekest sort of lamh Monday.

The incident may or may not cause some concern. March 30 will tell the story despite the old superstition that if "March comes in like a lamb it will go out like a lion," or vice vorsa.

STREETS READY FOR SPRING'S BREAK-UP

Gutters and Catch Basins Cleared in Anticipation of Heavy Thaw

The city counell and street department, particularly, is deserving of commendution for the efficiency and expediency of snow removul the past winter.

Casual observation will show Charlevoix business streets to be in excellent shape for the anticipated spring break-up. Gutters and catch basins have heen cleared and the depth of snow kept down to a minimum in most instances.

In view of the heavy storms of the present winter, the item of snow removal has been a costly one. The streets would be hardly cleared after one storm when another would occur, requiring the work he done over several times. Cost of this work has probably been the highest in many years, hut so have snow storms been more frequent.

SPRING PRIMARY ELECTION MONDAY

TWO REPUBLICAN CONTESTS BEFORE VOTERS

Arthur Bergeon, Robert Bridge Seek Nomination for Mayor — 3-Way Contest for Alderman 2nd Ward

Charlevoix electors will make their choice of Republican candidates for city and ward officos at the polls of the annual spring primary election next Monday, March 7th.

Two contests exist in comparison with five a yoar ago. Leading in interest is the mayoralty contest between Arthur Bergeon, incumbent, seeking his third consecutive term, and Robert Bridge, local banker and active participant in civic affairs over a long period of years. Mr. Bridge has served as a member of the city council.

The other contest is a three-way scrap for alderman of the second ward hotween E. J. Kibbe, incumbent, Charles Heise and Lewis Brant, new-comers in city politics.

CHARLEVOIX WINS CONFERENCE TITLE

DEFEATED BOYNE CITY BY 33 TO 18 SCORE IN FINAL PRE-TOURNAMENT GAME FRIDAY

Complete One of Most Successful Basketball Seasons on Record—Won Thirteen Games, Scoring 540 Points to 205 for Opponents—Reserve Record Good

Charlevoix's Red Rayders clinched the Little Eight cluss C conference title and completed one of the most successful hasketball seusons on record here Friday night with a 33 to 18 victory over Boyne City.

Thirteen victories in fourteen starts are recorded. They won 11 conference games, two non-conference tilts. The only blot on their record is a 20 to 18 defeat by the alumni.

Boyne's reserves downed Charlevoix's reserves for the second time Friday night by a 25 to 20 score in a close, interesting contest. The reserves completed their season with seven victories in 11 starts.

Charlevoix's second victory over Boyne was typical of their season's performance. They started slow and were tied 9-all at the quarter. Both teams were stressing defense and playing cautious. The Raydors moved into what proved an insurmountable lead in the second quarter, scoring 8 points while holding Boyne without a count. Their defense had Boyne completely bottled up. The Ruyders added 10 points in the third period and five more in the fourth. Boyne gained nine points in the same periods.

After start of the second period the result was never in doubt. The Rayders made good on most of their opportunities to score and their defense had Boyne completely stopped.

Carey led the Rayder attack. He scored 16 points, one less than half the total. Brown and Gallagher netted six points apiece and Richard Bergmann accounted for the other three. Hosegood was high for Boyne with seven points, followed by Lockman with five, Schaeffer with four, Kanipe and Hunsler with one each.

Boyne's roserves scored their second victory over Charlevoix's reserves in the preliminary. The contest was close in every period and it was not until the fourth that Boyne pulled away. The quarter count was 8 to 7 for Charlevoix. The county was even, 10-all at the half. Four points wore scored in the third period, all by Charlevoix, with Bissell sinking one in Boyne's basket for the two points credited them. Such incidents happen—but seldom. Boyne pulled away in the fourth quarter, showing a better brand of team play than Charlovoix's reserves could handle.

Coach Abe Cohen of East Jordan, and Rohert Cornell of Petoskey, handled the varsity and reserve contosts as officials. The attondance was ostimated at 1,300 persons, which foll somewhat short of last yoar's record turn-out of an estimated 1,500.

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

Almost fantastic and preposterous in its scope is Representative Wright Patman's newest anti-chain store creation, a house bill which he introduced last week at Washington, D. C., and which is pending today before the house ways and means committee.

Patman's measure, if enacted into law, would close in three years' time over 6,000 chain stores in Michigan.

To give you an ideu how the plan would work, the Patman bill would authorize federal taxes which at the end of three years would impose a burden of $35,500 tax for each Great Atlantic & Pacific company store in the United States. Each J. C. Penney store would be asked to pay a tax of $11,118 per store per year—an amount which uppears to be incredible, utterly fantastic and not having a Chinaman's chance of getting serious legislative consideration.

Fewer Chain Stores

Patman's bill is obviously aimed at the suppression of all chain stores, and it forbids leasing to local man-

What Every Driver Must Know

OVERTAKING AND PASSING

A new Michigan drivers' license law requires each motorist to pass a test on highway regulations and other subjects when applying for a permit. Here is an explanation of the overtaking and passing rules, just in case the examiner asks you.

You may overtake and pass another vehicle only when it is safe. If you are in the open country, sound your horn first. The overtaken driver must move to the right and not increase speed. Be sure you have an ample clear distance ahead, free of oncoming traffic. Don't pass on curves or hills or at rail and road intersections, unless an officer tells you to. Another safety rule in this connection includes staying in line when there is a string of cars and not cutting in and out. Drivers on three and four lane highways must keep to the lanes on the extreme right, except when passing.

Johnnie Gibbard has had to suspend wood-cutting operations east of town for a time on account of engine trouble. He was a business caller at East Jordan last week. He said he knew what the roads were like, for he led a horse all the way home from there.

Jordan had four in attendance at Sunday school last Sunday, Green River 18 (25 Sunday before), and Bush school 10. They are doing pretty well to keep the Sunday schools going, as most of Rev. Weaver's Sunday schools are closed for the winter.

Garret Stocls of Atwood have been moving part of their house, and the new basement has been put in by Glen Bush of east of Bellaire. This has been quite an improvement for Mr. Stocls, and has taken since last October. Mrs. Arthur Stocls is a niece of Glen Bush.

At Jordan, Mrs. Frank Justice, Mrs. Edd Hostler, Mrs. Carl Brown, Claude Sweet, a little boy, and Raymond Gould have all been ill the past week. Mrs. Crit White, Bricker neighborhood, we are sorry to hear, is very ill, and Mrs. Ruby Bricker fell and broke her arm. At Green River, Miss Irma Bradley has been quite ill and had to miss school at Alba.

Glad to hear that Rev. W. P. Mosher of Bellaire is able to be around again. He was down town Saturday. He says he still calls the girls Mary and Martha, and the boys Peter and John, but the girls dress so much like boys nowadays that he sometimes calls them Peter and John too. Mr. and Mrs. Mosher attended church Sunday. He has written fine synopsises of the Book of Revelations, the New Testament.

NEW FARM SOIL ACT HAS MANY NEW PHASES

Combines Price Regulation With Conservetion of Soil

Linking together phases of soil conservation and an attempt to insure normal production and marketing of cereals and livestock for meat is the goal of the 1938 federal farm act in which more than 100,000 Michigan farmers are expected to participate.

Possibility of attaining payment from the government of several million dollars is one feature. M. A. Doan, Lansing, chairman of the Michigan agricultural conservation committee, sees far more benefits than the dollars and cents which farmers may get in government checks.

"Recent heavy rains and floods in Michigan have been proof of the value of better farming methods," Doan asserts.

"Fields which were planted last fall with recommended winter cover crops lost far less topsoil than open stubble of corn fields or bare fields from which crops were harvested last fall. Michigan farmers largely have been good farmers because of the livestock and dairy business. The soil conservation work is convincing other types of farmers as well."

Provisions of the new federal farm act for 1938 include seeking an ever normal granary of food and feed grain supplies. Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, sees in the plan the goal of aiding both consumers and farmers in buying or selling food at fair prices. The plan also carries on the stimulation of soil conservation for more efficient production now and for posterity.

County and local committees throughout the state are to be furnished information to pass along to individual farmers as soon as additional details of the plan are approved.

Another thrilling story by F. Britten Austin appears in This Week, the colorgravure magazine with Sunday's Detroit News. Watch for this gripping yarn entitled, "Half an Hour—London".

CAMPAIGN STARTED ON RADIO STATION

REV. W. H. MORFORD, GAYLORD, SPONSORS PROJECT

Stetion Loceted et Geylord Would Serve Northern Pert of the Lower Peninsule

A radio station to serve the northern part of the Lower Peninsula is contemplated as a memorial to Rev. Seth Reed, pioneer Michigaa preacher who was one of the founders of the Bay View Association.

Under plans advanced by the directors of the Seth Reed Memorial Radio Parish project the station would be located in Gaylord with remote control contacts at Petoskey, Traverse City, Cheboygan, Alpena and Grayling.

The Rev. William H. Morford is serving as manager of the project which is still in the formative stage. Pledges are being taken toward the estimated $20,000 construction costs. Time on the air will be allocated by the station according to the amounts pledged by each community, the Rev. Mr. Morford declared.

"The proposed station will be non-profit in nature, making it possible to operate it at a low cost," the Rev. Mr. Morford said. "It will combine two distinct types of radio work and will be under the direction of the churches of Northern Michigan. All churches desiring to use time will be allotted program space according to a set of rules. Combined with the religious aspect is the commercial side of the project through which the facilities of the station will be open to a reasonable amount of selected advertising. Voluntary contributions plus revenue from commercial programs will pay the costs of operation.

"The broadcasts will be about equally divided among programs presenting religious, commercial educational and entertaining features. The station will offer a radio outlet for the talent of Northern Michigan in churches, schools and civic groups.

"Particularly we want to bring the ball games each summer. We believe the station would be performing a genuine public service because some visitors have been known to leave for the south where radio reception is better.

"Some 300,000 persons live in the area to be covered by the station and many more are here each summer. The programs will be of great value to shut-ins, hospital patients and everyone else. Special broadcasts for children, farmers, young people and other groups will be included."

The Rev. Seth Reed was born in Hartwick county, New York, in 1823, and died in Flint in 1924. Among the many interesting accomplishments of his life was his pioneering in setting up the camp meeting at Bay View which later became the Bay View Association. He was the first secretary of the group. In 1898 he was appointed to Gaylord where he mobilized his congregation and built a new church, the building in which it is planned to locate the radio studios.

Hilerious Role in "Nothing Secred" —Recells Early Comedy Treining of Carole Lomberd

Take a Huratio Alger story and apply it to Hollywood. Make a lovely blonde the heroine in place of the poor-but-honest boy. — There you have the tale of Carole Lombard's rise to stardom. In other words, film directors did not swoon with joy, nor did producers stand in line outside the Lombard threshold, when she first turned her attention to motion pictures.

The story of Carole Lombard tells of a girl who started in comedy ranks, rose to bits, became a leading woman and then blossomed into stardom. It was a steady rise to the top, based on a merit which she proved step by step, until today finds her under three-year contract to David O. Selznick, for whom she made the technicolor picture, "Nothing Sacred," co-starring Fredric March directed by William A. Wellman, which comes Saturday, March 5, to the Palace theatre.

CHAPTER VI

In the Valley of Comondu, an oasis in the barren heart of Baja California, La Gobernadora was entertained at Mission Sao Jose de Comondu, beloved of all travelers, soldiers and priests, who mode the dreary trip up and down the peninsula. For days they rested there, refreshed by the sparkling waters of an obundant stream, and by figs, pomegranates, peaches and dates beneath the clashing fronds of giant palms.

There was a halt at Santa Rosalia de Mulege, on the Vermillion sea, where there was another old stone mission and fruitful gardens. From there the cavalcade traveled over a horrible wilderness well-named Tierra del Infierno, Hell country, which quaked constantly as they traversed its barrenness.

By a broad flat camino, built many years before by Jesuit missionaries who had urged hundreds of Indian neophytes to the colosaal task by flogging them when they lagged, they traveled to the Mission San Ignacio, which stood in a fertile arroyo that opened in a borren mesa.

Leaving there with water-skins and easks bulging for the desert travel ahead, they traveled northward, skirting the eastern edge of the Desert of Vizcaino, a treacherous terrain.

At Mission Santa Gertrudis, in a great mountain-girt amphitheater, all gave thanks that they had arrived in safety, though their water-skins were lean and dry.

At Santa Gertrudis, Eulalia heard first rumors of the approach of her husband. Indians coming from the north reported fires that burned by night, and a party of horsemen who traveled swiftly by day.

Lo Gobernadora still rode silently, uncomploiningly. It was only her pride that kept her from flinging herself from her horse on to the ground, and screaming until the tension that was holding her quivering nerves shattered in a satisfying hysteria. At night, in her tent or by the campfire, she was subject to changing moods; sometimes gloomy, silent, brooding, sometimes bright with febrile gaiety.

Angustias was watching her mistress doubtfully, gauging her temper, her experienced weather eye reading infallible signs that her lady's nerves were frayed to a breaking point, and that a hurricane was due to break.

"If she can only wait until we meet Don Pedro," she prayed. "She needs her husband at a time like this."

The hurricane arrived before the Governor.

One evening, just before nightfall, the storm broke.

They had been traveling for days among the lofty Calmalli mountains that stretch along the waist, or narrowest part of the peninsula.

Eulalia, shivering as night came on, for now the nights were as cold as the days were hot, rode beside little Pedro. Behind came Angustias, cuddling her monkey as they both dozed. At the head of the van rode the Capitan. Little Pedro leaned closer to his mother and whispered.

Eulalia frowned. "On my soul, child! We can not stop now! Control yourself."

But the child would not be controlled. He stopped his burro, threw the reins toward Angustias, and disappeared in the brush.

Angustias, startled from her nap, made a lunge at the reins, missed them and brought her hand sharply against Chichi's face. The terrified monkey, in turn awakened rudely from his little snoozing, leaped straight for Pedro's burro, and the burro bolted off the trail.

"Chichi!" screamed Angustias, trying to get from her clumsy sidesaddle. "Chichi! Baby!"

But the little burro and his detested frightened burden went careening away in the dusk.

Capitan Canete wheeled to Eulalia's side, just as Angustias slipped on to the dusty trail, screaming and crying.

"My Lady!" exclaimed the Capitan. "What is the matter?"

But Eulalia only pointed after her fleeing companion.

"Will you help her?" she asked, struggling for control. "Will you help her to catch that fool little Chichi? He has eloped with Pedro's burro!"

"Oh, damn that ape, and damn that ass! Oh, pardon me, Senora—but I—are you all right, my Lady?"

"Yes, yes, of course. Oh, here she comes!"

Out of the dusk came Angustias, trying to hold the monkey which struggled and clawed in furious panic. It had pulled the woman's gray hair in tatters over her face, and she looked like a witch emerging from the night.

"He doesn't know me! He is mad from fright! Oh, my little darling, my sugar-plum, you are safe in your mother's arms. There, there!"

The Capitan exploded.

"By the holy bones of Saint Bartholomew, woman! Why didn't you get the burro? Here you," to an Indian, "fetch back that animal."

Grinning, the Indian loped away. He hated and feared Chichi as the rest of the natives did.

The Capitan heaved a sigh.

"Well," he said, "are we all—"

But suddenly a piercing shriek came from somewhere, a long high wail that ended in, "Ma-a-a-ama!"

Eulalia slipped from her jennet.

"Pedro, Pedro! What is it! My God—"

Before the Capitan could reach her, she had met the child and had him clasped in her arms.

"Mama, look! Look, mama! Al, ail I am hurt! Ai, ai, ai!"

"What has happened? What is it? Do no cry, speak to me!"

He held out his hands to her.

"Look, cactus! All the needles ran in me! Ouch, ai, oi, ai!"

The Capitan took the child from his mother and set him on his own knee as he squatted on the trail.

"Yes, yes. What happened?"

"I was back there—in the bushes—a big black something came after me and I ran, and stumbled into the cholla—ouch, ouch!"

His face and arms were swelling from the hundreds of needles that had penetrated his skin, stinging him to agony as he strove to scratch them out. Canete took firm hold of his wrists.

"Don't scratch! Dona Angustias, let down your hair!"

"But—why?" she stammered.

"Because you must help this suffering child. Only long hair will draw out cactus thorns. Quickly!"

But young Pedro was already enveloped in a flood of black tresses as his mother's hair tumbled about him, soothing his stings, and drawing, by some strange attraction, the needles from his flesh.

At last his cries dropped to sobs, and his sobs to whimpers. Then he snivcled softly in his mother's arms.

"Now, my brave little man, will you smile at Mother? Poor darling, poor little soldier!"

"I want a drink of water," whimpered Pedro.

"He wants a drink of water," said Eulalia to Angustias.

"He wants a drink of water," said Angustias to the Capitan.

"He wants a—but, by my life, there is no water!"

"No water?" exploded Eulalia.

"No water, Senora. But we are not far from the Spring of Santa Marita. Come. Let us get on our way before it grows darker. Come, my Lady."

Eulalia grew very still. Canete leaned over her and touched her arm to assist her to arise.

"Don't touch me," she said dangerously.

"But, my Lady, allow me—"

"Keep your hands off me, sir! I will not move."

"But, Senora, see, it is night! We must go on. We must progress!"

"Progress! I have done nothing but progress for weeks—months! And I arrive nowhere! Now I will go no farther."

The Capitan gripped his hands.

"But we have no water here, no food—no provisions for the night! We can not stay here. Up, Senora, come, come! This is serious."

Eulalia settled herself firmly on the ground.

"Serious! I should say it was serious. No water—no food! Is that my fault? Is it my duty to see the skins and casks are filled? Did I send the provisions ahead so that we should be without food?"

She tossed her hair out of her eyes and glared at him.

"Look at me! Look at me! Dishevelled, dirty, hungry, thirsty, weary, and no place to lay my head! And it is your fault! Ah, wait until I tell his Excellency the Governor how you have treated me! Leading me into this, and offering no relief except riding more and more miles to some spring which no doubt will turn out to be a dry one! You are responsible!"

Canete's dignity was touched.

"Senora, it was certainly not I that suggested this trip. It is no pleasure jaunt to me, I assure you. It was only at the earnest solicitations of the Viceroy himself, in behalf of my friendship with your husband the Governor, that I undertook it."

"Nevertheless, you are responsible; you and the Viceroy—and the King himself!"

She clenched her hands and beat them on her breast.

"I wish his Excellency the Viceroy Mayorga, and his Majesty the King of Spain could be here, in my place. If they're so anxious to make California a colony, why don't they come here themselves? Let them have the dirt and heat and thirst and cactus and rattlesnakes! Would they want it then? Would they call Californio the brightest jewel in the diadem of Spain?"

She stomped her feet.

"No! No! They would say, as I do, 'My God, is this California? Let the Indians have it, or England, or whoever wants it!' That's what they would say! And yet they let me, a poor, defenseless woman sacrifice herself to make California a crown jewel!"

Her voice reached a hysterical pitch.

"California, Spain's brightest jewel! Her choicest possession!" she mimicked ironically. Then her voice broke.

"Spain's rotten egg!" she screamed, and leaned sobbing against her saddle.

By this time the whole cavalcade was milling around the spot.

Angustias stepped into the breach. She smoothed her mistress' hair, arranged a scarf over it, patted the heaving shoulders and whispered meaningless, affectionate, comforting words. Then she turned to Canete.

"I think you can help my lady to mount now," she said.

As the Capitan stooped to take the lady's foot in his hand he noticed the moonlight play a strange trick with Angustias' face. It almost seemed that she winked.

To make sure he gave the duena a lift into her own saddle.

"Thank you, sir," she said grimly. Then, "You are a gentleman, air, but you need a firmer hand."

OFFER MORE SHORT COURSES AT COLLEGE

Variety of Useful Occupations Included on M. S. C. Program

Another phase of what some persons term "the good old days" is disappearing in Michigan to the despair of farmers in the state who want to repair old buildings or construct new ones.

For there are practically no old time carpenters who know how to lay out timbers and put together rafters and spikes.

That is one of the problems leading the agricultural engineering department at Michigan State College to announce three one week short courses starting Monday, March 5, on the campus at East Lansing. One is in farm buildings, another in irrigation and drainage and a third in rural electrification.

Construction and use of laminated roundroof barns is to be a modern portion of the farm builders' and carpenters' course directed by C. H. Jefferson of the staff. Men attending will lay out, build and erect some of the new type rafters. Home construction will be a part of the study.

Fundamentals of irrigation and drainage will be offered in another course by O. E. Robey, member of the staff who returned recently after touring England and Europe for additional information. Actual field work in laying out grades and tile lines are to be included.

High line service offers problems in rural electrification that are to be pondered in another short course conducted by D. G. Ebinger, specialist in the department. Proper wiring and proper equipment will be discussed. Laboratory work will include work in wiring, handling and studying motors, grinders and other equipment. Sufficient additional time will permit those enrolling to study out some of their own farm electrification problems.

Tuberculosis kills more people between the ages of 15 and 25 than any other disease. In this age group it kills once and a half as many women as men, the Michigan Tuberculosis Association reported this week.

To REACH for the telephone and call a distant friend . . . just for old time's sake . . . is one of those small but thoughtful acts which keep friendship alive.
It disproves the cynical saying, "Out of sight, out of mind." It is the very hand of friendship reaching across the miles.
And it gives the person at the other end of the wire one of the pleasantest of all human emotions . . . the satisfaction of knowing that, although far away, he still lives in the heart of an old friend.

THINKING TOGETHER

Farm organizations are showing their great importnnce in these days.

If a farmer planted a field of grain, if the hired man ploughed it up and if the oldest boy decided that cows should be milked twice a week instead of twice a day, there would be no profit in farming.

Very much the same thing exists when farmers deal with their common problems.

Some say we should grow more.

Other farmers say that they will produce less.

There are scores of thories and what one does tends to undo the work of others.

The Farm Bureau Federation fulfills a great need when it brings farmers together to talk about their common problems. Such efforts create mutual understanding and bring about unified thought. While the farm problem is not solved and probably never will be solved as long as nature plays tricks with the weather, there is good progress towards some fundamentals.

That is very encouraging.

NO RELIEF WANTED

With so many demands for relief funds to tide over the unemployed factory workers, we were cheered by the efforts of one man to support himself and family. Recently when the automobile factory where he is employed cut his working hours so that his income was much too low to meet his living conditions, he didn't sit around on his off days and bemoan his fate or seek government aid. He did something about his bad brenk.

He went out nnd solicited some hot noon-day lunch business. His wife is a good cook, and together they prepare and distribute the most appetizing lunches for 25c. Together they make enough for food for the family with sometimes a few extra dollars. His small wages cover their other expenses and they are happy thnt their plnnning and efforts cnn tide them over this period.

NAVY BILL

The citizens of the U. S. are to be kept in the dark regarding the strength of the U. S. army and navy.

Congress is being asked to appropriate a huge armament fund to increase our navy. But the number of ships in the navy and the number to be constructed is to remain a secret to the people whn are paying the bill for their construction and maintenance.

Few of us stop to think that ships are built with certain adversaries in mind. Ships which are planned to cover long distances between fueling points differ in construction from those which nre merely defense ships for patrolling our nwn coastline or for short runs. Could there be any connection between the planned secrecy and the fact that we night discover who are expected adversaries will be—and possibly some of the other plans for war?

PLAN BROADCAST OF BOYNE SMELT "RUN"

Date of Annual Event Tentatively Scheduled for March 26th

Thousands of fishermen from all parts of the middle west will gather throughout the Boyne River valley late next month to participate in the big event of the year—the annual smelt run.

The run is scheduled tentatively for Mareh 26 this year by veteran fishermen. At thnt time the silvery fish will head upstream to their spawning grounds. The Boyne City Rotary Club will sponsor nll events in connection with the Smelt Festival.

F. O. Barden, chairman of the festival, snid conservation authorities had advised him that the smelt would run in record numbers this year. Barden said arrangements were being made to broadcast the affair.

DIESEL BIDS WILL BE RECEIVED ON MARCH 3

Special Council Session Thursday Night to Hear Proposals

Members of the city council will get an insight into the cost of a 500 k. w. diesel unit approved by electors as an extension to the electric light system when bids are opened at the council chambers Thursday night.

March 3rd was the deadline set for submission of bids. They will be publicly opened at 8 o'clock that evening. It is anticipated representatives of diesel manufaeturing concerns submitting bids will be present to extoll the merits of their product and, in view of the fnct, the meeting will be more or less a public hearing.

Final action on the purchase is expected to follow in a week or ten days after the council has been given an opportunity to carefully scrutinize the proposals.

The best way to 'make sure' about tuberculosis is by having the tuberculin test and diagnostic chest x-ray, according to the Michigan Tuberculosis Association.

Those who sny that this country can't be regimented have never observed the cheering section at a college football game.

COUNTY CHAIRMEN GET INSTRUCTIONS ON ROCK FOR CAIRN

Eighty-three county chairmen in the state-wide organization planning the testimonial cairn to be erected at Traverse City as a tribute to Hugh Gray, secretary of the West Michigan Tourist association, have just received a letter from Lee Barrett of Detroit, chairman of the testimonial committee, advising them of the enthusiastic interest in the plan throughout the state.

Gordon B. Todd has the letter as chairman for Charlevoix county.

Discussing the type of stone each county is to send for the testimonial cairn, Mr. Barrett writes: "It may be typical of your leading geological formations or of your leading industry. For instance, Wayne county probably will contribute a stainless steel plate, symbolic of the automobile industry, while Midland county people have indicated they will probably use Dowmetal."

Mr. Barrett quotes a message he has received from Chet Shafer, famous Three Rivers humorist who is a member of the general state committee: "The stone for St. Joe county ought to be a Sauer Kraut stone. I got one my dad used for 35 years and put it in a cutstone chimney. It should be easy to find another one among the Pennsylvania Dutch in The Knobs out west of town. It would be geologically characteristic —and gastronomicnlly, too.'"

CLAUDE MYERS FARM HOME NEAR IRONTON DESTROYED BY FIRE

The Claude Myers farm residence near Ironton on the east side was destroyed by fire, together with the household furnishings, about midnight Friday night.

It is said Mr. Myers was about to fill a gasoline lantern (or lamp) when it exploded, setting fire to the dwelling and burning Mr. Myers on both arms quite severely and about the face slightly. Two young men, sleeping upstnirs at the time, hnd some difficulty in getting out of the burning structure.

Mr. Myers was tnken to a hospital for treatment and is now able to be about again.

The East Jordan Fire Department responded to a call and assisted in keeping the blaze confined to the burning structure. — Charlevoix County Herald.

* SAVES 40 STEPS *
* IN COOKIE BAKING *
* * * * * * * * * * *

Forty steps saved in baking cookies because of better kitchen nrrangement have led to activity in four counties where home mnnngement extension specialists are conducting n series of lessons.

Whole families are finding that the steps saved even in cooky bnking are worth some effort. The old race track kitchen which meant wearing out both the floor and the homemaker is giving way to compact nrrangement nnd fewer steps for routine jobs.

Ingham, Wexford, Osceoln and Lake county groups nre working with Julia Pond, extension specialist in home management at Michigan State College.

Groups are making n game out of the experiments in various kitchens. In one county leaders averaged 40 steps for cooky making while the high county group averaged 110 steps.

Even the hateful job of washing dishes that drives some boys and girls to tears is yielding to science. Clearing a table, washing and putting awny the dishes wns accomplished in one home with 27 steps. In nnother it took 173 steps. Serving a meal from stove to table required 29 steps for some cooks but others took 51 for the same job in their homes.

"Most women will not bother to count '29-30-31' for these various jobs," says Miss Pond. "The figures show why a little study can save a lot of energy. Much of the work can be done even without expense.

"Some kitchens are being made into the last word in modern efficiency. Other kitchens simply are being made more efficient by rearranging, and even the menfolks are lending aid in constructing shelves and cupboards."

SPRING TRUCK LOAD LIMITS ARE IN FORCE

Highway Department Moves to Prevent Seasonal Damage

Annual load restrictions to protect Michigan highways against the depredations of the so-called spring break-up were clamped down upon the trunkline system this week by Commissioner Murray D. Van Wagoner.

The commissinner put into effect statutory provisions requiring reduced truck loads between March 1 and May 31. Truckers must reduce their loads 25 per cent on concrete pavements or pavements with a concrete base. On all other types of roads, the loads must be reduced 35 per cent.

As an aid to truck operators in observing the restrictions, the state highway department for the second year hns published a special map for their use during the restrictive period. Five types of highways are detailed on this map—concrete pavement and pavement with a concrete base; hard surface roads not having a concrete bnse; gravel roads; earth roads; and highways under construction.

For the first time, the map contains a table of maximum allowable truck axle loadings. The heaviest loads that are being permitted are 13,500 pounds compared with 18,000 pounds the rest of the year.

NATIONAL USED CAR CAMPAIGN UNDER WAY

Manufacturers Join in Effort to Rid Country of Surplus

A national drive to sweep the American automobile industry out of the current recession nnd stimulate American business generally was announced here today by Alvan Macauley, speaking for every American automobile manufacturer and the nation's 46,000 automobile dealers.

The campaign, to be known as "National Used Car Exchange Week" and scheduled for March 5 to 12, is an outgrowth of recent conferences at the White House between President Roosevelt and leaders of the automobile industry, Mr. Mncauley said. The President hns been advised of plans for the campaign, which is the first cooperative effort ever undertnken in which all American automobile manufacturers have taken part.

The campaign is timed at the outset of the spring selling season when both new and used cars usually begin to move in greatest volume, Mr. Macauley said. It is aimed primarily at stimulnting the disposnl of used car stocks now in dealer hands." Once this is nccomplished, a substantinl increase in car manufneturing schedules and employment of wage earners in the automobile factories is anticipnted.

FORMER OWNERS MAY BUY TAX TITLE LAND

Attorney General's Opinion Given on Property Sold For Taxes

A former owner, whose property has been sold to the state for delinqaent taxes, mny repurchase the property without assuming former liens against it, Attorney General Raymond W. Starr has ruled.

Starr wrote the opinion at the request of Rep. Etton R. Eaton, R., Plymouth.

"A former owner, as any other, may purchase property title to which has become absolute in the state, which formerly was owned by him," the opinion stated.

"Acquisition of absolute title by the state of land sold at the regular tax sale wipes out all prior taxes, liens and other incumberances, with the possible exception of unpaid taxes and assessment liens or city bids of any municipality collecting its own delinquent taxes for 1938 and 1939, levied before acquisition by the stnte," Starr ruled.

OLDSMOBILE STAGING NATION WIDE CONTEST

Thirty Olds Six Cars to Be Awarded Winners in Event

D. E. Ralston, general sales manager of Oldsmobile, today announced a nation-wide 30-day contest in which a car a day will be given to motorists who write the most interesting comments on their reactions to a trial drive in a 1938 Oldsmobile.

The contest, which extends from March 1 to March 30, inclusive, will be conducted through the 3,500 members of the national Oldsmobile dealer organization. It is being announced to the public nationally by a series of newspaper advertisements which will continue through the month of March. Any resident of the United States over 16 years old is eligible to enter.

SPRING FISHING RESTRICTIONS STARTED

All Michigan "Pike" Lakes Closed March 2 Until April 30th

Fishing ends this month in all inland lakes in Michigan though it is still permissable in non-trout streams or certain species, and in the Great Lakes and connecting waters.

Designated pike lakes in the lower peninsula were closed to all fishing March 2 and will remain closed until April 30. Designated pike lakes in the upper peninsula will be closed to all fishing from March 16 to May 14. Designated trout lakes will open to fishing April 30 but all other lakes will remain closed to all fishing from April 1 to June 24.

Bluegill, sunfish and warmouth bass are among those species which may not be taken after this month in any waters until June 25.

Northern pike, walleyed pike, muskellunge and yellow perch are this year protected by a closed season in all inland waters, corresponding with the closed season on designated pike lakes in the upper and lower peninsulas.

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 336): "Immortal man was and is God's image or idea, even the infinite expression of infinite Mind, and immortal man is coexistent and coeternal with that Mind."

NEW FARM ACT HAS BECOME EFFECTIVE

CONSERVATION PROGRAM EXTENDED BY CONGRESS

(By Norrine L. Porter)

The new farm act recently signed by the President extends the agricultural conservation program of the past two years and provides new methods for minimizing the fluctuations in marketing of corn and wheat and in the production of livestock:

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration administers the whole AAA farm program, including the programs under the new act, through the same county and local committee organizations that have administered previous Triple-A adjustment and conservation programs.

Triple-A farm programs under the act will include voluntary acreage allotments to farmers for corn and other soil-depleting crops. The act provides for mandatory loans upon corn and wheat at definite rates ranging from 52 to 75 per cent of parity. It includes marketing quotas which may be put into effect when supplies reach surplus levels. Before the quotas go into effect a referendum will be held and they will not be put into operation unless two-thirds of the producers voting favor their use.

The new act is entitled the Agricultural Adjustment Act of 1938. It is the outcome of nearly a year's discussion and effort by farm and congressional leaders to provide authority to stabilize supplies of farm commodities through an ever-normal granary program. It applies to corn, wheat, cotton, tobacco, and rice. It also extends and strengthens the Soil Conservation and Domestic Allotment Act of 1936.

It includes authorization of four research laboratories to find new uses and new markets for agricultural products and authorizes the Secretary of Agriculture to appear before the Interstate Commerce Commission on freight rate hearings.

The corn and wheat provisions aim to establish ever-normal granary reserves with excess supplies held off the market in large production years for use in short crop years. Livestock producers would have the benefit of more stable supplies and prices of corn for livestock feed, provided through corn acreage allotments, corn loans, and marketing quotas in surplus years if voted by farmers.

The corn provisions in total will apply only to some of the Southern Michigan counties. These counties will be known soon since Triple-A officials said that the announcement of the commercial corn-producing area and the acreage allotment for the area will probably be made late this week. The acreage allotment for the area will be apportioned among the counties in the area and the farms in each county to give a corn acreage allotment for each farm.

The acreage allotments are designed to keep corn supplies with average yields at about the reserve supply level. However, if it is determined on the basis of the August corn crop estimates, that the total supply of corn on October 1, will exceed the normal supply by more than 10 per cent, the secretary will announce by August 15, that marketing quotas will be in effect in the commercial corn area. Whether marketing quotas will go into effect next October will not be decided by corn farmers until the August corn estimate is announced. The marketing quota is approximately 2,800,000,000 bushels.

A referendum will be held within 20 days after the announcement that the marketing quota level has been reached. Approval by two-thirds of the producers taking part in the referendum is necessary for the quotas to go into effect.

Not later than August 15, the secretary, if the marketing quota level has been reached will announce the percentage of the total acreage allotment in the commercial corn area that would make available a normal supply of corn, this is called the "marketing percentage." Each farm would have a marketing percentage, which would be the same percentage of the individual farm's corn acreage allotment.

An amount of corn for each farm in the commercial area to store in a marketing quota year would be figured on the basis of the marketing percentage for the farm. The marketing quota for the farm would be the total production less the amount stored and less the amount used for farm consumption. Marketings in excess of the quota would be subject to a penalty of fifteen cents a bushel, to be paid by the farmer.

Under this plan a farmer could market free of penalty, or use in any way he chose, all the corn he produces above the storage amount for this farm.

Corn loans at rates of from 52 to 75 per cent of parity will be made under the new farm act in any year when the November crop report indicates that the production of corn exceeds the normal year's domestic consumption and exports, or when the farm price of corn is below 75 per cent of parity on November. The only exception is when the total supply reaches the marketing quota level but farmers vote against putting marketing quotas into effect. No loans would be made in such a year.

Loans will be made to cooperators outside the commercial corn-producing area at 75 per cent of the above rates. Loans can be made to non-cooperators only in the commercial area and only in years when marketing quotas are in effect. Loans to non-cooperators can be made only on the storage amounts calculated under the quotas and only at 60 per cent of the rates to cooperators in the commercial area.

In Michigan and other north central states the agricultural conservation program also includes provisions for adjusting the planting of potatoes to marketing outlets.

agors or any other form of multiple merchandising operation whether under home ownership or corporate ownership.

According to the 1935 federal census reports, Michigan would be affected by the Patman bill to a greater degree than most other mid-west states. Because of its large fruit, vegetable and dairy production, Michigan receives in excess of $150,000,000 a year directly from chain store companies. The rent item alone is $11,400,000; to trucking companies and railroads goes $5,700,000, while employees earn $31,250,000. All in all, the chain store industry leaves $203,000,000 annually in Michigan—and that despite the fact that there are fewer chain stores in the state today than in 1929, a boom year.

It was interesting to us, and no doubt it will be to you, to learn that independent retail stores have been steadily on the ascendancy in Michigan — increasing in number from 47,822 in 1929 to an all-time high of 49,528 in 1933, according to the Federal Trade Commission.

During that time chain stores declined from a 1929 peak of 7,678 stores to 6,567 units in 1933.

As the independent stores did 68 per cent of all the retail business in 1933, according to census figures, it is easy to see that the corner grocery is still supreme in Michigan as elsewhere.

Speed Law Pending

Michigan's growing highway death toll has spurred the state police department with its augmented force for patrolling and the state highway department with its spending power to build safe roads to strive anew for saving of lives in 1938. The secretary of state's office is also active in educational work.

That the present administration views the highway accident problem seriously is also evident by the fact that the legislative council has just appointed a special committee to consider possible legislative changes for 1939.

Speed zones are being set up on stretches of highway found by actual surveys to be hazardous to traffic.

But if the combined efforts of the three state departments fail to bring desired results, you may rest assured that the 1939 legislature will be asked to establish definite speed limits on public highways. And in a state where the automobile ordinarily reigns supreme, that is a near revolution.

Michigan Sets Pace

Michigan is the home of 90 per cent of the world's automobile production and the focal point of the nation's automative field.

One-sixth of all the ordinarily employed workers in this country owe their livelihood directly to the automobile.

For the above reasons, it is easy to see why the federal government regards Michigan as one of the leading key centers—the most important pulse of industrial prosperity.

The automobile industry buys 73 per cent of all plate glass produced in America; 18 per cent of all steel; 6 per cent of hardwood lumber; 36 per cent of lead; 11 per cent of zinc; 14 per cent of tin; 12 per cent of aluminum; 28 per cent of nickel; 46 per cent of upholstery leather; 9 per cent of cotton, and so on.

Carloadings of freight last year totaled 3,725,000.

325,000 Auto Workers

Of the 500,000 automotive workers in this country — men and women who make all the products that go into an automobile—a total of 325,000 reside in Michigan.

Three weeks ago this figure was down to 71,000—about 20 per cent.

Unable to pay their dues in UAW unions, thousands of Michigan workmen are reported to have lost their rating. Dependent solely upon WPA projects or upon welfare relief, they are now concerned first with the bare necessities of life.

It has been the most drastic swing of the labor pendulum in Michigan's industrial picture.

If a man talks at all, the general rule is that the less he has to say the longer it takes him to say it.

DEER ARE FACING CRITICAL PERIOD

RECENT HEAVY SNOW DRIVES HERDS INTO YARDS

Conservation Officials Checking Upper Peninsula Areas to Ascertain Feeding Conditions

Michigan's upper peninsula deer are now being the supreme test in their struggle or existence.

A snowstorm such as occurred during the latter part of January which buried the upper peninsula under two or more feet of snow brings the deer there to the most critical season of their lives. At this time thousands of them are driven into the swamps and heavy timber from which there may be no escape until the snow goes down, usually not until spring. Some of the swamp and heavy timber yards may not have sufficient food for the number of deer that will be there. It is inevitable that some must die.

As explained by H. D. Ruhl, chief of the game division of the department of conservation, the swamp and hardwood deer yards comprise a total area which is between five and 10 percent of the area over which the deer range during the summer. This means, Mr. Ruhl points out, that the thousands of deer that roam widely during the open months attempt to crowd into an area which is only one-tenth to one-twentieth of the summer and fall range, when the snow becomes deep.

Ordinarily snow to a depth of 18 inches on the level does not bother the deer for they can still move around with comparative ease in the higher land surrounding the yards and have a wider range over which to feed, Mr. Ruhl says. "It is a different matter when the depth of the snow increases to two or three feet for then they cannot move into the open any longer but are forced closer and closer to the smaller range of the swamp yards. The yards might be called the 'bottleneck' of the deer range. The number and condition of the yards is one of the most important limiting factors in the increase of the herd."

"When the yards are plentiful and in good condition they will winter a herd with few losses. When the deer herd has reached a peak population and many of the yards are in poor condition, so that thousands of the animals will be unable to get food, many of the smaller deer will starve."

A total of 281 yards has been located in the state. Of this number 94 were found to be in poor condition, in the last survey made by the game division, with many of them nearly "eaten out," and 97 were found to be in only fair condition. One hundred and eight yards were in good condition, but unfortunately and for some reason not apparent now not all of these are used by the deer.

In some of the most severely browsed yards in Michigan three weeks of intensive yarding is about the maximum length of time that deer can remain before slow starvation commences, Mr. Ruhl says, with the fawns suffering because the adults soon nibble the browse line up beyond the reach of the smaller animals.

Many different experiments have been tried to tide the deer over severe winters, but none has proved satisfactory. The trapping and transporting of deer from browsed-out yards to others in better condition has been done, but the process is too slow to be of much help and transported deer have a habit of returning to their former haunts unless they are moved long distances. Artificial feeding has been tried, but it is costly and as yet has proved a poor substitute for natural browse because hay apparently does not furnish all of the elements needed. Furthermore, when trails and roads are blocked with snow and when the deer yard in inaccessible regions, as they often do, not enough of the animals can be reached with food to take care of all of those in trouble.

Conservation officers, game division investigators and refuge managers are now keeping a close check to determine how the deer are faring, especially in the poorer yards. Feeding experiments also are being conducted in an attempt to discover the limitations of various kinds of browse and to devise means of substituting more concentrated artificial foods which will be eaten by deer and which will furnish the things they need to pull them through the critical period of the winter.

THE COUNTRY WEEKLY

I have on my desk a delightful little book of verse written and printed by R. E. Prescott, of the Alcona County Herald, and detailing "historical tales of the Huron Shore Region." Of all his famous bits of poetry in prose form I like best his idea of his own job on a country paper. He says:—

Reams of copy have been written on the little country sheets published 'way out back of nowhere or in rural county seats, ridiculed by city cousins for the news that they contain — unimportant little items making up the tangled skein of the lives of common people—Tom, Dick, Harry and their wives—neighborhood and social doings marking milestones in their lives. Everyday events are printed. Meetings of the Ladies' Aid, friendly visits and box socials form the weekly cavalcade. But life's made of little items, or, at least, 'twould seem that way, and the little country weekly covers them from day to day. No black headlines, no sensations do its modest column fill, but it pulses human heart throbs as no daily every will.

When the strain of day is over with its worries and its care and you loll in relaxation in your well-worn chair with your feet in roomy slippers and your trusty pipe alight as the cheery glow of wood fire puts the evening's chill to flight; from its depths bright flaming arrows scintillate in twilight's gloom and you feel a deep contentment in the atmosphere of home, where you find a welcome haven from vicissitudes of life and forget its tribulations and its troubles and its strife. You luxuriate in comfort and relax in indolence as you scan the daily headlines that record the day's events, matters of supreme importance; but you lay the journal down as your glance observes the weekly from the old home town.

Just an unpretentious weekly. Nothing big and nothing grand. Hometown news told in a manner common people understand. No fine diction garbs its stories, no sonorous narrative. No salaaming to the mighty. It gets down to where folks live. Uncontrolled by clique or party, and its simple policy—shootin' square with everybody — needs no board of strategy. It contains no fancy writing and no bunk or ballyhoo, but relates in simple language what the common people do, telling how the crops are faring, what the farmer's paid for cream, and the spots the fish are biting by the old dam on the stream, with perhaps a comment column and some boilerplate reviews. But the copy that's important is the hometown local news.

Though its makeup may lack polish and its style be far from smart it pre-empts a spot unchallenged in the hometown reader's heart. There one reads of social doings and of actions neighborly; how, when neighbor meets misfortune friends will gather at a "bee," doing work that none may suffer; sickness comes or loved ones die of the acts of human kindness untold wealth could never buy. Journalists in famous papers narrate tales of wars and kings, but the little country weekly plays humanity's heartstrings. Though it oftentimes makes fodder for the big-time writers' jokes no great journal can approach it in appeal to common folks—those of whom Abe Lincoln's quoted saying God must surely love or He would not take the trouble to make quite so many of.

From Atlantic to Pacific, in the city's crush and noise and the quiet of the farmlands, spread the hometown girls and boys. Where the hand of fate has put them or where men their fortune seek goes the little country paper that is printed once a week. Whether fate bestows its blessing or the gods of fortune frown, eager eyes await the paper from the old home town.

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT

Prevent Exposure to Measles

During the last few years the death rate from measles has shown a steady decline. This may be due in part to the recognition that the disease is particularly dangerous in children of preschool age and that although almost all persons sooner or later acquire measles, needless exposure, particularly of small children, is unwarranted and should if possible be avoided. There is also some reason to believe that the improved child health has helped to cause a diminution in the death rate. We find that involvement of the respiratory tract, inflammation of the middle ear and mastoid are less frequent.

At the present time probably the most useful procedure in the prevention or modification of measles is temporary immunization with human immune bodies. These immune bodies against measles are found in the blood of almost all patients who have recovered from the disease, which in most persons apparently persists in protective amounts throughout life. From the standpoint of public health the desirable use of serum, especially in the case of normal healthy children who have been exposed, would be to reduce the severity of the illness. However, the real modification which can be obtained and still permit the development of permanent immunity has not be defined.

If mothers are immune, infants during the early months of their lives are also immune to measles, apparently due to the fact that protective substances are passed from the mother to the child. In addition to measles the new born infant is usually immune to infantile paralysis, scarlet fever, diphtheria and certain other diseases.

It is expected that a measles epidemic will spread over Michigan during this winter and if we wish to continue our present decline in the death rate from this disease we must recognize the following conditions: The dangers of measles, the prevention of needless exposure of young children, isolation of patients with measles from one another to prevent spreading of the disease and other infections and the necessity of good child health and nutrition.

Plates for 1938 Take 1,500 Tons of Steel

Motor vehicles of the state will be carrying 1500 tons of Michigan steel in the form of license plates in 1938—an increase of about one-third over tonnage of previous years. The 10,000 gallons of enamel covering these plates weighs about 40 tons.

The increased purchase of Michigan steel and paint arises through decision of Leon D. Case, Secretary of State, to substitute metal half-year permits for the windshield stickers of previous years. About one plate in three is a half-year permit. Stickers were purchased in previous years from an Illinois firm.

The 1937 legislature added a 25 cent fee to the cost of half-year permits, to cover bookkeeping and other costs. Metal plates are made at the State Prison of Southern Michigan for about 11 cents a pair, and provide much-needed prison labor; the stickers cost about 4 cents each.

REQUEST HUNTERS SEND IN REPORTS

DEADLINE FINDS MANY IN THE STATE TARDY

Information Contained in Reports Valuable As Aid in Providing Bettar Hunting Conditions

Better late than never, is the word issued to hunters who have not yet sent in their reports which are due, according to state law, by Feb. 15.

Altho approximately two weeks late, the several thousand hunters who have not complied with the law enacted by the last legislature possess information which is needed in the department of conservation no less now than before the arbitrary deadline.

"It was necessary to fix a deadline, of course," J. H. Stephenson, assistant chief of the game division where the reports are being received, said today. "But we are more interested in the information contained in the reports than in whether a hunter got under the deadline or is tardy. Of course, the law stipulates that hunters who failed to report by February 15 are technically guilty of a misdemeanor and could be prosecuted. However, procrastination is a human trait, and hunters who have not yet reported can still make a helpful contribution to wildlife management in Michigan by sending in their reports now."

"The purpose of requiring hunters to report on their luck," Mr. Stephenson added, "is to accumulate more accurate data on the amount of deer and other game in Michigan, where and when kills are being made and on other phases of our wildlife, all of which will be helpful in maintaining and improving hunting. The intent was not to create a nuisance for hunters, but to give us another tool for making their sport better."

Approximately 50 per cent of the estimated number of persons who bought hunting licenses last year had not reported by the deadline date. On and including February 16, a total of approximately 115,400 resident deer reports and approximately 213,700 small game reports had been received. This total of about 330,000 reports compared to an estimate of approximately 155,000 deer licenses and 500,000 small game licenses, or a total of 655,000 sold last year.

In addition to resident hunting reports, 16,800 trappers, also included by the law, reported by February 16 as did 526 non-resident deer hunters, about 700 non-resident small game hunters and 120 bow and arrow deer hunters.

Hundreds of hunters have written to the department reporting loss of their report cards or licenses or both.

McEVOY URGES PARENTS HELP CHILDREN MARRY

But Rose Wilder Lane Says "Children Should Not Marry"

The old but ever new question of whether parents should help their children marry before the children are financially able to support a home is the subject of a lively argument between two famous authors—J. P. McEvoy, and Rose Wilder Lane—in the current issue of WOMAN'S DAY magazine.

"Should parents help their children to marry?" asks Mr. McEvoy, and then proceeds to convince you that they should. "That would sound pretty silly to our forefathers—and certainly no one ever accused them of coddling their offspring. But we spoil our children—so we are told. We overfeed them, overpet them, overeducate them, overprotect them, up to a point—and then we kick them right out on their faces. We drop them from whatever limb we happen to be on, like a monkey dropping a stick that he's tired of. 'So you want to get married, eh?' we say—'Well, go ahead, but don't expect any help from us.' One can forgive the puzzled look on the youngster's face at this point. If ever he needed help he needs it now. In fact, he needs it now more than ever he needed it before . . . .

"The farmer's boy could and did earn his keep almost from the time he could walk. But your boy and my boy fresh out of college is a man in years but a child in experience. He has never done a man's work, and he is not equipped to take a man's place—but yet he is a man. It's not his fault that he hasn't worked; it's not his fault that he hasn't earned his own living, and it's not his fault that he's a man and in love."

Not blaming the boy who cannot support a family but who wishes to support a family but who wishes to get married, nevertheless, Mrs. Wilder puts the responsibility squarely on the parents.

"In my view," she writes, "there is no excuse for the parents whose son is unable to be responsible for his own life when he is old enough to marry. For twenty years at least that parent has been obstructing his child's natural development. He has denied his son the human rights of real life, of liberty inseparable from responsibility, and of pursuit of happiness with all the disasters inevitable to that pursuit. . . .

"I hope my boys will marry young. If, after the age of twenty, they are carrying financial responsibilities too heavy for their strength, I hope to be able to give them the same help—in college or in marriage—that I would give any human being in the same circumstances. And on the same basis, I consider it an insult to an adult human being to offer to 'subsidize' him. And if my boys are not adult human beings when they are twenty years old, then I have shortened their lives as much as if I had cut them short with a bullet."

SEE RECORD SEASON AT CAMP CHARLEVOIX

Early Enrollment Reach Fifty, According to Director Raimann

According to word received from Lewis C. Reimann, owner-director of Camp Charlevoix, boys' summer camp located on Lake Charlevoix near this city, prospects for the 1938 season promise to exceed the record-breaking attendance of last year.

Mr. Reimann states that he has already signed fifty campers for the coming season, the largest number on record for such an early date. If enrollment continues at the present rate, no guarantee of places can be made after April 15.

The 1937 season was the best ever experienced since the camp was established and the steady increase in enrollments may be looked upon as a recognition of the high standard maintained at this local institution.

ODD FELLOWS ADD TO THEIR CRIBBAGE LEAD

Won Monday Night to Extend Margin to 757—One More Contest

The Odd Fellows virtually sewed up the winter cribbage series Tuesday evening by defeating their Masonic opponents by a margin of 36 points to gain a lead of 757. One more contest remains in the series and only an overwhelming Masonic victory would allow them to win.

With thirteen tables participating, Monday night's team scores gave the Odd Fellows 23,353 points to 23,317 for the Masons. John Kling turned in the high card of 966 for the Masons, while Milo Todd's 942 points was the best Odd Fellow score.

The series will be concluded Monday evening, March 7, at the I. O. O. F. hall.

COUNTY HOUSING CHAIRMAN NAMED

These loans allow sufficient credit for extensive structural changes—for repairs such as painting, re-roofing, re-flooring — for rehabilitation such as rewiring, and installing modern plumbing and heating systems—and for landscaping.

Repayments, suited to individual income, are arranged by the lender on a monthly, semi-monthly or weekly basis and may be spread over a period up to five years. These loans are strictly limited to improvements to the property itself, and may not be used to buy equipment.

If the loan is used for farm improvements such as electric systems, water systems, barns, silos, etc., seasonal payments may be arranged for the farm-income borrower.

Total charges, including interest, cannot be more than the equivalent of $5 discount per $100 original face value of a one year note, payable in equal monthly installments.

Loans Up to $2,500 for New Construction

Property Improvement Loans up to $2,500 may be used to build new structures: homes, garages, barns, etc. If used to build a home, this type of loan may be repaid out of income over a period up to 10 years. For other new structures: 5 year repayment. On new homes, security is required in the form of a mortgage or deed of trust covering the property improved, and general property requirements help protect the owner's investment.

This type of Loan (Title I) should not be confused with FHA Insured Mortgages (Title II). Loans up to $2,500 for new homes under Title I are intended primarily for those who live in rural areas, or in marginal zones surrounding large cities where the standards established by the Insured Mortgage System do not apply.

Total charges, including interest, on a loan for home construction cannot be more than the equivalent of $3.50 discount per $100 original face value of a one year monthly-payment note.

To borrow a Property Improvement Loan: Apply to a dealer or a bank, building and loan association or other financial institution approved by the Federal Housing Administration; sign a note for the sum required; then pay it back in small payments suited to your income.

FHA Insured Loans are not Government Money. They are made by private financial institutions and insured by the Federal Housing Administration.

CHARLEVOIX WINS TOURNAMENT TITLE

DEFEATED BOYNE CITY 49 TO 14 IN SATURDAY FINALS —PELLSTON WINNER OF CLASS D TITLE

District Winners Advance to Regional Competition Opening Thursday, March 10th, at Petoskey—Carey Scored 43 Points in Two Games of Tournament Play

Charlevoix in class C, and Pellston in class D advanced to regional state basketball competition as the result of victories in the district finals held Saturday night at the Charlevoix school gymnasium.

Charlevoix's Red Rayders buried Boyne City under a 49 to 14 score, while Pellston eliminated Mackinaw City by a 28 to 19 score. These two teams will compete at Petuskey, March 10, 11 and 12.

Charlevoix, winner of the Little Eight class C conference title and undefeated during the season, was expected tu win from Boyne. They did so by the largest score of three meetings between the two teams this season. However, Pellston's convincing win over Mackinaw City was not anticipated in view of the fact the two teams had divided honors in over-time contests during the regular seasun. Mackinaw City fans attributed the off-form of their team to effects of monoxide gas from a leaky heater in the school bus which transported them here Saturday. After being gassed they were forced to make a big share of the trip with the bus windows open.

Charlevoix Tops Boyno

Charlevoix's Rayders turned in a neat job in trimming Boyne City. They gained a 11 to 1 margin at the quarter, led 29 to 5 at the half and 39 to 8 at the third intermissiun. Cuach Kipke used his regulars into the third period and ended the contest with a full reserve line-up. Carey, who accounted for 21 of his tenm's points, gave his best performance of the season. Although usually covered by at least three Boyne City players, he could not be stopped. Saturday night's scoring gave him 43 points for the time he played in two tournament games. Richardson followed Carey with 12 points, Brown scored 4 and Gallagher 3. The guarding of the entire squad is indicated by the fact Boyne was limited to five goals during the contest.

Pellston Class D Winner

Pellston's fast-breaking, hard fighting outfit, gained their victory over Mackinaw City in the first half. They seured 13 puints to Mackinaw's 3 in the first period and stretched the lead 18 to 5 at the half. Mackinaw made a determined rally in the second half but fell short. They out-scured the winners 14 points to 10 in a tense, wild scramble. Steadier play might have won, but Mackinaw appeared stricken by stage-fright from the start.

Shorter led the Pellston attack with 10 points. Givens scored 7, Shombin and Scott each 5. Linklater tallied 9 for Mackinaw, Krueger and Schepler 4 each.

Charlevoix gained the class C finals with a 57 to 27 victory over East Jordan. Boyne had earlier eliminated Harbor Springs by a 35 to 20 score.

Business Recession Blamed for Small Sales Full Auto Licenses

The business recession is cited by Secretary of State Leon D. Case as the majur reuson for the unusually large sale of half-year automobile license plates.

Nearly one of every three licenses sold by March 1 were half-year permits, he revealed. Reports from 99 of the state's 152 branch offices showed that 421,616 full year and 195,588 half-year plates were sold.

In 1937, of the tutal 1,649,000 plates issued for the full year, 438,000 were half-year stickers.

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY'S DEER WINTERING WELL

Many Herds Are Reported in Western Portion of County

Reports from district conservation headquarters at Boyne City indicate Charlevoix county deer herds are coming through the winter in fine condition, and if heavy snows do not prevail between now and spring, losses through natural seasonal causes will be light.

Conservation Officer Ed. Deuell reports that deer have not generally yarded. His observations reveal that in most instances the animals, expected to concentrate in swamps due to heavy snow, are well scattered and have been able up to the present time, at least, to travel upon the heavy crust which prevails throughout the region.

His report that many herds, from small to quite sizeable groups, may be found in many locations near Charlevoix, is encouraging. Deer are numerous in the east portion of the county and a large concentration has been noted in sections 32 and 33 of South Arm township.

The problem presented hy dogs harassing deer is being met quite successfully. Numerous dogs have been killed by officers constantly patrolling the deer areas. Three deer have been killed by dogs near Charlevoix.

SMELT DIP TO BE A DOUBLE CIRCUS

MARCH 26 SET AS DATE FOR TWO JAMBOREES

East Jordan and Boyno City Set Stago for Annual Spring Sportsmen's Events

West Michigan's big fishing show, the annual smelt run, will be a two ring circus this year with both East Jordan and its neighbor, Boyne City, announeing the date for the event March 26. Both towns will have a good many of the trappings of a circus to go along with the smelt run parades, street celebrations and a stag banquet in each of the cities.

East Jordan will crown the King of Smeltium in a burlesque ceremony and also will hold the national spitting contest under the guidance of Newaygo Newt, widely know poet of the out-of-doors. Boyne City will crown its home town girl, Delphine Stackus, who is Michigan's Winter Queen, as the reigning sovereign of its festival.

Although Boyne City's smelt festival will be held on March 26 the committee in charge of the celebration has announced that they will hegin dipping as soon as the run starts, regardless of when that is. The dips will be held nightly at 10 p. m., with the exception of on Mar. 26, when the dip will be held at 11 p. m. The dip on that night will be broadcast for half an hour uver Radio Station WJR in Detroit.

East Jordan will dip at 9 p. m.

With the exception of the dip itself the celebrations in the two cities will be paterned very much alike. But, for the dip, East Jordan has built board walks out along the banks of the Jordan river and the dipping is done with nets at the end of a 10 to 14 foot pole. These nets may be rented for the night or purchased there for a nominal price The sportsman attending the smelt run for the first time is advised to wear warm sports clothes but boots or waders are unnccessary.

At Boyne City, however, the wild crew of dippers get right into the river and boots or waders are recommended. The conservation department rnling on smelt nets is that they he no more than five feet in circumference. Flood lights will illuminate the scene for both the dippers and the spectators.

The little silver fish that causes all the excitement is a fickle fellow that depends entirely upon the temperature of the water to govern the start of its spawning run upstream.

When the water temperature reaches 36, they start up streams. A light frost, however, may halt the run, or a warm spell that melts the snow off rapidly may chill the water so the run will be stopped.

Conservation officers anticipate the biggest dip ever this year. Smelt fishing through the ice of Lake Charlevoix has been very good this year and that indicates that there also will be a good run.

NEGLIGENT HUNTERS FACING HEAVY FINE

Approximately 328,200 fail to Make Report on Season's Kill

Approximately 328,200 Michigan hunters are liable to $100 fines and 60-day imprisonment each, H. D. Ruhl, chief of the conservation department game division, revealed today.

Under a 1937 legislative act all hunters were required to report their kills not later than February 15th, 1938.

To date only 356,000 licensed hunters have reported, Ruhl said. A total of 155,000 deer licenses were issued last year, 500,000 small game permits and 30,000 trappers licenses.

Only 117,000 deer hunters, 222,300 small game hunters and 17,500 trappers have reported, Ruhl estimated, but he was uncertain what action would be taken against the violators.

"We surely couldn't put 328,200 hunters in jail," Ruhl said. "Before we take any action we'll try to inform every hunter that he has—perhaps unknowingly—violated the law."

ROBERT BRIDGE IS NOMINATED MAYOR

GIVEN 492 MAJORITY OVER ARTHUR BERGEON, INCUMBENT, AT PRIMARY ELECTION MONDAY

Charles Heise Winner by 72 Votes in Three-Way Race for Alderman of Second Ward — Total of Nearly 1300 Votes Cast Set All-Time Record

Given a decisive two to one majority in Monday's city primary election, Robert Bridge defeated Arthur Bergeon, the incumbent, for the Republican nomination as mayor.

In the only other contest on the ballot, Charles Hrise won a three-way scrnp for alderman of the second ward, defeating E. J. Kihhe, seeking re-election, and Lewis Brant, who, like Heise, was a new-comer in city politics.

The largest number of electors ever to vote in the history of Charlevoix elections gave Mr. Bridge a majority in every ward. Tabulations for mayor showed a vote of 1,258, which is an all-time record and falls slightly short of the actual number of ballots cast. Bridge's majority was 492 votes.

Following is the vote for mayor:

First Ward

Bridge	183—154
Bergeon	29

Second Ward

Bridge	416—199
Bergeon	217

Third Ward

Bridge	276—139
Bergeon	137

In the second ward contest, Heise received 265 of the 628 votes cast. Kibbe ran second with 193 and Brant received 170. Heise's majority was 72 votes.

Present officers re-nominated without opposition were Ray S. Hamilton for city clerk, and F. V. Tyler for city treasurer. H. R. Fowler was the only person receiving sufficient votes for nomination as justice of peace, but inasmuch as he already holds the same offire, the present vacancy still stands.

In the first ward, E. E. Cross was re-nominated as supervisor without opposition, as was Clarence F. Wood for alderman, succeeding Arthur Ranger. Darwin F. Meech, unopposed supervisor of the second ward was nominated, as were Supervisor Clarence B. Meggison and Alderman J. J. Hallett of the third ward. Oscar Nelson was nominated third ward constable.

A shortage of hallots in the first and second wards occurred hefore closing of the polls and many voted on instruction ballots. It was noted that 216 of 233 registered electors of the first ward voted. Other wards turned in proportionate votes.

ODD FELLOWS WIN CRIBBAGE HONORS

DEFEATED MONDAY, BUT TAKE SERIES BY 247 POINTS

Victory Second Consecutive for I. O. O. F.—Banquet to Be Held Next Monday Night

Although defeated by 510 points in the final cribbage contest Monday night, the Odd Fellows coasted through on their previous lead to win the series from the Masons for the second consecutive year.

As the final session started the Odd Fellows held a lead of 757, which was reduced to 247. A year ago, trailing by 569 points going into the series final, the Odd Fellows turned the tide in a single session to win for the first time in four years.

Leo Carey and H. R. Fowler, with perfect scores of 968, led the Masons in tallying 21,911 points. The Odd Fellows scored 21,401 points with Grant Crandall turning in a card of 941 to lead the side. Forty-six players took part in the contest. While complete tabulations of the series scores has not been completed, little variation is expected in the final figures.

The customary cribbage banquet, with the losers putting on the "feed" for the winners, will be held Monday evening, Mareh 14th, at the Masonic temple at 6:30 o'clock. The affair, winding up the annual winter contest series, will provide a program of entertainment in addition to the banquet.

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

The astuteness of Michigan's state highway commissioner, Murray D. Van Wagoner, is evidenced again in the about face attitude recently taken at the White House regarding highway expenditures.

Two months ago President Roosevelt sent a message to Congress nrging drastic curtailment of federal funds for highways—funds already allocated to match state road expenditures.

In the face of a budget storm, Van Wagoner rushed to Washington and entered a vigorous protest, terming the presidential request tantamount to diversion of motorist-paid taxes.

Headlines now carry the news that the White House is looking with favor on a gigantic road-building spree to lmild 66 super-highways, mostly on transcontinental routes. Eleven of these would traverse Michigan.

Just how the new highway program fits into the railroad financial picture is not easy to see—if it does. The tax-ridden railroads, near bankruptcy, are asking the ICC to authorize a 15 per cent rate increase.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

Woodland Acre Can Earn $1.20

Michigan's woodlands still are worth cash and represent a sizeable farm industry. Conservative figures based on the last farm census in the state indicate the average wooded acre earns $1.20.

A total of about 85,000 farm families in the state find financial benefits from woodlands. In products used or sold the woods return in a year more than $4,600,000. The same survey indicates woodland projects present an annual cash income for these 85,000 farm families of $2,370,000.

These figures have been assembled by the United States Forest Service and issued by W. Ira Bull, extension forester at Michigan State College. They are designed to show the importance of wooded areas that still cover many acres in Charlevoix county, according to County Agricultural Agent B. C. Mellencamp, Boyne City.

Steep hillsides, eroded areas and unused corners of farms are suggested as good portions to retain as woods or to plant with proper seedlings.

Forest Service officials term the woodlands a good farm bank which can be used to pay regular dividends in fuel or timber. Farmers find the woods and timber constitute dividends or assets to be left to mature into more valuable assets. Of 18,500,000 acres of farm land in Michigan approximately one fifth is farm woodland, or an average of about 19 acres to a farm.

In order to encourage more farmers to take better care of their farm woodlots several demonstrations have already been conducted. In most cases 5 acres have been thinned under the personal supervision of Larry Wines, Junior Forester, Camp Wolverine. Thus farmers who are uncertain as to woodlot problems can see one of these demonstrations in their own community and use these to guide them in better woodlot practices.

Over 50 Farmers Will Finish Their Farm Account Books Next Week

On March 18th, 19th, and 21st, all farmers in the county who have kept a farm account book will be given appointments to meet with representatives of the farm management department to check in their 1937 farm account book. This work has been so valuable to farmers that 11 have already finished 9 years of records which shows how much they appreciate this service.

Farming is that type of business that requires a very careful check on all expenses and receipts, and nothing better has yet been developed than the present farm account book now being used. It is simple and yet includes all business transactions that refer to the farm itself.

If there are any farmers who would like to start keeping one of these books kindly inform your extension agent and he will be only too glad to start a new book for you.

J. G. Hays, M. S. C., to Address City-Farmer Get Acquainted Meetings

Great plans are being formulated by four city organizations for entertaining their farmer friends on March 14th, 15th, and 16th. Each year it seems desirable to have these get-acquainted meetings as, unquestionably, both groups have problems of common interest. The speaker, Jimmy Hayes, has a national reputation for wit and humor and now has developed a new lecture, Believe-it-or-not, which has been reported to be his best effort along these lines.

Monday night, March 14th, Mr. Hayes will entertain the Rotary Club, Boyne City, on Tuesday night the Kiwanis Club, Charlevoix, on Wednesday night the Chamber of Commerce at East Jordan, and Tuesday afternoon the Boyne Falls Agricultural Day.

At East Jordan in connection with this program special recognition will be given to the 4-H Club members and Smith-Hughes students who have made such a splendid record in their potato exhibits.

"Destiny's Daughter", a thrilling, dramatic story of intrigue, love and stalking death in a dictator-ruled corner of Europe by that popular author James Warner Bellah, starts in next Sunday's Detroit News. Watch for it in This Week, the Sunday News colorgravure magazine.

Some time later they rode into the camp at Santa Marlita, and found it in a great state of excitement. Far, far below them a pillar of fire blazed against the dark night, blazed, and faltered and blazed again.

Young Pedro riding before Canete, as the burro had not been found, shivered.

"Indians?" he asked. "Bad Indians?"

Then they heard running feet. Three Indians, naked except for breech-clouts, panting and shining, entered the camp and stood before the fire.

"El Capiten, which is he?" they asked.

"I am he. What is your message?"

"Senor, El Gobernador, Don Pedro Fages, is camped a day's journey from here. His smoke is yonder in the valley. He sent us to find you, and bid you hasten."

Capitan Canete heaved a great sigh of relief.

"Praise God!" he murmured devoutly. Then he detailed three other Indians from his train to make all haste to the Governor's camp.

"Tell him we will be with him by nightfall tomorruw," he said. He looked around at the drawn face of the Governor's lady. "And tell him all in my expedition are well, happy, and enjoying the trip!" he added.

CHAPTER VII

Pedro Fages listened to the report of Capitan Canete's Indians and dismissed them that they might eat and rest after their all-night journey.

Striding to the spring, the Governor splashed face and head, smoothed his hair with his fingers and wrung his beard. Then, cupping both hands to mouth, he whooped until the silent morning rang and echoed.

"Rise, my children! Rise and greet the sun! Rise and soy your prayers, and hear the tidings! Tonight there will arrive here the cavalcade of Capitan Canete . . . Rise, beggars, vagabonds!"

Curiosity overcame laziness, and soon the camp was buzzing with anticipatory preparations. The arrival of Canete meant news from home; letters, messages from Spain and Mexico. It meant a fiesta, for there were women in the Capitan's train, surely the Governor's lady would bring maids!

Indians were dispatched into the canons for deer, quail, rabbit, antelope. Others gathered wood and piled a mighty pyre on the beach.

"El Gobernador plans a feast for tonight," whispered one soldier to another, then nudged his fellow in the ribs as they laughed uproariously.

"Ai, ai, quiquiriqui!" sang the soldiers together.

At last the Governor, having assigned to each his task, turned to one he would entrust only to himself.

A large round tent which had remained rolled and packed on the journey, had been pitched some distance away from the camp. He entered it, and almost fell over a tiny Indian boy, naked as a rabbit, brown as a berry, with wild bright eyes

"Ah, Escabellito! Lazy little one, begone and eat thy tortillas! Wouldst sleep all day?"

The child scampered toward the cooking fire, and the Governor went to work with the happy expression of a man performing a labor of love. He began opening bundles that had been a mystery on the trip as they had never been opened, and had taxed the pack-animals to the ears.

There were bright blankets of Indian weave, supple serapes in gay colors, skins of mountain lion, wildcat and bear, robes of otter and rabbit. These he spread on the ground until it was covered, arranging and rearranging until their disposal suited his fancy. And as he worked he sang a little soldier's song beneath his breath

Eulalia had seen a painting of a lady of the French court dressed in a green velvet riding habit, with voluminous draped skirt, tight fitting basque trimmed in rich cream lace, and her head a saucy velvet hat with a nodding, sweeping plume. A clever Parisian sempstress, marooned in Mexico City, had copied the costume for Eulalia.

But she had been hustled away into exile, and one of her regrets at leaving was that she had never worn the green velvet habit. Nevertheless it was packed in a leather trunk, which Angustias had marked with a green cross in a circle. And when the Governor of California greeted his lady wife he would see, not a bedraggled, travel-stained pilgrim in dusty black, her head covered with a rebozo like a Mexican peasant woman, but a real lady of high degree, her velvets green against a white jennet, her proud head high with nodding plumes. And jeweled—

Ah, yes! She would wear her emeralds, of course. The heavy gold-set necklace, the long earrings, the massive ring on her first finger. Yes, the green was a happy thought; green velvet and gems set off a skin that is white and dazzling—

Capitan Canete rode ahead, his perspiring brow furrowed with anxiety. By all the saints, this was the worst day of the entire journey! A narrow trail zigzagged down the side of a mountain which seemed to bulge over the sea, thousands of feet below; a tortuous, treacherous trail, so narrow it was necessary for the cavalcade to travel in single file, and so winding the animals had almost to bend themselves double at some turns.

When his thoughts permitted him, he admired the Governor's lady, riding so calmly behind him, with never an outcry or even a gasp of fear as her trembling horse avoided the ever present side-winder rattlesnakes, and picked its way among rolling pebbles where a misstep would send horse and rider plunging to death down the mountainside into the ocean lapping hungrily below.

What a woman! And after that scene of last night.

But the lady's head was full of other things: the green velvet habit, the jewels that lay dark in the little case strapped to her jennet, only waiting a gleam of light to make them leap and glow like green flames against her white skin.

Tonight she would see her husband again.

Would he be the same? Would he look the same? She could picture him in armor and plumed helmet like the great conquistador, Cortez; or in rich velvets like the gentlemen of the vicaregal court, or as the Governor of the Californias, surrounded by bowing attendants.

But no extension of her imagination could show Pedro Fages as he actually was, a bluff soldado de cuero. Early in the California campaigns he and his tough little company of Catalonian volunteers had adopted cuirasses of hide, and had immediately been dubbed, "the leather jackets"—soldados de cuara. And Don Pedro, though he had risen from a humble lieutenant of the Catalonian volunteers to the governorship of the Californias, was still only a soldado de cuera and wore his cuirass on all expeditions. His skin was tanned to the color of his jacket, his beard grizzled, his face lined.

As evening approached the trail twisted between two great arms of the mountain that opened to the Vermillion sea, and led gradually into an arroyo.

After a consultation with the Indian guides, Capitan Canete turned to the lady.

"It is only several hours from here to the camp of his Excellency, and if you wish to stop and refresh yourself before going farther I will withdraw and send the bearers ahead."

"I will gladly avail myself of the opportunity. You are very kind," said Eulalia with a smile that wiped out all the calumnies of the night before. "So kind that I will ask you to get me one chest from my belongings — a large iron-studded chest—marked with a green cross in a circle."

Canete looked at the chests and boxes strapped on the weary burros and opened his mouth. But Eulalia smiled again.

The captain approached the animals, searched carefully, then called an Indian who carried the trunk to the lady. Then the train moved on out of sight down the canyon.

Eulalia and Angustias unfastened the great lock with little laughing cries of anticipation. Slowly Angustias lifted out a garment, and shook it. It was not velvet, and it was not green. Eulalia gasped.

Grimly the duena began throwing things out of the chest on to the ground until it was strewn with garments. But the riding habit was not among them. And the pack-animals were out of sight and sound. Angustias looked tearfully at her mistress whose lip trembled.

"What shall I do? Oh, Angustias, what shall I do? I had set my heart on that green velvet!"

Angustias braced herself. She could cope with the situation when her lady wept. It was only the cold tearless storms that baffled her. She turned to the scattered garments.

"Ai, God be praised! Nina, look! This is perfect, here is the little Maja costume. The sweetest, prettiest, most becoming thing you ever had! I haven't laid eyes on it since I left Spain—God bless the place."

"Let me see that dress, Angustias." The women held it up.

"Yes, it is charming. I suppose there is nothing else to do. But how you could make such a mistake in the chests, Angustias, I don't know. And I had set my heart on the—"

"Ah, this is better. Much better. The green would not be so becoming to you now since you have grown so tanned—so bonny and brown!" she amended hastily as she heard a snort from the lady.

"Yes, yes, it is all here, even the little buckled shoes and the rebecilla. Come, nina, let us get this on you before it grows too dark to see what we are doing."

Eulalia permitted herself to be dressed, at first submitting in sulky silence, then growing interested and at last enthusiastic as the charming little Maja costume was fitted to her. As she fussed, Angustias talked volubly.

Eulalia spoke briskly.

"Come now, woman, how do I look?" She pulled her little jacket over her bosom and turned slowly around.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE NEWS BULLETIN

Lost Titles Total Thousands Annually

In the rush to serve the public just before the March 1 deadline for the purchase of 1938 automobile license plates, Department of State officials became impressed with the apparently carelessness with which thousands of motorists handle their car titles.

Annually great numbers of people are delayed in buying plates until they can locate their titles. This year an unusually large number of persons applied for duplicate titles, being totally unable to locate the original ones. In the last 15 days of February more than 5,000 duplicate titles were issued by the Department of State.

Motor vehicle owners are deprived from exercising ordinary legal rights in connection with their cars, if they lack titles. They may not sell them, trade them in, or even give them away, without titles to prove their ownership.

Complications sometimes follow in the wake of applications for duplicate titles. A comparison of signatures on the two applications may reveal a discrepancy which cannot be ignored; three applications in February disclosed that, innocently or not, persons had acquired stolen cars. Police were notified, and asked to investigate.

Duplicate titles cost $1, as do original titles. Every application for a duplicate must be accompanied by a statement as to what happened to the original. Most people merely write tersely but significantly: "It was lost".

Where It's Unlawful To Kiss Your Wife

An article in The American Weekly, with the March 13 issue of The Detroit Sunday Times, reports many absurd old regulations and tells what one of the states in our union is doing to repeal fanatical blue laws which make it a crime to kiss your wife in public on Sunday . . . buy a chicken after dark . . . go to church unarmed, or neglect to have your pet dog carry a red light on his tail after nightfall.

One of the "small merchants" told congress that government is a lot like business, and that the only way business could succeed was "to take in more than you pay out." That's the last time that fellow will ever be called to Washington.

THEODORE O. HANSON

Michigan telephone plant man awarded Vail Medal for "Meritorious act of public service" that resulted in saving a human life.

Theodore O. Hanson of Northport, plant employee of the Michigan Bell Telephone Company, has been awarded the Theodore N. Vail medal in bronze in recognition of a "meritorious act of public service", beyond the normal performance of duty, that resulted in saving a life. The announcement was made by George M. Welch, president of the company, following citation of Hanson by the Michigan Vail Medal Committee of Award, meeting in Detroit.

On the night of May 30, 1937, while Hanson and his wife were driving near the Indian village of Peshwahatown, between Traverse City and Northport, they came upon the scene of an automobile accident in which a man was badly injured and was in danger of bleeding to death. Hanson, who had taken the first aid course offered its employees by the Michigan Bell Company, applied a handkerchief-tourniquet to the partially severed arm of the victim and stopped the hemorrhage. He then took the men to a physician at Suttons Bay and later to a hospital at Traverse City for an emergency operation. Rounding a curve, the injured man's car had crashed into another car without lights that was parked on the highway, it was stated. He credits Hanson with saving his life.

Casting Joan Crawford and Spencer Tracy Together, a New High in Love Teams

There is nothing surprising about the romantic teaming of Joan Crawford and Spencer Tracy in a motion picture, except that it hasn't happened sooner.

More amazing is the fact that they had never met until introduced by Director Frank Borzage on the set of "Mannequin," their first co-starring film.

But that is really not so startling on a lot the size of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with its host of more than a hundred stars and featured players.

The screen careers of Miss Crawford and Tracy have many parallels.

"Mannequin," which comes to the Palace Theater, Saturday, March 12, gives both stars parts ideally suited to their talents. Miss Crawford creats the role of Jessie Cassidy, who seeks an escape from the poverty of the Hester Street tenement where she was born. Tracy plays John L. Hennessey, rugged, two-fisted boss of the New York waterfront.

When an ordinary citizen dies, the federal government imposes an estate tax, but when a member of congress dies his fellow-legislators immediately vote $10,000 to his widow.

ILLEGAL FIELD TRAIN DOGS AFTER MARCH 15

Period This Year Closes Month Earlier Than in 1937

Owners of hunting dogs have only until March 15 for training their animals in the fields and woods, according to the state law.

By statute the season ends on that date, but the state director of conservation is authorized to issue permits for field trials conducted by recognized clubs. Last year such permits were issued up to April 15.

Several trials have been scheduled in different parts of the state for running within the next few weeks.

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT

Many Causes of Maternal Mortality Are Preventable

It has been stated that there is nothing obscure about maternal mortality. Both principle and detail are well known and the way it can be remedied is to a certain section of the medical profession at all events perfectly clear. There is no lack of knowledge but only an obstinate neglect of the application of known facts.

In a study that was made a number of years ago it was shown that 40 per cent of all maternal deaths were of women who had unmistakable signs of infections. A report prepared by the New York Academy of Medicine for the years of 1930-32 results in the following conclusions: (1) The inadequacy of antepartum cure; (2) Lack of appreciation by those concerned with the gravity of apparently mild symptoms; (3) The high incidence of higher intervention; (4) The selection of wrong treatment or ill-advised therapy; (5) The high incidence of syphilis infection and its death rate; (6) Medical incapacity.

It is difficult in every case to trace down the actual cause of death; each one frequently finds more than one influencing factor. However, in all summaries, three groups of conditions seem the most responsible, namely; infection or sepsis, toxemia and hemorrhage, acting either singly or in combination.

Infections in 1935 were the greatest cause of maternal deaths. It resulted in 41 per cent of the mothers who died and is nearly always preventable with proper care on the part of the mother, doctor, and nurse. Toxemia, the accumulation of poisons in the mother, resulted in 22 per cent of the deaths in mothers in 1935 and is preventable to a large degree by adequate means of prenatal care. Hemorrhage was responsible for 11 per cent of the mothers who died in 1935 and though it cannot always be prevented, still, when it occurs, immediate and proper treatment lessen the dangers of a fatal outcome.

During 1937 three maternal deaths occurred in District Health Unit No. 3 comprising the counties of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego. This number is in comparison with 7 in 1933; 9 in 1934; 5 in 1935; and 1 in 1936.

A better appreciation of the importance of the recognition of the early emphasis of toxemia and hemorrhage together with the institution of more active therapy, will in the future do much to lessen the dangers of these two conditions.

More for Schools?

Michigan public schools received $38,083,885 from the state during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937.

This sum was in addition to funds set aside for state schools.

For the present fiscal year the legislature authorized an increase of five million dollars. The budget director, Harold Smith, acting in behalf of the governor trimmed this a bit.

State school aid seeks to equalize educational opportunity throughout Michigan.

At Washington today Congress is considering authorization of a federal grant of $885,000,000 for distribution to states for general aid to elementary and secondary schools, chiefly in rural areas; construction of new school buildings; adult education programs; rural libraries and improvement of teacher training.

As the super-highway scheme, costing many billions, would benefit eleven routes in Michigan, the new federal school scheme would benefit schools in the state.

Call this state socialism? Well, write our your own ticket. We're on our way.

Socialism

Michigan audiences on the same night heard two socialist leaders—Norman Thomas in Lansing and Senator Robert LaFollete in Detroit—quite from reports of the Brookings Institution, the fact-finding organization at Washington, D. C.

Said Thomas: America in 1929 had the capacity to produce 19 to 20 per cent more national income. This increase in the national income would have meant a $2,000 or more a year for every wage-earner.

Said Lafollete: America in 1929 had $19,000,000,000 in savings, yet only $5,000,000,000 found its way as investments into work-producing enterprises. Public spending must supply the need.

The Brookings Institution crashed into front pages and legislative hearings several years ago when it recommended, after exhaustive studies, that what America needed was more production of goods, not less; lower prices of goods, not higher; and that the way to stimulate both consumption and production was to make a better product, increase wages of labor and lower prices for the consumer.

In Michigan, world's capital of automobiles, this is an old, old story. In fact, it is the history of the motor industry.

LaGuardia on Guard

Thomas and LaFollete both followed Mayor LaGuardia of New York City, one-time socialist congressman, who said that civil service was good only as long as its administration was good.

Recalling how hoss rule in New York City had been overthrown by coalition civic forces, LaGuardia declared that government had become a science. "Taxpayers can't afford the luxury of incompetent government any more," he said.

And to speech-minded Governor Murphy who has journeyed frequently to the East and New England, LaGuardia added significantly: "The East greatly admires you."

It was William Allen White, Kansas editor, who boomed LaGuardia for the GOP presidential nomination in 1940.

Consumer Awakening

As Washington the other day was Michigan's consumer leader, Mrs. Stuart Frazier, counsel of the newly established consumers bureau, state department of agriculture.

As head of the only state consumer agency of its kind in the United States, Mrs. Frazier enjoyed the spotlight.

The occasion was a meeting of the Consumers' National Federation, organized to represent the interest of the consumer—the forgotten man—in today's tug-of-war between economic interests. Feeling that the nation, in its concern over production, has permitted exploitation of the consumer, the federation seeks repeal of so-called fair trade laws in 42 states and repeal of the federal Miller-Tydings law, father of the state laws. In a nutshell, the Miller-Tydings act permits manufacturers and retailers to fix prices, outlaw boss leaders.

According to the consumer groups, legislative tinkering of this type has increased the cost of living.

The Federal Trade Commission, investigating monopolistic practices, is expected to report soon that fair trade laws have increased prices. Michigan's fair trade law, passed by the legislature after a long battle, only affects gasoline dealers and bakers. A test of its constitutionality is now pending in the courts.

Who Pays Taxes?

A survey of Ford Motor company employees has revealed that the average family spends $565 annually for dry groceries, dairy products, meats and poultry, produce, tobacco, soap and cosmetics.

Dry groceries	$179
Dairy products	158
Meats, poultry	115
Produce	69
Tobacco	28
Soaps, cosmetics	16
	$565

What the figures do not reveal, however, is that 25 per cent — or $141.30 is represented in hidden, indirect, unseen taxes.

A loaf of bread brings 2 cents in taxes.

The low-priced car in its first year takes $62.77 average taxes.

The consumer pays 10 per cent of the sales tax on perfumes, toilet water, cosmetics and so on. He pays more tax on tobacco than the total amount which the grower, manufacturer and retailer gets.

	1932	1935	1937
Federal	1,900	3,600	5,500
State	1,700	11,900	2,500
Local	1,700	4,300	4,500

When taxes begin to pinch the shoes of the workingman, then it is about time for him to stop and think. Figure it out for yourself.

DRIVERS' LICENSES

A new drivers' permit law is effective in Michigan. This article sketches in the highlights of the revised regulations.

Persons operating motor vehicles must carry their licenses with them. Those without adequate driving experience may obtain 60-day temporary permits, provided they pass the required examination. After obtaining needed driving experience, they take the driving test and get a driver's license upon passing. A licensed operator must occupy the seat beside anyone driving with a temporary permit.

Drivers' licenses are valid three years from issuance date. If you change your name or address at any time, report it to your police station or sheriff, who will enter it on the license card and notify the Secretary of State.

"The tiny fitted jacket was of red with a little white lace collar, and puffs of golden-colored embroidery over the shoulders like epaulettes; the long close-fitting sleeves broke at the wrists with another puffing of satin, then tapered over her hands. A row of jeweled buttons followed the curves of her breast. The gay garment terminated in a short waistline with charming little tabs, the one directly in back sticking jauntily out like a droke's tail.

This she wore over a full skirt of many breadths of white satin covered by an overskirt of embroidered tulle that fell just short of her ankles and the buckled shoes.

Her hair, except for a few waves in front, was concealed by the redecilla, typical of the Maja, a knitted cap ending in a long queue and a tassel.

Angustias gazed at her in satisfied admiration.

"Lovely, lovely nina. You know you never looked more beautiful. How pleased Don Pedro will be!"

CHAPTER VIII

Pedro Fages leaped from out the darkening, shark-infested water of the Gulf of California and raced a few times up the beach, shouting and beating his chest. Then he dressed carefully, combed his beard and hair with his fingers, and went to his tent.

Escabellito, the wee Indian, awaited him there, and the two walked toward the roaring fire. The smoky air was filled with the odors of roasting flesh. Two casks, one of wine, and one of aguardiente from the Franciscan mission of San Gabriel Arcangel in California Alta, stood ready for the broaching.

Don Pedro strolled restlessly about. The bay was now flooded with moonlight, which emphasized mountains, palms, men and horses in black silhouette. Again he peered into the tent. A little fire had been built before the entrance and its reflection made the barbaric interior glow like a jewel.

When he looked again toward the fire he saw three figures ride slowly toward the camp: a woman, a child and a man. Behind them a long caravan defiled out of the arroyo.

"Ah," choked the Governor. As he went toward them a thousand confused thoughts, memories, desires raced through his mind. Eulalia, his wife—his Eulalia—eight years—the babe at the mother's breast — beautiful Eulalia — lonely years—beloved, riding to me out of the wilderness—I will crawl to your feet—kiss your little shoes—core of my heart—hope of my loneliness—mine to possess—soon.

"Ah," choked the Governor of California.

He made his way with dignity toward her, helped her from the saddle, kissed her hand timidly. And said only:

"Well! Well, well, well!"

There were confused greetings, cries, laughter; a milling of people and horses. The Governor found his legs held in a tight grip. He looked down.

"Hello! And who is this?"

"I am Pedro Fages the Younger. Are you my father? Are you truly? I didn't think I had a father, really. I thought he was like Senor Jesus, or San Francisco, or—"

Fages swung the child into his arms and carried him to the fire. He looked into the clear eyes, devoured the brown face, felt the straight little back and limbs, and buried his cheek in the boy's warm neck.

"I am your father—I am indeed. And you are my chamaco, my little boy!"

Pedro Fages the Younger wriggled in delight.

"Then it's all right. Ai, I have so many things to tell you, and ask you, Father. Father! That sounds funny, doesn't it? I've heard other boys say that, but I never could."

"Young Pedro, you are bothering your father! And I want to speak to him. Greetings, Don Pedro—or should I say, your Excellency?"

"Dona Angustias! Well, well—". And he stooped to kiss the withered virgin's cheek. She giggled and produced her pet, to hold him up proudly like a child. "Look, sir! Chichi! And he has borne the trip thus far nobly, nobly, I say."

"Chichi! My God, the same Chichi?"

"Oh, not the same Chichi, there have been several Chichis since the one you saw last, but there is just one, always and the same Chichi!"

Fages felt his hand tugged gently, and looked down into the somber eyes of the tiny Indian. He took him by the hand and led him to where Eulalia sat enthroned beneath a ramada by the fire.

"Senora," he said formally, "here is a gift I have brought you all the way from Monterey, a gift which I hope you will appreciate, and use. This is Escabellito."

"Escabellito! Little Foot-Stool!" exclaimed the lady. "What a strange name!"

"He has no other. And that is what he is. Your little foot-stool." He whispered in the brown ear. The child dropped on his round belly and wriggled to the lady's feet, turning his head toward the Governor, begging for approval with a black bright eye.

Now the Casks Were Broached and the Feast Begun.

"There you are! Put your feet on him, Lady. Do not be afraid. That is what he is for, he has been trained for you, the little savage."

Eulalia put one foot, then the other, gingerly on the small round body, then relaxed.

"Ah," she laughed, "he is a comfortable Escabellito! This is nice of you, your Excellency. Queens and the mistresses of kings have their little blackmoors, and I have my wee Indian."

The Governor bowed low.

"Right and fitting, Dona Eulalia."

"Ah, my heart, my beautiful—more beautiful than I remembered in my most solitary lonely dreams—"

Now the casks were broached, the wine and brandy flowed and the feast began.

During the feast Fages sat where he could see Eulalia, watching the firelight brighten the little Maja jacket, and wink on the bright buttons. Watched her hands as she ate fastidiously.

Then, when venison, antelope, quail, rabbits, frijoles, tortillas, and dried fruits were mere scraps, an old leather-jacket began plucking music by the roots out of his guitar —a guitar that had traveled from the province of Catalonia in Spain, across the Atlantic, across Mexico, and up and down the Californias, Baja and Alta. Voices rose in the beloved songs of the old country, soldiers' songs, gipsies' roundelays and haunting Oriental strains that had persisted in Spain since the days of the Moors.

Pedro Fages lifted a horn of wine.

"I give you a toast, my men! To his Majesty King Carlos the Third of Spain, and to his Royal Spouse!"

They drank the toast standing, amid cheers.

The Governor refilled his horn.

"And I give you Eulalia, the Queen of the Californias!"

He dronk deeply, then threw the empty horn into the dying fire.

Stooping lightly, he lifted Eulalia from the dais, held her aloft a moment, then strode away with her to the tent.

CHAPTER IX

Early one morning couriers had dashed into the presidio at San Diego announcing that El Senor Gobernador and his lady, La Gobernadora, were at the very gates of the citadel.

Lieutenant Jose de Zuniga, in charge of the presidio, issued orders right and left. There must be royal entertainment prepared, and at once! A dispatch must be sent to good Padre Lasuen at the mission to come and celebrate a thanksgiving for the distinguished travelers; he must bring his Indian musicians. There would be music, dancing; food must be prepared — a bull slaughtered. The arms and equipment of the little garrison must be in perfect order. Guns must be made ready for salutes.

The women listened to the Commander's orders, nodded among themselves and went to work. The Indian servants stared in stupid wonder. Never had they seen the gente so hard at work. Such a scrubbing and cleaning, such an aroma of food in the air!

Carefully hoarded clothes — for who could tell when they could be replaced?—were drawn from chests where they reposed from funeral to funeral, christening to christening. The best silk quilts and bed furnishings were carried to the room set apart for the almost-royal guest-chamber. When all this was done; and the children cleaned and dressed, the women-folk fixed their men-folk's hair; trimmed it, combed it, braided it into queues.

Suddenly there was a volley of shots, a prancing of hoofs, shouts and cries; and the caravan came in sight. The people of San Diego pressed forward to see—there was El Gobernador—Don Pedro himself, his brown eyes twinkling, his mouth stern, riding proudly between his lady and his son.

"Ah, his son!" they chattered. "That would be Pedro the Younger of course. A princeling, yes, a princeling. But look you—the lady —La Gobernadora!"

La Gobernadora rode into the compound proudly, head high, eyes level. She saw the jolly clamor around the Governor, a respectful intimacy that established at once in her mind the relations of her husband with these people that he governed. She did not approve of it—this backslapping and joking. After all he was the Governor, the King's own representative in this province and should demand and receive more dignified attention.

For a moment she looked around her. The adobe stockade was lined with huts that followed the contours of the hills. Living quarters, storehouses, chapel, huddled under the flag of Spain. To the east great mountains, the Cuyamacas and Palomar, lifted profound white brows into the sunset sky—remote, impassable.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SOCIETY

Sunday morning service, 10:45.

Meets first Wednesday evening each month at 7:45 p. m.

Reading room open Saturday, 3 to 5 p. m.

"Substance" will be the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Christian Science Churches throughout the world on Sunday, March 13.

The Golden Text, from Philippians 4:19, is "My God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus."

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Hebrews 11:1): "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 468): "Substance is that which is eternal and incapable of discord and decay. Spirit, the synonym of Mind, Soul, or God, is the only real substance."

SCHOOLS STUDING BREAD INGREDIENTS

Michigan Bakeries Furnish Material; Beet Sugar

To augment the Baking File, which is part of an educational program sponsored by Michigan Bakeries, Inc. and which has been placed in several schools for use in project studies, supplementary material is being prepared to fill teachers' requests.

The material consists of more exhaustive facts relating to the various ingredients of bread such as salt, sugar, malt, milk, flour, and yeast.

The use of beet sugar which is a leading homestate product is covered in the first of these supplementary booklets. Leading refineries, located at Sebewaing, Lansing, Holland, Caro, Mount Pleasant, Saginaw, Bay City, Alma, St. Louis, Mount Clemens, Blissfield and Menominee, are specifically mentioned.

Information as to the growth of sugar beets, the extraction of sugar beet juice and the methods of evaporation of the syrup, crystallization and separation of the raw sugar, is also set forth for lesson study.

Among the Michigan-grown products used in all six of the bakeries owned and operated by Michigan Bakeries, Inc. are salt, sugar, bran, cherries, and potatoes. These bakeries are at Grand Rapids, Kalamazoo, Muskegon, Battle Creek, Jackson and Traverse City. At Grand Rapids, the Company has its own bakery laboratory, which is the only one in the state. It serves all plants of Michigan Bakeries, Inc.

MICHIGAN STATE WILL SCAN STATE FUR CROP

State Project to Determine Value of Farm Trapping

First major research project undertaken by the recently organized Institute of Conservation at Michigan State College is to be a survey to determine if farmers can obtain additional revenue from the trapping of fur bearing animals and also continue to keep farming profitable.

Approval of a project for these studies as outlined by Don E. Hayne, assistant in zoology research, has been granted by the institute and by the department of zoology and the agricultural experiment station.

Estimates of the state department of conservation place an annual value of $1,200,000 on the fur crop taken in Michigan. More than two-thirds of this income seems to be obtained by trappers in forminnd counties south of a line running from Ludington to Bay City.

Hayne proposes to find out what portion of the fur crop in this southern part of the state is trapped on farm lands. He also wants to know what part of this income is going to farmers and whether the farmers' share can be increased without interfering with the use and operation of the land for agricultural production.

First work is to be started soon in Ingham county. Estimates are to be obtained from farmers, trappers and fur dealers to supplement information now available in the state department of conservation.

STANDARD DEALERS ARE NOW HANDLING QUAKER STATE OILS

Charlevoix Standard Oil dealers are now selling Quaker State oils and greases in addition to Standard lubricants, C. S. Webster, Standard Oil agent, announced today.

Standard Oil Company of Indiana has become distributor for Quaker State Oil Refining corporation, C. S. Webster explained, and local stations are offering the products because many Charlevoix automobile drivers and other consumers prefer lubricants made from Pennsylvania crude oils.

Standard Oil is recommending Quaker State oils and greases, he said, as the highest quality, best advertised nationally and most widely distributed Pennsylvania lubricants.

Be advised that "the naked truth" never pleases anybody. It is always best to dress it in a thin veil of flattery or a dash of exaggeration.

GUNDRY CONDEMNS UNTRUE TAX PROPAGANDA

Cites There Will Be No Sale of Property Where Receipts Are Held

Auditor General George T. Gundry condemned what he termed "alarmists and propagandists", who he said were creating apprehension through untruthful statements regarding the forthcoming tax sale.

Gundry said, "Those taxpayers who hold receipts showing that they have paid the taxes that are due, can thank their alarmist friends for their lively interest and forget them. If a taxpayer's property is advertised as delinquent, that advertisement should mean exactly nothing if he holds paid tax receipts. All that has happened in such a case is that the public bookkeeping got behind in the unprecedented tax rush of last fall, and the advertising lists were compiled, by necessity, before all of the payments could be entered on the record."

Gundry pointed out that no law on the statute books of the State of Michigan will maintain a cloud on the title to a parcel of land for tax reasons if a proper receipt is held.

One of the special activities being held in connection with the programs is a wildlife essay contest for school children, sponsored by the committee in cooperation with the state department of public instruction and the conservation department.

WASHINGTON NEWSLETTER

By Congressman John Luecke

Washington, D. C., March 5, 1938

War and Taxes

The big navy bill and the 1938 general revenue act held the spotlight in Congress this week in the House. In the Senate the President's re-organization bill struck much hard going and much will be said pro and con before it comes up for a vote. But insiders say that it will pass with none to spare.

The big navy bill is on the House calendar and the fireworks it will provoke on the floor will be as noisy as the proposed navy in action should it ever get that far. War sentiment in Congress can be judged by the number of bills which have been considered for war purposes. That is the discouraging thing. Why all these bills? Six major war bills will be considered by this Congress, to-wit: regular navy, big navy, army reserve; regular army! navy college for physicians and surgeons; and, lastly, the war profits bill which is a conscription measure in times of peace.

Naval Affairs

In its first formal action the House Naval Affairs Committee yesterday earmarked a $15,000,000 experimental fund in the billion-dollar naval expansion bill to include aviation and to permit the Navy to make additional experimental contracts up to $15,000,000.

Meeting behind closed doors, the members voted to earmark $3,000,000 of the experimental fund for the construction of a 3,000,000 cubic foot capacity dirigible to replace the decommissioned Los Angeles; seven million dollars for experiments in lighter than air, heavier than air craft, torpedoes, aerial mines and any other inventions; and five million dollars for the construction of experimental service vessels in the "mosquito fleet" class, with the limitation of 3,000 tons per vessel.

A two-hour wrangle over a proposal to prevent the fleet from advancing beyond mid-Pacific or mid-Atlantic for "hostile operations" blocked anticipated approval of the billion dollar Naval Expansion bill by the House Naval Affairs Committee yesterday.

After a heated session the committee rejected by a vote of 16 to 6 the so-called "Prize Ring" amendment sponsored by Rep. Knutfin (D-Ohio) designed to prohibit the use of the fleet in foreign waters.

Earlier, according to Chairman Vinson (D-Ga.) the members had defeated a proposal by Rep. Sutphin (D-N.J.) that the amendment also specify that all naval vessels be withdrawn immediately from Chinese waters.

Taxes

The 1938 General Revenue Act is before the House. It contains 319 pages. Five pages are used for the index. It doesn't miss a trick and every revenue act heretofore passed is in the bill. That is the reason for its length. In that way all tax legislation is bound into one volume to simplify matters.

Three separate reports will be filed in the House. In addition to the majority and minority reports, Reps. McCormack (D-Mass.) and Lamneck will file a statement opposing the proposed penalty tax on family and closely held corporations.

The bill, which was introduced by Chairman Doughton, culminates a long battle over the 1936 undistributed profits tax. Headlights of the new bill are:

1. Eliminates undistributed profits tax for corporations earning $25,000 a year or less and substitutes tax as follows: First $5,000 12½%; next $15,000, 14%; next $5,000, 16%.

2. Substitutes mild undistributed profits tax for corporations earning $25,000, the tax ranging from 16 to 20 per cent, decreasing as dividend distributions rise.

3. Imposes special penalty undistributed profits tax upon family or closely held corporations, with basic rate of 20 per cent.

4. Abandons present capital gains tax based upon individual income tax rates. Substitutes a scale which caused effective rates to vary from 16 to 20 per cent.

The Administration study of revision of the undistributed profits tax, widely assailed as causing strangulation of corporation expansion, was begun last November by a subcommittee headed by Rep. Vinson (D.Ky.). He has remained on the job although he has been appointed a judge of the United States Court of Appeals here.

Republican members of the Ways and Means Committee planned to file a minority report, assailing the entire undistributed profits tax theory and accusing the Administration of devising a "face saving" bill to cover up the failure of this tax.

No Head for Business

By HAZEL R. LANGDALE

THAT'S what they said about Anthony Jenkins when he was a young man.

"He's handsome, he's good at sports, and he's a winner with the girls, but he doesn't know the difference between a first mortgage and a gilt edge security." Those words of Aline's father summed him up, and were spoken when Aline's mother first began to suspect that there was something more than mere friendly feeling between Aline and Tony, she had gone to her husband with the information.

"He's got a way with him, that fellow," admitted the father of Joyce Milbank, "but I don't want him for a son-in-law." That was on the occasion when Anthony sought Mr. Milbank's daughter in marriage; in those days when sometimes a young man did go to the young woman's father before getting the license. He had rebounded from Aline to Joyce, and was allowed to have neither of them.

So Tony, at thirty-five, was still single. Once or twice he had seemed started on the road to success and likewise to matrimony.

He had held down several jobs which promised something some time. But before they could make good, Tony always up and left them. "Got restless for a change," he would tell his inquiring, anxious, and, it must be admitted, disgusted friends.

Because his expenses were small, he would have saved up a little cash. This he would always draw and blow in until it was gone and he must secure another job or starve.

Those intervals between jobs he spent in various ways. Once he took a month's trip to South America. Once he travelled as student tourist through Norway and Sweden. And finally he bought a second-hand flivver, ran it across the continent, sold it in San Francisco, booked passage for Hawaii, and ultimately came home as stoker on an ocean liner making a round-the-world cruise.

But in Hawaii something occurred which changed the course of Tony's life.

She had driven up in her imported Italian roadster, and was sitting alone at a small table when Anthony drifted in and helped himself to the table opposite. Across their salad of nigoroba pears, their glances met, lingered, and met again.

She finished her meal before Anthony finished his, and shortly after she had risen he heard the purr of her engine.

Twenty minutes later, idling back in his hired car, he came upon her pulled off to one side of the road. She gave him to understand that she was in need of assistance, preferably transportation to her home, where she could send back her father's chauffeur for the derelict.

Melanie presented her rescuer to her father in a casual sort of way, and J. B. Fremont, who never tried to catalogue his daughter's young men, accepted him at face value, than which he could have done nothing more flattering for Tony.

A month later, driven to utterance by a velvet moon rising out of a plush ocean by the insinuating strains of a Hawaiian love song strummed on a dozen steel guitars on the club verandah behind them, and by the adorable nearness of Melanie on the sands beside him, Anthony poured forth his love.

Then, forestalling quite sternly a confession of reciprocating passion that trembled on the girl's lovely lips, he told her hoarsely he could never marry her, that he was too poor to marry any woman, and that he would love her, and her alone, to the day of his death.

Next morning he begged a stoker's job on the Carmenia, which docked for a brief few hours in Honolulu, and sailed, leaving his heart in Hawaii.

When, a year later, he reached home he found exactly 52 letters from Melanie and an official document from Washington, appointing him a commission of one to visit South America and later to Hawaii, to study the parasite that kills the parasite that kills the infant pineapple.

Oh, yes, Tony took the job and the last news we heard of him came from the lips of a man that had been a classmate of mine, as well as Anthony's.

"They're ideally happy," he said thoughtfully, speaking of Melanie and Tony, who had now been married 10 years. "When Fremont died, Anthony had sense enough not to try to run the business himself, but sold out to his rivals for a few cool million. And then—well, he hired me to make suitable investments and then look after them. They always said the boy had no head for business, but somehow he seems to have gotten by."

"Oh, yes," I said; with what I know was a wry smile, as I recalled the respective year book prophecies made for Tony and me by our short-sighted peers. "He seems to have gotten by."

LOCAL DEALERS JOIN USED CAR EXCHANGE

By this means it is hoped to revive manufacture of new cars, thereby increasing employment in the industry.

Many cities are staging huge parades and have instituted various publicity features to call attention to the event. Proclamation from national down the state and community are supporting the drive.

In class D, Pellston had the hard route. They won from Indian River by a 18 to 10 score, and eliminated Boyne Falls by a 41 to 23 count in second round play. It is of interest to note that Indian River's 6-man team included all boys in the high school which goes to the tenth grade. Mackinaw City gained the class D finals with a 17 to 16 victory over Alanson.

While school officials have not given out any report, it is believed the tournament attendance was light. At none of the sessions was the number of spectators equal to the crowd which saw the Charlevoix-Boyne City tilt here a week previous.

CHARLEVOIX WINS REGIONAL HONORS

COPPED CLASS C BASKETBALL TITLE AT PETOSKEY TO ENTER STATE QUARTER-FINALS AT BIG RAPIDS

Alpena Defeated Traverse City to Win Class B Crown—Roscommon Eliminated Traverse City St. Francis in Class D—Charlevoix Has Wonderful Record

Victorious over two upponents in the regional basketball tournament at Petoskey, Charlevoix's Red Rayders advanced to the state class C quarter-finals.

The team will play Sterling, Mt. Pleasant class C winner, at 8:30 o'clock Thursday evening in the Ferris gym at Big Rapids and, if victorious, will go on to Grand Rapids for the semi-finals Friday night.

The regional tournament favorites after winning the Little Eight class C conference title and the district tournament held here, the Rayders became Coach Kipke's fifth aggregation to advance to the state finals. In placing among the eight best class C teams in Michigan, the Rayders won the honor as the culmination of one of the most outstanding records produced by a Charlevoix basketball team. That they have championship caliber is the firm belief of all Charlevoix fans as well as northern Michigan critics generally.

Win Over Grayling

In their first round game at the regional, the Rayders eliminated Grayling by a 38 to 17 score. They led 14 to 3 at the quarter, 23 to 8 at the half and 30 to 12 at the third intermission. Coach Kipke used four replacements during the contest.

Carey sank nine field goals and two free throws for a total of 20 points. Richardson followed with 7. Gallagher 5, Brown 4 and Bergmann 2. Charlevoix made 4 of 15 chances from the foul line, Grayling 5 out of 10. Charlevoix was charged with 7 personal fouls, Grayling 11.

Rogers City Tough Foe

In Rogers City, class C winner at Alpena, the Rayders found their strongest opponent of the season. Trailing in the first period, Bergmann's two goals and Carey's free throw brought the score to 5-all at the quarter. The Rayders, giving their best exhibition during the contest, counted 11 points in the second period while holding Rogers City scoreless. The lead proved sufficient even though the losers had the best of a 15 to 14 count in the second half.

Carey, although injured in the early moments of the game, scored 16 points to lead his team. Richardson, Gallagher and Bergmann tallied 4 each and Brown 2. All gave wonderful offensive and defensive performances. Brown stood out in stopping Schultz, who played an outstanding game for Rogers City.

Other Tournament Results

Alpena defeated Traverse City 24 to 18 to win the class B finals. Roscommon continued an undefeated record to eliminate the scrappy Traverse City St. Francis outfit 22 to 18 in the class D finals.

While winning the district and regional tournaments, Charlevoix continued to pile up a scoring record unparalleled in local basketball history. They counted 174 points to 78 for their opponents in four tournament games. The season's record was 714 to 283. Adding to his pre-tournament total of 210 points, Carey tallied 79 in four tournament tilts for an aggregate of 289, which is an average of 17 points for every game.

TOWNSHIPS GIVE RURAL ELECTRIC FRANCHISES

Confirmation of Board Action Before Voters at April Election

According to an announcement by Leon Miller, Petoskey, counsel for the Top O' Michigan Rural Electric Company, franchises to construct and operate lines and retail business in 33 townships in Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego counties were granted from March 8 to 12 by township boards.

The matter of confirming these franchises will be submitted to the electors of each township at the regular elections to be held April 4th.

CHICAGO EXHIBIT BRINGS RESULTS

TOURIST ASSOCIATION REPORT IS VERY ENCOURAGING

Charlevoix's Three Representatives at National Boat Show Give Out 5,000 Folders

Increased tourist business from Chicago will come as a result of the participation by the four tourist associations and the State of Michigan in the Boat and Sportsman's show at Navy Pier, Chicago, which closed recently, according to a report made by Ed. Dreier to Hugh J. Gray, secretary-manager of the West Michigan Tourist and Resort Association.

According to the report there was an increased interest on the part of Chicagoans in spending their vacations in Michigan. The attendance at the Pier was a pay crowd (admission was 40 cents) and it exceeded by 40 percent the attendance at any other attraction ever staged there.

Charlevoix was well represented at the Michigan exhibit by Gordun Todd secretary of the Board of Commerce, Bob Miles, member of the advertising committee, and Don Clothier, widely known fishing guide of Charlevoix. Between the three of them they handed out approximately 5,000 Charlevoix folders and answered more thousands of inquiries about vacations in the City Beautiful. Clothier gave out almost as many folders on his Trolling Camp.

One interesting phase of the Chicago show was the fact that Clothier discovered for the first time the large amount of business he has been doing from the Chicago region. He had also participated in the Detroit show but he found three times as many of his former guests in Chicago called at the booth to renew acquaintances and plan new trips for this summer.

In a letter just received from Mr. Clothier he said, "I watched, very closely, the reaction of the people who passed our booth, and I am convinced that there is no better way of putting Michigan before them than this and I really believe that the Association should not pass up an opportunity of placing displays of this nature before the public."

K. of P. to Honor Local Cagers—Seek Harry Kipke as Speaker

Following a custom inaugurated several years ago, Pine Lake Lodge No. 122, Knights of Pythias, will honor Charlevoix's basketball team at a banquet scheduled for Thursday evening, March 24th.

Winners of the Little Eight class C conference, district and regional titles, the squad this week is seeking state honors. In view of the team's record, one of the most outstanding in local basketball history, the banquet honoring the team takes on added significance.

The possibility that Harry Kipke, former head football coach at the University of Michigan and brother of Coach Ray "Stub" Kipke, will be the banquet speaker, is good, although at this time cannot be definitely announced.

WOMEN'S CLUBS HEAR FINE TALK ON CHINA

Shakespeare and Dickens Clubs at Joint Meeting Monday

The Shakespeare Study Club, as guests of the Charles Dickens Club, were entertained Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Robert F. Sloan.

Speaker of the afternoon was Russell Jacobus of Traverse City, who spoke on his experiences in the naval service, submarine division, while stationed in China. Members were given a general idea of the life and duties of a sailor and of the deplorable conditions in China. Mr. Jacobus stated that tourists are never allowed on many of the streets the sailors patrol every hour of the day and therefore are not conscious of the low moral, mental and physical state of the average Chinese.

Members of both clubs felt they were very fortunate in being able to hear Mr. Jacobus' impressions and observations of "Life on the Chinese Waterfront."

Prof. James Hayes, extension specialist in dairying at Michigan State College, proved one of the most interesting speakers the Kiwanis has heard in some time. The topic of his address was "Believe It Or Not," which, among other most educational points, revealed how a cow can eat green grass, yellow corn, etc., and produce white milk. Prof. Hayes justified his reputation as a humorous talker.

INJUNCTION HALTS DIESEL PURCHASE

CITY RESTRAINED BY TEMPORARY COURT ORDER FROM ACCEPTING BID ON MUNICIPAL POWER PLANT UNIT

William F. Meyer Plaintiff in Action — Hearing Set for 10 O'clock Friday Morning — Injunction Culminates Discord Between Council and Citizens' Committee

Action of the city council on the purchase of a Diesel engine authorized at a special election February 7 as an addition to the municipal power plant, was halted Tuesday night by a temporary injunction.

William F. Meyer is plaintiff in the action. The injunction was signed by Judge Parm C. Gilbert of Traverse City, and the hearing was set for 10 o'clock Friday morning.

The bill of complaint charges that the city council has failed to keep faith with the public by excluding from its deliberations on the purchase members of a citizens' committee previously invited to act with the council in the public's interests. This contention is based upon statements in an advertisement in the Charlevoix Courier which read: "All equipment, machinery and materials will be purchased from bids submitted and having the recommendation of the engineers and the approval of the council and citizens' committee."

The complaint further states that it appears the city council has taken action to buy an engine at a price in excess of that which an engine meeting the requirements could be purchased on the open market; that the engineer's specifications fail to provide for guarantees on fuel consumption and maintenance; that the $50 per day penalty for failure on delivery of the engine in time for operation this summer fails to protect the public from a loss which might equal $500 per day; that the city council does not protect public interests because of failure to be guided by recommendations of the engineers.

The complaint asks, "that the city council be ordered to show cause, if any there is, why they should not be restrained by order and injunction of the court from proceeding hastily and contrary to law and contrary to the best interests of the city in accepting the bid which they have announced they are going to accept without giving the same proper consideration."

The council has retained Attorney Arthur Fitch to assist City Attorney Rollie L. Lewis in Friday's court action which will determine whether or not a permanent injunction restraining the council from purchasing a Diesel engine be granted.

REORGANIZATION BILL DANGEROUS

GIVES PRESIDENT UNPRECEDENTED POWERS

Urge Public to Signify Opposition to Senator Brown, Who Holds One of Eight Controlling Votes

Senator Prentiss M. Brown holds one of the eight votes that will pass or defeat the Executive Reorganization bill, according to the National Committee to uphold Constitutional Government.

Those who have carefully studied this measure say it is as dangerous to the liberties of this country as the "court packing" bill. Those who remember the fight against that bill and Senator Brown's final decision to vote against it, are of the opinion he will show the same courage in the present instance and again vote "no". His constituents, regardless of party, should let him know by wire or letter that they will stand behind him if he comes out against the bill.

Briefly, the bill destroys the comptroller general's office and breaks the control of Congress over the spending of public funds. It also destroys the non-partisan commission in control of civil service and places 600,000 civil service employes under a commissioner appointed by the executive.

It gives the President many additional blanket powers and if passed in its original form, would transform the government into a dictatorship.

A mandate from home is what is needed now to let Congress know the attitude of the public toward the bill.

Willard's death occurred last Saturday at Detroit, and funeral services were conducted Monday at Lansing. A brother, Marshall Weaver of Chicago, accompanied the body here.

Mr. Weaver, nephew of Capt. George W. Weaver, was well known here as a frequent summer visitor.

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

More taxes, not less, are in prospect for Michigan as the result of new developments.

All employers will be asked in 1939 to pay unemployment compensation taxes. The state law at present exempts employers who have less than eight workers on their payrolls from the state levy. Extension of social security benefits to cover 300,000 workers in small business has been advocated consistently by Frank Picard, chairman of the state unemployment compensation commission. In an address before the AFL annual banquet in Detroit last week, Governor Murphy voiced his approval to Picard's request as a legislative plank for 1939.

Personal property, including household furniture, would be placed on the tax rolls in Michigan if valued more than $1,000 under plans of John N. Fegan, chairman, state tax commission. Fegan's declaration that he intends to enforce the personal property law, enacted in 1893, stirred a rebellion at the state capitol city where the board of assessors

Mr. and Mrs. Gerrit Sloothaak and family have moved to their new farm near Atwood the past week. Mr. and Mrs. Sloothaak lived in this neighborhood for eight years, and are well and favorably known, and as we said before, we hate to see our good neighbors leave, but wish them success in their new place.

CENTRAL LAKE

More like Spring weather.

Mr. and Mrs. James Williams of Manecelona, were callers in Central Lake last week.

Democrats will probably have their caucus next Saturday. It was changed from Citizens to Democrats.

Prayer meeting, at which many from Central Lake attended, was held at the Wm. Loniselle home at Torch Lake last Friday evening.

The Methodist church ladies of Central Lake had special services at their church last Sunday evening when a church exercise was given.

Forest Dewey and family of Ellsworth, called at the John Dawson home at Central Lake, and at the Walter Anderson home at Creswell, last week.

We hear that Miss Virginia Anderson of Alden has been retained as teacher at Creswell for next year. Miss Anderson is an up-to-date teacher, and is well liked by the school patrons.

J. A. Triplett of Eastport was a Bellaire caller last week. We hear that the present teacher, Mrs. Taibal, will not remain at Eastport another year and that William Austin of Bellaire, or Harvey Harter of Central Lake, may be engaged to teach there.

Miss Evelyn Champany of Manecelona County Normal, has been hired to teach at Bay View next year. Loper; highway commissioner, Wm. Roberts; board of review, Roy Rushton; constables, Jack Muckle, Don Buhland, John Berry.

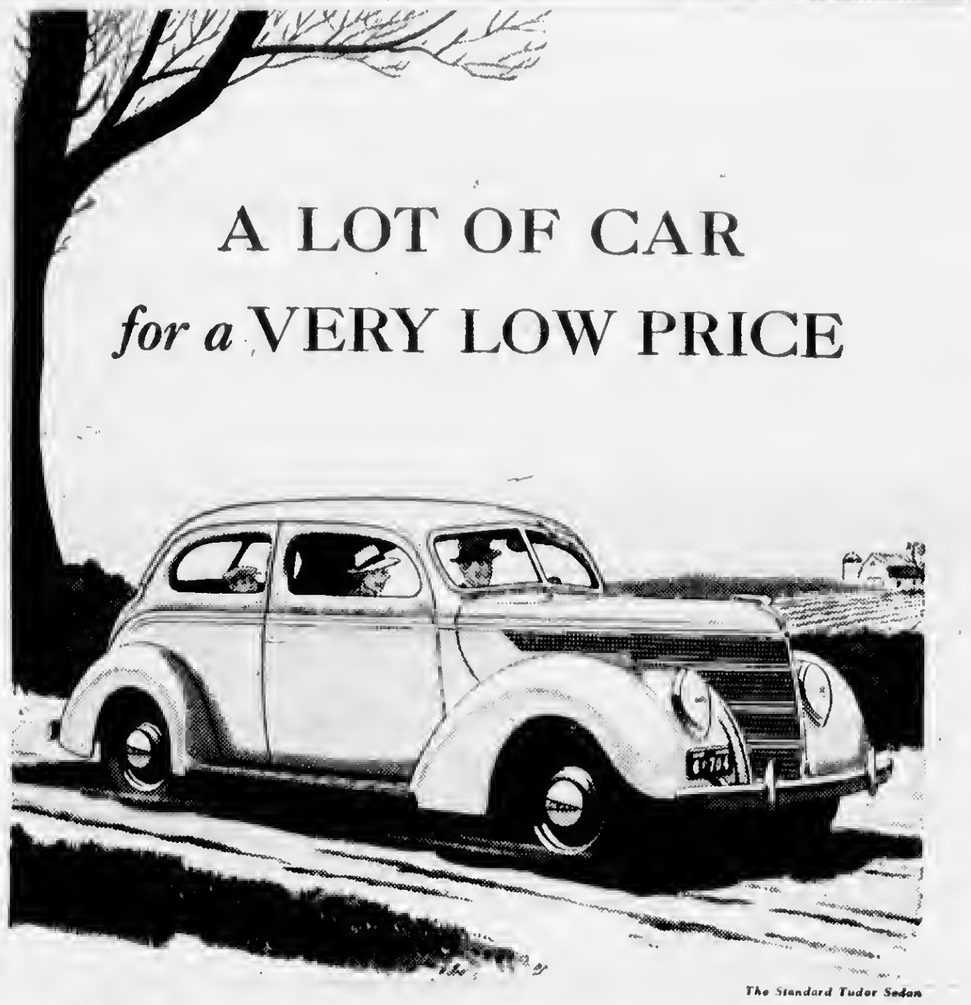
Why shouldn't we have a navy second to none? We already have a national debt second-to-none.



A LOT OF CAR

The Standard Tudor Sedan

The Ford effort to make your dollars buy a constantly better car is well illustrated in the Standard Ford V-8.

It has all the basic Ford advantages. It is built on the same chassis as the De Luxe Ford V-8. It gives you a choice of smooth 85-horsepower or 60-horsepower V-8 engines. But it sells at low prices, and includes bumpers, spare tire, cigar lighter, twin horns and other equipment that make it a still bigger bargain.

With the thrifty 60-horsepower engine, the Standard Ford V-8 is priced especially low and gives the greatest gas mileage in Ford history. Hundreds of owners report averages of 22 to 27 miles a gallon — or even more.

Your pocketbook will approve of the Standard Ford in every way. And so will you when you drive it!

"SUPPOSE I get sick? After all, I'm only human. And if I do get a touch of colic . . . or have a nervous break-down . . . do you know what'll bring it on? Worry! Yes sir, worrying about how long it would take us to get the doctor.

"Or suppose the house catches on fire? When you need the Fire Department nowadays you don't write a letter, or go after them on a mule. No sir. You hop to a telephone!

"And what about my mother? She's got marketing to do. She has to take advantage of the bargain sales. Sometimes she needs to get in touch with Dad during the day. And there are errands to be run. Well, she can't do all those things without a telephone . . . and at the same time give me the attention I expect.

"All Dad would have to do is call the Telephone Business Office. I'd do it myself if I could just get out to a pay station. But I can't. . . . So is it any wonder that worry is keeping me awake half the day?"

Does Spring begin on March 20th?...or on the 21st? "Begin it today!" pleads your engine. "Bleed out my Winter-poisoned oil. But this Spring help me with more than an oil-change. Change to Your Mileage Merchant! And that's changing to Conoco Germ Processed oil—the only way to change me into an OIL-PLATED engine."

You want this modern exclusive OIL-PLATING because especially in Summer your steady driving demands more than the plain old type of oil-film that slithers OFF the working parts like drops of quicksilver. Exactly the opposite is achieved by the Germ Process—patented. It makes droplets of oil act like a billion tiny suction cups, powerfully attracted and OIL-PLATED to every working surface... Never draining down, never inviting friction, no matter how many thousands of starts and thousands of miles you make all Spring and Summer. CHAPTER IX

Prison walls shuddered the lady.

To the west the South Sea spread like a carpet of red gold clear to the setting sun. Into it old Point Loma plowed like the prow of a ship.

So this was California Alta—and here was she, at last. . .

Fray Mariano and Fray Bartolome were being led away, after a joyful greeting from Padre Lasuen, to their quarters. They too looked about them doubtfully.

"So this is California Alta!" whispered Fray Mariano. "What next?"

"Sh-h!" warned his brother as Padre Lasuen overtook them. They walked beside him, hands clasped piously over their stomachs, their eyes cast downward.

After a thanksgiving service in the chapel, there was a merry feast in the quarters of the Lieutenant Zuniga that night. The food was good, wine flowed and the Indians from the Mission San Diego de Alcala made amazing music.

Eulalia was dazed; tired, a little ill. But the Governor was in fine fettle. Over and over he told of the long journey north, relating news of this one and of that, praising La Gobernadora's courage and fortitude. Every one hung on his words, laughed at his sallies, encouraged him to talk; occasionally they would address her gallantly, but she was unresponsive.

She wanted to retire. Angustias, where was she? Talking animbly in a corner with the fat wife of the sergeant. They were chatting confidentially, laughing, whispering with arched eyebrows. Even Pedro the Younger, and the little Indian Escabellito, were busy friend-making. Eulalia could hear their voices out-of-doors, screaming and laughing at some game.

Every one was gay but she. She couldn't bear it.

"Your Excellency!" she called peremptorily to her husband.

He came to her.

"Well, my dear, he said jovially, "isn't this fine! Ah, the kind friendly hearts of my people—my friends! Don't they warm your heart?" He was flushed with wine.

"Pedro," Eulalia said warningly, "be careful. You are so full of wine you need no more warming. But I am not warm. I am cold, and tired, and oh, how I want to go to bed. Please, Pedro, may I be excused? Will the gentlemen pardon me?"

"But—but," sputtered the Governor, "all the ladies have been waiting to talk with you."

"But I'm so weary, Pedro."

"You mustn't disappoint them. Just a few moments, my dear, visit with the ladies."

"Ladies!" La Gobernadora flared at him. "Ladies! Soldiers' women."

"Eulalia!"

"Camp followers!"

"Eulalia, hush! Stop this at once." His mouth tightened. "I will not permit you to speak this way," he went on in a low tone. "You are tired, I know. Perhaps you had better retire now. But tomorrow you must see them. You will make them some little gifts, you must be kind, cordial to them."

"I must?" She was trembling.

"You must. Those are my orders. The orders of the Governor of the Californias, eh, my little Gobernadora? Run along to bed." He beckoned to Angustias who left her gossip reluctantly.

Eulalia bit her lips to control their trembling and strained her eyes to keep back a rush of tears.

"Oh, oh! How could he . . . how dare he . . . Dios mio . . ." A nausea gripped her. The low-ceiled room, close with smoke and tobacco and fumes of wine, swam before her. Her limbs quaked, and her hands were clammy, but she rose gracefully from her chair. The company sprang to their feet.

"Viva la Gobernadora!" toasted the men.

She managed a graceful bow, and left the room, Angustias in her wake, eying her anxiously.

The women gathered in corners and whispered, then slipped away, leaving the men to their talk.

Don Pedro watched his wife depart, with a slight frown, and a doubtful unhappy feeling in his heart. Then he strode to the table and poured himself another cup of wine.

"By heaven'" he roared, "you San Diegans make the best wine I ever drank' Look at it, clear, sparkling, ruby-red! And how it warms a man's heart after a long wearisome journey I tell you, my friends, there is no vintage to match it in Italy, or Mexico, or Mother Spain herself!" He raised his glass "To the wine of California' And to California herself!"

"Viva! Viva! Viva!"

"A moment, my brothers, before we proceed . . ." All turned toward the speaker. It was the newly arrived Franciscan, Fray Mariano Rubi. ". . . I am a newcomer here . . . that is to say, I have been sent here . . . among you, as a . . . I am . . . I want to propose a toast, also. I . . . say, a toast to California . . . her grapes . . . her wine . . ." He turned to his brother friar who had risen beside him and token his arm.

"What was I . . . about to say . . . eh, mi veijo?" he asked.

Padre Lasuen was watching him with dawning horror in his fine old eyes.

"Come, come, my Brother," Fray Bartolome murmured thickly, looking wildly around at the company. "Come . . . you must rest . . . He is tired," he explained, "I shall put him to bed. I have often done so. I mean I must assist him to his devotions . . . pardon us, please . . ." The two tottered from the hall, Fray Mariano still trying to remember the toast he had composed.

The Governor had risen to his feet, his face congested with varied emotions. Across from him Father Lasuen stood and looked at him with a white face.

"Why, your Excellency!" he stammered. "Your Excellency! What means this? Are these men priests? Franciscans?"

Lasuen wrung his hands, as the rest of the company sat silent, looking at the two. "But, Don Pedro, are those the two for whom Holy Father Serra has prayed day and night for months? If they are, Fray Fermin Lasuen, it is Satan and not Heaven who has sent them. With them came dispatches from the Fernandine College in Mexico City saying they were being sent to California as a punishment for their sins. And the report went on to say that they were the scandal of the college, had broken every rule, committed every sin, petty or grand, even to scaling the walls of the dormitory and going abroad in the city at night, scarcely on deeds of virtue bent."

"My poor Brother Junipero!" grieved Lasuen.

Fages sighed heavily; all the heartiness had fled from his manner.

"I find I am too tired to discuss this further tonight. If you will excuse me, I will retire now. Perhaps a new sun will bring a new light to my problems. Buenas noches!"

Once in her quarters, the control that had held La Gobernadora in leash vanished.

She paced the narrow floor, she wept; Angustias stood by helplessly.

"Did you hear him, Angustias? How did he dare speak to me that way! Ordering me about as though I were a slave, an Indian! Oh, how can I live? Oh, Angustias, what shall I do? Where shall I go? Here I am, a helpless prisoner, tied to a brute of a husband, in this terrible place. Oh, my God, Angustias, say something, I can't stand this . . . I shall lose my mind . . ."

She fell across the bed sobbing. Angustias went to her.

"Now, nina, now, now. Coma. If Don Pedro scolded you, it is only because he loves you so much. You mustn't behave this way. In the condition you are in . . ."

"I Shall Lose My Mind."

The lady whirled on her.

"What do you know about my condition? What do you mean?"

WHO'S IT

We listened the other day to some chap on the radio who said the New Deal had done a lot of blasting at entrenched wealth but so far had failed to do anything else about it. How true. We have been telling the natives of this section the same thing for the past number of years. All this brother-skite against economic royalists, the 60 families, etc., is just so much hokum being dished up for smoke screen effects, and to edify the gullible.

You can be assured that we would not worry one single bit if any of the so-called big bugs had been made to suffer along with the rest of us common people. But they have not been hurt one little bit. It is still Mr. John Q. average middle class American that is being made the sucker in this spurious deal we are getting down at Washington. And, if he is to survive the onslaught which is being made on his pocket-book by the present crowd of vultures down there, he better begin immdiately to do something about it.

USE ADAPTED SEED U. S. REQUIREMENT

Necessary to Receive Payment in Soil Conservation Program

Seed for alfalfa and red clover seedings for which payment will be requested under the 1938 agricultural conservation program must be adapted seed, according to Charles D. Shepard, chairman of the Charlevoix County Agricultural Conservation Committee.

This means that the seed should be northern grown. The best seed for Michigan is that which is grown in Michigan, Wisconsin, Utah, Montana and other northern states and Canada.

When farmers purchase seed this spring, they should have executed the special seed form to establish evidence to be used in claiming payment under the program. This form can be obtained at the county office at Boyne City, and is to be signed by the person from whom the seed was obtained, whether it was purchased from a dealer, a grower, or was seed used by a farmer who produced his own.

These forms have already been placed in the hands of the various seed dealers in the county and for your own protection be sure and have them signed when making any seed purchases.

STAMPS LEAD WILD-LIFE WEEK PLANS

Sixteen Species Portrayed by "Ding" Darling in Poster Series

National Wildlife Restoration Week, March 20 to 26, will be impressed upon America's vision by a series of sixteen poster stamps, created by Jay N. (Ding) Darling, famous cartoonist, former chief of the Bureau of Biological Survey and President of the National Wildlife Federation.

The stamps, in sheets of one hundred, are distinguished by their striking coloration, the blues, greens, reds and yellows of sky, water, earth and plumage. Eight of the subjects are birds and eight mammals; Canada goose, ruffed grouse, bob-white quail, Wilson's snipe, ring-neck pheasant, mallard, canvasback and broadbill duck, bison, moose, elk, prong-horn antelope, grizzly bear, cottontail rabbit, beaver and big-horn sheep.

The stamps will sell at n cent apiece, $1.00 for the sheet of 100, and receipts will be divided between local organizations in the various states and the National Wildlife Federation.

GASOLINE TAX REVENUE SHOWED A BIG DECREASE

The state highway department this week reported n $340,341 reduction in its gasoline tax revenue for the first two months of the year. The reduction amounted to a cut of 8.2 per cent under the revenue for January and February of 1937.

Should the reduction continue along the same ratio for the next ten months, the department's gasoline tax revenue will decline more than $2,000,000 for 1938. This would mean a total revenue approximating $27,500,000 compared with $29,500,000 for 1937.

HIGHWAY ROUND TABLE FRIDAY AT TRAVERSE

Fifty persons are expected to join in a highway round table conference for a dozen Northern Michigan counties at Traverse City, Friday.

The meeting will be headed by road commissioners from Antrim, Grand Traverse, Kalkaska, Charlevoix, Emmet, Leelanau, Benzie, Mason, Lake, Oceana, Wexford, Manistee, and Missaukee counties.

SUNDAY DINNER SUGGESTIONS
By Ann Page

Most foods will cost a little more this week. Meats, particularly lamb and hindquarter beef, are higher, egg prices, though still cheap, are feeling the withdrawals into storage of excess production. Fish is none too plentiful so that egg and cheese dishes will be called on for fast days.

Oranges, grapefruit and apples are the best fruit values. Bananas, strawberries and pineapples are also fairly plentiful and reasonable.

Here are three seasonable menus.

STORY OF BREAD TOLD IN BOOKLET

Pictures Add Interest To Latest School Project

Where today is the oldest loaf of bread in the world? How did a baker save a city? What has the tune "Yankee Doodle" to do with baking history?

Answers to these and a hundred other questions bearing on "The Story of Bread" are to be found in the new booklet by that title just published by the bakers of "Michigan" bread.

This printed booklet, consisting of eight pages, is beautifully illustrated with descriptive drawings, rendering it useful for classroom study. The booklet is a part of the educational program sponsored by Michigan Bakeries, Inc., to assist schools with supplementary material for project studies.

Teachers, principals and superintendents welcome it as a most helpful piece of literature. If teachers, or schools not contacted, are desirous of securing a sample copy, they may write Michigan Bakeries, Inc., 100 Commerce, S. W., Grand Rapids, Michigan.

Facts on the methods of modern, large-scale baking of bread and the helps provided by a bakery laboratory are also set forth in "The Story of Bread".

PIKE LAKES, NOW CLOSED, WILL BE OPENED MAY 1ST

All lakes closed to pike fishing in the Lower Peninsula will be opened May 1, the state conservation department announced today.

Pike lakes in the Lower Peninsula were closed March 2. Those in the Upper Peninsula will be closed March 16 and will not be opened until May 15.

$25 WILL CLOTHE HIGH SCHOOL GIRL

How to outfit a high school girl so that she can be clothed in fashion this spring for $25 is a problem that has been studied and solved by Evalya Mansfield, instructor in textiles and clothing at Michigan State College.

A brief clothing budget is the secret.

First on the shopping list, remembering to purchase what is economical but attractive, is a suit, Miss Mansfield finds. If the budget allows not more than $25 she suggests a wool flannel man-tailored suit priced as low as $11. Popular colors are Oxford gray, light gray, black or navy blue.

These suits are rather severe in their tailoring so the tailored type of blouse rather than the "fussy" kind can be picked out for as low as $1 in cotton broadcloth, or in silk or rayon for as little as $2.

For hats, Miss Mansfield suggests a felt roller costing as little as a dollar. There is a newer type called the Outdoor Girl, made of doeskin felt and adding more style than the roller. Prices for these are a little under $3 for some of the hats.

Fabric gloves in color are inexpensive. Some this spring have a narrow lacing of leather around the cuff and glove backs. This dents the budget to the extent of another dollar.

Shoes, hose and purse complete the outfit. For the shoes the survey by the Michigan State College instructor indicates some more style pointers to consider. Perfect color match or make them contrast is the suggestion. Low but not flat heels on leather oxfords should cost perhaps $5 to $6, as more inexpensive shoes would not last long enough to prove bargains. Purse should match suit, or match hat or gloves. The hose should be four-thread with well reinforced toe and heel, costing perhaps 75 cents a pair. And that's the budget.

served notice that the Fegan order would go unheeded. The city council had been asked formally to employ 75 persons to check furniture and household belongings in 24,000 homes.

Fegan's tax plan, however, received an energetic veto from Governor Murphy. The threatened reform died aborning.

$11,500,000 Deficit

Declining revenues of the state sales tax have added more than $4,000,000 to the state deficit at Lansing, according to figures compiled here by Harold D. Smith, state budget director.

On November 14 the deficit was computed at $5,000,000 by Smith.

By the end of the present fiscal year, next June 30, the red ink entry will be $11,500,000, and that amount is subject to revision again if times do not improve immediately.

The legislature generously dipped into the state treasury to the extent of around $125,000,000. Executive vetoes reduced this to $110,000,000 with anticipated revenues for the year totaling $102,839,000. When industrial plants were forced to lay off thousands of workers, welfare needs jumped skyward and $2,000,000 was advanced for relief. Close to $3,000,000 more will be needed before the year ends.

Special Session?

Allocation to Michigan of approximately 30 per cent of the new $250,000,000 WPA appropriation by Congress is believed to have removed the possibility that the state legislature would be summoned this spring for a special session.

Cautioned by Senator Prentiss Brown that a legislative session might prove disastrous during a political campaign, the governor announced that the sole need for a session was to provide funds for unemployed and that he hoped the federal government would bridge the gap. A decision is likely this week.

Washington's action in allocating a major share of the fund to Michigan is recognition of the belief that the automobile industry led the nation out of the last depression and that, being the first to enjoy good times, it was likewise the first to feel ill effects.

Michigan now has 118,000 persons working on WPA projects.

91% Read Newspapers

Success of the "over the top" offensive to break the used car jam is being hailed jubilantly by motor manufacturers in Michigan.

It means renewed hope that thousands of workers can be called back to their jobs at automobile factories.

The manufacturers put up $1,250,000 to advertise the National Used Car Exchange Week, and two-third of all this went into newspaper advertising space. Until after the World War, the automobile lenders were wary about using newspaper space to tell the story of their new models. The fact that the newspaper played a major part in the national drive to sell used cars is another evidence that the Carnegie Foundation, in a recent survey made by a University of Chicago expert, was right when it found that:

91% of all adults read newspapers regularly.

41% of all adults read magazines regularly.

Whether the hometown paper serves 500 people or 5,000,000 people, it can't be beat as the most economical, effective medium to tell a sales story.

Anti-Ford Tax

Defeat of the "third basket" tax by the House of Representatives at Washington is being hailed here as another sign of public support of Henry Ford.

The proposed tax was aimed at family-owned corporations and was generally considered as being aimed at the Dearborn manufacturer.

Twenty years ago Henry Ford was a Democratic candidate in Michigan for the United States senate. He was defeated by Republican Nominee Newberry, and the subsequent investigation into the Newberry $100,000 slush fund is now a matter of history.

While Ford is far from being a "little business man", he still enjoys wide-spread popularity. Twenty years after his unsuccessful campaign in Michigan as a Democrat, you find Ford winning a signal victory with the support of Democrats at Washington.

Far-Reaching Effect

Last year the American public is reported to have spent some $3,420,000,000 for new automobiles.

Of that sum around $1,000,000,000 represented their equity in their old cars.

On January 1 of this year passenger cars in service were valued at $7,500,000,000 — proof indeed that we are not so bad off as radical agitators would like to have us believe.

It is well established that the automobile industry has more far-reaching effects on the national prosperity than any other industry. In the matter of taxes alone, the automobile and its cousins, the truck and bus, were responsible last year for $1,500,000,000 in public revenue.

New Farm Benefits

Because Michigan in 1937 rated ninth in winter wheat yield and tenth in corn production, the new federal farm act is not expected to benefit this state as much as it will others in the Middle West.

These facts were the basis of a protest by John Strange, state commissioner of agriculture, against the ever-normal granary plan when it was considered in Congress several months ago.

And yet, the new benefits will bring approximately $4,000,000 more to Michigan farmers than under the 1937 act. Special bonuses to small producers, who earn payments under $200 a year, have been authorized, averaging $13 per farm.

Growers will receive 10 cents a bushel on corn, 12 cents a bushel on wheat, and 3 cents a bushel on potatoes.

FAKE CIVIL SERVICE SCHOOLS ARE TARGETS

U. S. Commission Reveals They Do Not Represent Government

Residents of the Charlevoix region are cautioned by the United States Civil Service Commission regarding so-called "civil service schools," whose representatives promise government positions.

The commission issued a statement warning the public against being misled by such institutions. The public was also warned against schools or agents that would lead one to believe that they represent the government or are connected with the government in any way, or that give assurance of success in passing civil service examinations on the completion of their course.

Anyone can obtain civil service information free from Postmaster J. M. Foster, at the local post office, or from the office of the commission at Washington, D. C.

OPEN SEASON ON OTTER ASKED OF COMMISSION

Petitions Cite Menace of Animals to State's Fishing

H. D. Ruhl, State Conservation Department game division chief, will confer with members of the Grayling and Mio sportsmen's clubs, on possibility of declaring an open season on otter, described as a "growing menace to fish life."

Otter have been protected the year-round for 15 years, but have multiplied so rapidly since the early 1920's they are creating a shortage of game fish, especially in the northern part of the lower peninsula sportsmen claim.

In a petition to the Conservation Commission 192 persons of Crawford, Missunkee, Oscoda, Montmorency, Genesee, Ogemaw and Iosco county, asked "elimination so far as practical of this greatest single menace to the inhabitants of our lakes and streams."

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

Hopper Battle Opens in County

Strategic defense of Michigan's crops is being planned throughout counties in the state where grasshoppers were prevalent in previous growing seasons and where fall counts of eggs indicate the 1938 hords of crop eaters may be even more numerous.

Several thousand farmers cooperated in township and countywide projects in 1937. County agricultural agents inrluding B. C. Mellencamp, Boyne City, in Charlevoix county, are making a survey now to determine how many farmers are interested in fighting the pests this year.

Supplies of government purchased poison and mill feeds apparently will be available from funds not exhausted in the 1937 hopper battle.

Work of the farmers in their community groups includes distribution of the poison bran and sawdust bait after county organizations take care of storing the supplies and mixing the preparation for spreading on infested areas.

Although fall and winter counts of grasshopper eggs indicate 1938 may see the hoppers in plague proportions in some counties, there is hope for success. Entomologists at Michigan State College agree that a planned campaign can prevent much of the damage that might occur.

Spreading hopper bait when the hatch is ready to get out and eat their fill with voracious appetites can prevent many of the young hoppers from doing much damage. Killing them young prevents them from maturing to lay more eggs and increase the numbers.

Forestry Projects Increasing in Interest

Many farmers are becoming more and more interested in forestry programs. Up to date there have been completed 8 woodlot improvement demonstrations with several more scheduled in the immediate future. These demonstrations have attracted the attention of many farmers in their community and have done much toward encouraging the better care and management of farm woodlots.

Now to encourage tree planting 5 planting demonstrations have been arranged for this spring. Under the direction of Mr. Wines, Junior Forester, Camp Wolverine, up to 5 acres of young trees are to be set out at each demonstration. This work will be done the very last part of April or the first part of May and thus farmers will have the opportunity of seeing how this work is done to best advantage.

It is hoped that a great number of farmers will visit their nearest demonstration when the schedule is announced later on in April.

Jersey Breeders to Develop Plans for Jersey Parish Show

All Jersey breeders in this district are cordially invited to attend a meeting to be held in the Charlevoix Court House on Wednesday, March 23, beginning at 11:00 o'clock.

A feature of the program will be films taken by Mr. Dennison, Jersey field man, on his trip to Europe last year. This picture will be shown before dinner, so it will be to your advantage to be present promptly at 11:00.

During the afternoon plans will be made for another Jersey Parish Show to be held this year. Last year three counties with 16 different exhibitors showed 33 head of purebred Jersey stock. In addition to Mr. Dennison, George Cooper, president of the state Jersey Cattle Club, will be in attendance. Remember, all Jersey breeders should attend this most important meeting on Wednesday, March 23, beginning promptly at 11:00 o'clock.

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT

The Baby's Resistance Against Disease

Healthy children are better able to resist catching diseases. By "catching diseases" we mean diseases that are caused by germs and are spread from one person to another when the germs are passed around. Among the essential things for maintaining good health in the new-born child are cleanliness, sunshine, fresh air, good habits, correct food and protection from infection.

Some diseases caused by germs from which children often suffer are: common cold, whooping cough, measles, scarlet fever, mumps, pneumonia, diphtheria, smallpox, and infantile paralysis. It is not true that every one must have some of these diseases, ous than they are in the first few few years without them, he is less likely to have them later. If he does get them later they are less dangerous than they are in the first few years. Many of these diseases start with the common cold or discharging nose, sore eyes, cough or a sore throat. Therefore, it is a wise mother who keeps her baby away from people with colds.

The communicable disease incidence among the infant age group, that is the babies from birth to one year of age, was low during 1937 in District Health Unit No. 3, comprising the counties of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego. There were two who suffered from scarlet fever, four with whooping cough, three having measles and two with chickenpox. There was one infant death from scarlet fever. We had no cases of diphtheria or smallpox among this age group which indicates that mothers are heeding the wise saying—"an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Every child before he becomes one year of age should be protected against diphtheria, preferably at nine months, and also against smallpox, advisedly after ten days of life. Vaccine against whooping cough is still in the experimental stage to a certain extent although in some cases good results have been obtained.

If others don't start worrying soon, we intend to quit too.

"There, there. I know. You are going to have a baby. There, there." She was trying to loose her mistress' hair.

"Ai, ai de mi! How did you know?"

"Oh, I observe things, my Lady. You are sad, listless. And you have circles beneath your eyes. You are a little sallow, too."

CHAPTER X

The King's Highway was a royal road indeed, as the Governor's party traveled northward. It wound from mission to mission, around rolling hills, along the sea, or veered deeply inland to cross cienagas where willow-bordered streams sped to the sea through groves of live-oaks and sycamores.

La Primavera, the Springtime, flew before them, strewing the way with such myriads of wild-flowers that the fields and hills seemed aflame.

Golden poppies, purple lupin and hyacinth, wild cyclamen, lavender and white, tiny wild blossoms splotched with gold and blue, spread the earth like a rich carpet woven on a Persian loom.

The soldiers slipped flowers beneath their hats, over one ear. Pedro the Younger decked the headstall of his burro with clusters that nodded like plumes on a knight's charger. Often the Governor himself would stop the whole cavalcade to gather a posy for La Gobernadora; lupin and wild roses, or tiny yellow violets. She would smile, and tuck them in the bosom of her dress or in her hair.

Eulalia had struggled against the spell that La Primavera wove round her, fought against succumbing to its drugging influence. But gradually the sweetness, the peace, the sheer beauty overcame her, and she found herself riding in a state of relaxed comfort, not happiness, not unhappiness.

Sometimes at night, at their sundown camping-places, they would share a spring with wild deer; mountain lions would lie prone along the branches above them; or great grizzly bears crash through the brush, rear on startled hind legs, and go clumsily and swiftly away.

This was blissful Eden to the Governor of California. To him each day was a perfect jewel, polished, complete; rich with every color of the rainbow, sparkling, radiant in setting of burnished golden sunshine. Every morning he breathed the fresh beauty, and every night vowed that, even if the sun should never rise again, the beauty of the day that was passing had been sufficient for all time.

He grieved a little at each day's passing, for the next brought him a day nearer to the cares and worries that awaited him at Monterey. The characters of Fray Mariano Rubi, and Fray Bartolome Gili grew even less impressive as the journey continued, and Don Pedro was forced to the conclusion that the founding of the Mission Santa Barbara would have to be abandoned;

The inevitable conflict with Junipero Serra troubled him deeply. At each of the missions, San Juan Capistrano and San Gabriel Arcangel, where they had stopped he had been told that the Padre Presidente, traveling alone except for the patient Pio, had made a visitation. At San Gabriel he had been grievously ill, at death's door. But he had rallied, and gone limping on his way.

This alarmed, annoyed the Governor. He had issued an edict that the missionaries should not travel alone, that they should have at least one soldier for escort. This order the Reverend Father had evidently seen fit to overlook. That would be another disagreeable problem to discuss with Fray Junipero.

Pedro Fages sighed, and tugged at his beard as he apprehended the endless discussions, evasions and bitterness he was bound to encounter.

Ambling slowly along, deep in cogitation, the Governor was startled when two members of his company dashed by him on their mules, and he caught sight of their brown robes streaming in the breeze they made.

"Ai, those two!" he exclaimed, and took after Fray Rubi and Fray Gili. Before he reached them, they had dismounted by an Indian maiden walking in the tall yellow mustard by the roadside. She wore nothing at all but a big basket balanced on her shining black head and a tiny apron of rushes.

At sight of the two monks she giggled, and made as though to slip away from them. Just as Don Pedro reached the spot, the two were trying to detain her in a most unpriestly manner.

The Governor raised his whip and roared.

"Oh, your Excellency!" babbled the monks, one after the other. "See, she is naked, poor little child. A naked heathen! We wish to convert her, baptize her, here, at once! See, she is naked—"

"I see," said the Governor gravely.

The rest of the cavalcade approached and La Gobernadora drew to her husband's side.

"What is it?" she asked, then catching sight of the girl, gasped.

"Ah!" she breathed. "Ah! A-ah!" She glanced swiftly at her husband. He was looking at the girl, smiling absently.

"She is naked," said Eulalia, "quite naked!"

"Exactly. Nearly as bare as my hand, as far as I can see. Pretty little savage, isn't she?"

Where two or more cottages under one ownership are so located on the same premises that they can be served from one transformer, and the wiring is so arranged that the complete service can be billed through one meter, the owner may, at his option, instead of separate meters, obtain service at the commercial rate through one meter. In such cases, the seasonal minimum charge for the first cottage shall be $20.00 and the seasonal charge for each additional cottage so served shall be $10.00 provided that in no case shall the seasonal minimum charge be less than eight times the minimum monthly charge. Only one bill will be rendered for the entire group of cottages, which shall be to the owner or operator who shall be responsible for payment.

There will be a charge of $2.00 per meter at the beginning of the season for each reconnection of seasonal customers.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE NEWS BULLETIN

Sale of Half Year Plates Show Gains

Despite legislation adding a 25 cent fee to the purchase price of half-year motor vehicle permits this year, sales will show an increase of from 20 to 25 percent over those of last year, figures of the Department of State indicate.

Half-year permits totalled 438,635 in 1937; half-year plates manufactured thus far for 1938, total 574,400, with final figures not available until late this summer, these plates being valid until September 1.

Sale of half-year plates lagged conspiciously this year until only a few days before the March 1 deadline, yet when the deadline had been reached, many branch offices had sold more than they had throughout 1937.

Branch managers report that economy rather than necessity, have dictated many half-year plate sales; many persons to whom windshield stickers had been objectionable in the past, bought half-year plates without hesitation.

Law enforcement officers throughout the state prefer plates for their ready identification of cars; the public was benefitted by the change because plates can be handled more quickly than stickers. Inmates of the State Prison of Southern Michigan, at Jackson, were given needed additional work, as a partial solution to the prison labor problem; Michigan steel and other products were used, as against the previous arrangement by which stickers were printed outside of Michigan.

The manufacture of 1939 plates will start immediately after requirements for 1938 are met.

Emil Ludwig's "Life of Roosevelt"

Now, read in The Sunday Times each week, the stirring, fearless biography of President Roosevelt as written by Emil Ludwig, the great biographer who showed the world a new Lincoln, told the graphic truth about Mussolini and wrote the greatest of all books about Napoleon. Now he tells the complete story of Roosevelt, the boy, the man, the statesman.

NEARLY HALF MILLION HUNTERS MAKE REPORT

Estimate 180,000 Delinquent in 1937 Game Returns

Approximately 400,000 hunters and trappers have reported to the state on how much or how little game they took last year. Deer hunters are also reporting on the 1937 season.

The total of returns is about 180,000 short of the number of hunters and trappers estimated to have been licensed in 1937.

After reaching a peak of about 20,000 returns per day just before the deadline February 15, stipulated in the law enacted by the legislature requiring the reports, the return has fallen to between 700 and a thousand per day.

Included in the returns received up to March 4 were approximately 118,000 from resident deer hunters, approximately 228,000 from small game hunters and about 17,000 from trappers. In addition about 700 non-resident deer hunters and about 800 non-resident small game hunters had reported by the close of February.

Failure to comply with the law calling for the reports, which are wanted as a source of information regarding game and hunting conditions in the state, is punishable as a misdemeanor.

AT THE MOVIES

Songs, Stars, Fun in "Thrill of a Lifetime"

A galaxy of stars studs the cast, with the Yacht Club Boys, Johnny Downs and Eleanore Whitney, Judy Canova, Ben Blue, Betty Grable, Leif Erikson and Larry Crabbe heading the list.

The whole film is tuned by the mad moods of the Yacht Club Boys, who take active part in the plot and appear in all the sequences. The Downs-Whitney combination is as charming and light-footed as ever, and has a wonderful opportunity to showw off its unique talents. The duo is joined in this latest film by another talented young star, Tommy Wonder, who does a clever dance routine with his "dancing doll."

The story concerns a young playwright, Leif Erikson, who runs a camp—Camp Romance, to be exact—where the setting of greenery and moonlight brings on romance just like wet feet cause a bad cold. He brings the Yacht Club Boys to the camp, believing that they are big producers who might put on his play. Johnny Downs and Eleanor Whitney bring the partner in their act, Judy Canova, to the camp in hopes of marrying her off. By this time the camp's atmosphere finishes its insidious work, Judy has fallen for Ben Blue, skipper of a small boat near the camp, and even the icy Erikson has fallen in love with Betty Grable, his secretary. The Yacht Club Boys and all the rest of the campers get a job when a real producer sees the camp show, and Dorothy Lamour shows up for a special number; singing the title song of the picture.

BEAVER TRAPPING SEASON OPENS MARCH 17TH

Trappers Are Warned About Procuring Required Licenses

Ed. Deuell, Boyne City, conservation officer, reminds trappers of the Charlevoix region that the 1938 beaver season is from March 17 to March 31, inclusive, and regulations regarding beaver trapping are exactly the same as those which have been in effect the past two years.

The total number of beaver which may be legally trapped during the season is eight. Licenses are now on sale at conservation department headquarters at $2.00 each, as are the beaver seals which cost $1.00 each. All this region is open to beaver trapping with the exception of wild life sanctuaries.

Any trappers desiring information regarding trapping laws are urged to contact the conservation department headquarters at Boyne City, where all information concerning game laws is available at any time.

President Roosevelt's Own Story of the New Deal!

Next Wednesday, March 23, the Detroit News will begin the authorized publication of his notes and comments to "The Public Papers and Addresses of Franklin D. Roosevelt." Watch for this important series containing his remarks on business, farming, neutrality, holding companies, world peace, the NRA, AAA and kindred agencies.

Cheer up! Every life has its discouragements, but most of us are inclined to over-emphasize both their number and importance. There are nettles everywhere, but smooth green grasses are even more common. The blue of heaven is always larger than the cloud.

TUBE OF ALCOHOL TESTS OUT SPUDS

Poorer Grades Change Color When Dipped in Fluid

It may not be such a joke to see some of Michigan's most serious minded housekeepers taking along a small quantity of alcohol when they go shopping for potatoes, for some new experiments at Michigan State College indicate it is possible to find excellent cooking potatoes without cooking them.

Like many other experiments, the information came to E. J. Wheeler and C. M. Harrison of the farm crops department at the college as an accident.

They were taking out plugs of raw potato from samples, when they noticed that the apparently better quality spuds, put in alcohol, stayed white while poorer quality turned gray and brown.

So they matched up their findings with some actual cooking. The plugs from the best quality Michigan potatoes, best because of variety and good cultural practices and growing conditions, kept their shape and stayed white. Samples from poor varieties shriveled and turned dark in color. That dark color is what makes some potatoes take on a rainwater hue when boiled or baked.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SOCIETY

Sunday morning service, 10:45.

Meets first Wednesday evening each month at 7:45 p. m.

Reading room open Saturday, 5 to 5 p. m.

"Matter" will be the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, March 20.

The Golden Text, from Psalm 114:7, is: "Tremble, thou earth, at the presence of the Lord, at the presence of the God of Jacob."

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Eccl. 3-14): "I know that, whatsoever God doeth, it shall be for ever: nothing can be put to it, nor any thing taken from it: and God doeth it, that men should fear before him."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 459): "Life is neither in nor of matter. What is termed matter is unknown to Spirit, which includes in itself all substance and is Life eternal."

The injunction brings to a head discord centering around the purchase of a high or low speed engine. While the city council has yet to agree on the purchase of any engine, as evidenced by an apparent deadlock Monday night and subsequent adjournment until Tuesday night, it is assumed they are inclined to follow the recommendations of the engineers on the purchase of a low speed engine meeting the specification requirements of 257 r.p.m. The bids on this type of engine range from a low of $43,063.00 to $51,570.00.

The citizens' committee and other interested individuals have expressed a desire for further consideration of the high speed engine type which was bid in at $36,500.00 and does not require the estimated $17,000 addition to the present plant for installation. The only bid on a high speed engine with the exception of one on a 400 r.p.m. unit was entered by General Motors on a 720 r.p.m. job. The bid was accepted along with the others, was tabulated, but was left out of the engineer's report on tabulations for the reason it did not meet specifications and was untried in the field of municipal power plant installations.

COUNCIL APPROVE DIESEL PURCHASE

SELECTEO NOROBURG ENGINE MONOAY NIGHT

Actioo Followad Oissolution of Iojuoctioo Friday—Ends Prooogad ContrOversy

The city council Monday night voted to enter contract for the purchase of a Nordburg Diesel engine and uuxiliary equipment. Authority for the purchase and other electric light system extensions was granted by electors at a speciul election Februury 7.

The decisinn, bringing to end a controversy of several weeks standing, was by a 5 to 1 vote, Alderman Arthur Ranger dissenting.

Legal barriers to the council's action in the form of a temporary injunction granted March 15 to William F. Meyer, a local taxpayer, was removed Friday morning when Judge Parin C. Gilbert dissolved the injunction, dismissing various points upon which restraining actinn was sought and ruling the council was acting fully within its authority. An amended complaint, attacking legality of the proposed issuunce of self-liquidating revenue bonds to finance the project, was left a mutter of court record and open to future action.

The council had under consideration thirteen bids from five Diesel manufacturing companies. The Busch Sulzer Bros., represented by H. W. Miller, this city, entered six bids, on the following engines: 520 k.w., 257 r.p.m., air and solid injection at $48,199.00; 460 k.w., 400 r.p.m., air and solid injection at $38,916.00; 520 k.w., 300 r.p.m., air and solid injection at $46,813.00. The Trans-Continental Construction Co. bid on two McIntosh-Seymour engines as follows: 500 k.w., 257 r.p.m. solid injection at $43,063.00 and 518 k.w., 225 r.p.m. solid injection at $47,970.00. Nordburg Manufacturing Co. bids on three types were: 520 k.w., 257 r.p.m., air injection $51,570.00; 520 k.w., 257 r.p.m. solid injection (cross head) at $48,580.00; 520 k.w., 257 r.p.m. solid injection (trunk piston) at $47,380.00. Fairbanks-Morse entered one bid as follows: 525 k.w., 257 r.p.m. solid injection at $19,159.00. A General Motors Corp. bid on 600 r.p.m. engine at $36,500.00 was not considered because of being outside of the specifications.

Hamilton and Weeber, consulting engineers, recommended the Trans-American Construction Co. bid at the figure of $43,063.00, giving as their reason the fact the unit was $4,317 less than others bid and was the lowest in price per net kilowatt delivered at the switchboard by $6.26 per kilowatt.

The Nordburg engine voted by the council costs $47,970.00. Complete details of the council's action are contained in the council proceedings printed on page 7.

Scored 28 to 12 Win Over Sterling at Big Rapids—Nosed Out St. Clair Shores by 26 to 24 Count in Semi-Finals—Four Regulars Graduate Next Spring

Charlevoix's Red Rayders missed a state basketball champinnship by the narrow margin of four points Saturday night at Grand Rapids. They were nosed out in the class C state finals 23 to 27 by St. Augustine of Kalamazoo, a school which has probably topped its class more times than any other in Michigan.

In meeting their first defeat of a brilliant season, the Rayders went down fighting to the last second and by a margin that while meaning the difference between winning and losing, was too close to provide a comparisnn between the two teams.

Charlevoix opened the scoring within seconds of the starting whistle. The goal provided their first and only advantage, for St. Augustine evened the count and went into a lead which they never relinquished. They led 6 to 5 at the quarter and counted 7 points to Charlevoix's 3 in the second period to gain a 13 to 8 margin at the half.

That 5-point advantage, the result of three long goals and a free throw, later proved the margin of victory. Charlevoix pulled up within two points of the leaders as the two teams tallied 9 each in the third quarter. Carey's two goals and three free tosses started a rally which was halted when St. Augustine broke loose for two goals in qnick succession. The period ended with St. Augustine leading 23 to 17. Charlevoix outscored the winners 6 to 4 in the final period to keep within striking distance of victory, hut two goals by St. Augustine sewed up the game.

Carey gathered 12 points to lead Charlevoix. Jurwiak with 13 and McGuire with 11 were best for Kazoo.

After the game, the civic auditorium lobby had every appearance of a homecoming gathering. It was packed with not only local residents, hut former Charlevoixans from Detroit, Flint, Lansing, Muskegon, and other southern cities, as well as local students attending southern Michigan colleges. STREAMS SPEARING IS LEGAL MAR. 1 TO MAY 15

Spurtsman Advised to Consult Officer Regardiog Streams Open

Practically every county in Michigan has one or more streams nr portions of streams in which spring spearing for noxious fish is permitted by law—without artificial light.

Sportsmen who would like to take a whirl at this type of sport would do well to consult their county conservation officers to learn which stream waters are legally open. The officers' first admonition probably would be to keep away from trout streams since all are closed to spring spearinf and—to be sure to have a fishing license.

Spearing for non-game fish became legal March 1 and continues legal to and including May 15.

Office supplies of any description may he ohtained quickly through this office. Charlevoix Courier.—Adv.3tf.

WASHOUTS DAMAGE RAIL AND HIGHWAY

LOEB ANO BARBER CREEKS ON RAMPAGE TUESOAY

Barber Creek Railroad Culvert and M-66 Fill at Loeh Creek Washed Out by Flood Waters

Receding of flood waters is awaited today by county highway and Pere Marquette Railway Company maintenance crews to allow repair of damage caused Tuesday afternoon by washouts at Loeh and Barber creeks south of this city.

Swollen to river proportions when a 72 degree temperature released water held in swamps, these ordinarily small streams went on a rampage unparalleled in this district which is usually free from flood conditions.

Pere Marquette passenger train No. 1 was halted at Ellsworth when a culvert and 30-foot section of roadbed was washed out by Barber creek, leaving the rails suspended high in the air. The stream went out of its banks at the M-66 culvert also, followed the west ditch and crossed the highway at several low spots south of the Coulter farm.

The most severe highway damage occurred farther south at Loeh creek on M-66. Double culverts and a 50-foot section of the highway went out early Tuesday evening. Before the washout the stream was hacked up to a depth of 25 feet or more for a mile across the deep ravine bridged by the highway. A small trickle of water was the first noticeable break and within ten minutes the road went out, releasing a miniature lake which had risen within u couple feet of the highway level.

A heavy rain during the evening added to the already serious condition and the accompanying electric storm put this city in darkness for a considerahle period when lightning damaged one of the main circuits leading to the water pumping station.

SMELT JAMBOREE PROGRAMS READY

Oaylight Dip Naw Feature This Yaar at Boyoe City — Thousands Expected to Attend

Programs for the Smelt Jamborees, which are annual events at East Jordan and Boyne City, are shaping up to make a lot of fun along with a lot of fishing for the thousands of visitors who come to this event.

East Jordan will have a "pre-Jamboree" hanquet on Friday night, March 25, put on by the Jordan River Sportsmen's Club as part of its contribution to observance of the National Wildlife Restoration Week program.

The Jamboree hanquet on Saturday night, March 26, is a stag affair, after which the new King of Smeltium will lead the "Charge of the Night Brigade" to the banks of the Jordan river at 9 o'clock for the nightly battle with the smelt.

The program at East Jordan will run all day and all night on March 26. Sportsmen's Park, scene of the dipping activities there, is being prepared for the event and boardwalks to accommodate 5,000 dippers at one time have been arranged. The park is lighted.

One of the outstanding events of the day will he the coronation of the National Smelt King amid unusual pomp and ceremony. At that time Jack Van Coevering of Detroit will hand over his sceptre as retiring monarch. Van Coevering was recently elected president of the Outdoor Writers Association of North America.

A new feature in smelt runs will he attempted at Boyne City for the first time this year during the Jamboree to be held on March 26—a daylight smelt dip.

The smelt runs take place at night with the smelt heading up stream some time after night fall and returning to the lake in the dawning hours. This year a gate will be placed across the Boyne River after the upstream run is completed and the returning smelt are held and released in daylight for a dip then. Both conservation authorities und local sportsmen are looking forward with much interest to this experiment.

LANSING LETTER

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Associatioo

Michigan farmers haven't put all of their eggs in one basket. When you count your blessings, one hy one, don't forget the henefit of our diversified agriculture.

While industrials are a bit glum, awaiting for the much-expected spring upturn in business, the farmers have reason to smile over the fact that Michigan led all states in agricultural recovery last year. Cash value uf all farm commodities rose from $188,000,000 in 1936 to $246,000,000 in 1937.

Farmers Suffar Less

If the wheat crops fails, the Northwest suffers from hard times. If corn fails to mature, vast regions in the Mid-West feel the pinch of adversity.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

Farmers to Get Cropping Limits

Through state and county officers of the Michigan Soil Conservation committee new means are being provided to enable Michigan farmers to participate more fully in the 1938 federal soil and crop control program.

Sponsors of the organization work within the state are making every effort to have goals set up before planting season. At that time every farmer who desires the information and who farms in a county in the Lower Peninsula is to have information which will enable him to help conform planting with participation.

Information each farmer is to receive in Charlevoix county will tell him how many acres of soil depleting crops he can plant on his farm and still comply fully with the program. In Monroe, Lenawee, Branch, Hillsdale and St. Joseph counties farmers also will learn the maximum acreage of corn they may plant and still remain within the crop control goal.

Later more information is to follow. Within each county the committees have decided to fill out and send information to each participating farmer. He will learn what is the approximate total payment he can earn. He also will learn the maximum number of soil building units which can be earned. Committees also plan to announce shortly after the middle of April the allotment of potato acreage which each commercial potato grower has received.

More than 110,000 farmers have become interested in the federal soil program in Michigan. In 1936 there were 108,000, says Maurice A. Dunn, chairman of the state committee. Last year there were 115,000. Indications are that there will be from five to ten thousand more farmers participating this year.

AT THE MOVIES

Wells Fargo Trail Theme of New Film

The historic Wells Fargo Trail—the lane which connected St. Louis with San Francisco in early gold days—and the men who made and maintained it in the face of Indians, bandits and Nature, forms the dramatic background for "Wells Fargo," the motion picture which opens March 26 at the Palace Theatre.

Rare Beauty of "Cloistered" Demands Awed Attention

Novelty seems a light term to use about so moving a production as "Cloistered," the new motion picture which opens March 28 at the Palace Theatre, for it is truly a production of awesome, inspiring, spiritual beauty. Yet, it must be classified as a novelty in screen fare, for the picture is totally unlike anything that has ever been shown before. In fact, opening the doors of the Cloistered Convent of the Good Shepherd, it discloses, for the first time in any medium, the intimate life of the nuns of one of the greatest of all Roman Catholic orders. This convent alone houses 800 Sisters.

"Cloistered" tells the simple story of a girl who seeks admission to the Convent of the Good Shepherd; and, as the picture unfolds in scenes of simple grandeur, it traces her daily life throughout the five and one-half years that elapse before she takes her perpetual vows as a Sister of the Good Shepherd.

"City Girl," the story of a girl who tries the most daring racket of them all on the town's racket buster, sets off dramatic dynamite on the Palace Theatre screen when it opens March 30. Phyllis Brooks plays her star-making role and shares the top honors with Ricardo Cortez, in this 20th Century-Fox production.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE NEWS BULLETIN

Late Refund Claims to be Paid by Case

Leon D. Case, secretary of state, has directed that a small number of applications for refunds of the state's gasoline tax on fuel used for agricultural purposes, will be paid, if valid, even though submitted after the deadline provided by law.

The matter arose when a few applications filed more than 90 days after dates of purchase of the gasoline, were sluted for rejection on this ground alone. They had come chiefly from farm owners who had permitted their valid claims for small refunds to accumulate, not realizing the law's provision in this respect. Case took the position that ignorance of the law in this regard was no ground for withholding refunds to which farm owners were otherwise legally entitled, but called attention to the provision that such applications must be hereafter filed within 90 days after purchase of the fuel in question.

During 1937, the Gas Tax Division of the Department of State refunded $3,849,630 to those who purchased motor fuel for other than highway purposes. Applications for refunds are handled through retail dealers from whom the motor fuel is purchased.

"She—" Eulalia broke out violently. Then she changed her course of action.

"Poor little thing," she murmured. Don Pedro turned to her in amazement. "Poor little thing," the lady repeated, "I must give her something to wear. Pedro, I must have some of my trunks. Have them brought here to me, please. I must clothe this poor wild child. My duty to your people begins right here and now."

"But, my dear!" expostulated the Governor. "You can not do this foolish thing! She does not need to be clothed. Her—her—well, her nakedness is covered. She is all right as she is."

"No, she is not. She must be clothed. My chests—"

"Eulalia, if she needs clothes—"

"If she needs clothes! Look at her."

"I am looking at her. If she wants clothes she can go to the mission, become a Christian, and have raiment given her. That is what the missions are for."

Eulalia smiled sweetly.

"Perhaps. But I can not resist the temptation to grasp this opportunity to do an act of charity. Will you please have them bring up my chests, or will I have to have Angustias do it?"

"Very well, I will," replied Don Pedro grimly. "But remember this. In Monterey there are no shops, no mantua-makers. No places to buy clothes, or materials, no one to make them. The supply ship comes twice a year with goods for the presidio store, stuff for the soldiers' women. Cotton goods, I don't know what you call them, but I know you never wear them. And there is no telling when, if ever, you will get any new clothes when these are gone. Do you understand?"

"I do not believe you! You never told me this before. You mean to say that in the capital of all the Californias there is nothing to buy, and nowhere to buy it? In the capital?" Her voice was rising dangerously, and those about her moved away, pretending elaborately not to hear. When the Governor spoke it was in a low but telling tone.

The Indian girl still stood unconcernedly in the center of the group, one hand on a towny hip, the basket still balanced on her head, and eyed the white man on the horse. The two frailes leered at her avidly and whispered.

"That is just what I do mean. I should think you would know that without my telling you. If you still persist in giving away your ralment, however, you may. But you will see that Monterey is—is Monterey."

Eulalia was thoroughly alarmed, apprehensive, but stubborn. Don Pedro gave some brief orders. Soon the boxes were unloaded from the pack-burros who rolled and snorted in the grasses and wild-flowers when their burdens were removed.

The lady and Angustias dismounted ond began opening the boxes. Angustias' face bristled with an expression of disgust, but she forbore to make any remarks. Carefully she looked over the clothing, handsome things of costly stuffs and rich colors. But Eulalia piled them on the ground impatiently.

Silently, from among the bushes and trees, other Indians made their stealthy appearances, and when Eulalia glanced up, she saw she was surrounded by a ring of girls and men in breech-clouts.

"Ugh!" she exclaimed, "Angustias, look at them! Give them something, quickly, for the love of God!"

Nearer and nearer the tempting goods circled the natives. One youth, with a wild whoop, snatched at a red velvet skirt, and disappeared. The others followed his example, and all was confusion.

"Pedro, stop them! They will take anything," cried the lady.

But the Governor sat his horse, laughing.

Angustias was struggling with the screaming giggling girls when the Governor crocked his riding whip with a curt phrase in Indian dialect, and the Indians fled with their plunder. The lost one to fade out of sight, with a derisive grimace, and an Indian phrase that made the Governor chuckle, was the little original sin, the Indian maid whn had caused the odo. Proudly she flourished her booty, one string of beads.

Don Pedro dismounted ond assisted his wife to her saddle with great gentleness. Her face was stony. "Eulolia," said he in a low voice, "Eulolia, my dear." But the lady rode on in a significant silence.

A resolution was forming in her mind. Once at Monterey she would escape. When the supply ship reached the port she would go aboard, and return to Mexico. She might have to wait, this child might arrive before the ship. But if not, better to have the child born ot sea, than in this barbarous country. Better death from drowning, or the pangs of seasickness, than staying here. If her husband would come with her, well enough. If not—well, she would go anyway. He could not stop her. Such a land! Naked Indians—adobe hovels—and no shops.

Making up her mind to this course, she felt better, stronger, and was busy devising ways and means when the Commandante of Presidio of Santa Barbara, Lieutenant Ortega, came thundering toward them with a party of soldiery.

The Governor and Don Jose Francisco Ortega greeted each other with punctilio, and the lady was presented. To her delight, the soldier stooped to her stirrup, and taking her dusty foot in his hand, kissed it. Then he looked up at her.

"Senora la Gobernadora!" he saluted her. "Welcome a thousand times to California, and the Presidio of Santa Barbara! You are as welcome as the spring, that travels with you. Since it was known you were coming, everything has changed. You are needed, Lady, in California. We have been a land of men long enough. We are all your servants, humbly waiting for you to command us."

Eulalia bowed deeply to him, and offered her hand. The Commandante kissed that. "Do you desire dainties for your table?" He continued, "We will scour the mountains for the rarest game, plumb the ocean for the finest fishes. Do you wish wild fruits or berries? We will find them. Do you wish skins and pelts for your house or yourself? We will slay the finest fur-bearing animals for you. The finest horses are yours to ride, the most docile Indians are your serfs, and we soldiers, all a loyal body-guard!"

Eulalia beamed. "Ah, Lieutenant Ortega, you flatter me!"

"No! A thousand times, no! I tell you, Senora la Gobernadora, I am as happy as a king here, but I find it in my heart to envy one man. And that man is Pedro Fages. Not because he is the Governor of the Californias, but because he is the husband of your Excellency."

The Governor put his arms around the other's shoulders.

"Well said, my old one. Well said. My wife will think I have trained you to say those things to her."

As gallant Lieutenant Ortega rode beside La Gobernadora he told her of the Presidio of Santa Barbara, a walled fortress like San Diego, with little whitewashed dwellings for the soldiers and their families, a store, a blocksmith shop, a chapel, and quarters for himself.

As they drew near, Eulalia could see the presidio like a little walled city, its whitewashed walls pink in the sunset, its tile roofs red. Again there were cannonades to greet her, the ringing of the chapel bells, and soldiers' women and children bringing her great armloods of wildflowers.

That night she aat long at the lieutenant's lavish table, laughing and chatting with the company, complimenting the food, applauding the music.

"Now that I am leaving California so soon," she thought, "I can enjoy things while I am here. It will be an experience to remember, and to tell about." Beneath her feet Escabellito squirmed in his sleep. Eulalia prodded him, and he was still.

"Yes," she whispered, "I am leaving California—soon."

CHAPTER XI

Along the King's Highway, where foot of king had never trod, nor royal hoof rung out, Fray Junipero limped slowly. He had been on a long journey, visiting each one of his beloved missions. Happy had been the journey, pleasant the visiting with his brothers, and gratifying the reports he bod heard. The missions were flourishing; converts, crops and cattle increasing.

He felt happy and satisfied.

By his side trudged Pio, bearing a yellow umbrello, which shaded the father as well os himself. Pio's arms ached, for the umbrella seemed mysteriously to goin weight os the hours passed.

The father, beneath that moving spot of shade, was tracing in retrospection the first of all these many steps that had led him through life on his apostolic journeyings.

That had been over half a century ago in Mallorco, the jewel of the Boleario Isles in the Mediterranean sea.

By His Side Trudged Pio.

Seventeen years old, Miguel Jose Serra had walked from his native village, Petro, to the capital city, Palma. His pious parents, amid their tearful farewells, begged him to ride the family burro, but the youthful pilgrim, in his heart already dedicated to the holy San Francisco, shook his head. So he set his rope-soled sandals—his alpagartas—on the road that stretched ahead of him, for half a century, across half a world.

In Palma, doffing the dress of a Petran peasant for the Franciscan habit and cowl, he doffed at the same time the name the peasants had called him. Miguel Jose Serra was gone. Now there was Brother Juniper only. Fray Junipero Serra.

San Francisco had a devoted follower, Junipero, who would steal from the altar itself, if by stealing he could feed a hungry mouth. No larder in Asis was safe from his plundering. The good saint called the little brother, Jester of the Lord, saying: "Had I but a whole forest of such Junipers!"

So he who traveled from the Mediterranean to the Pacific called himself Junipero.

Now his journey was nearly done. As he paced steadily on, dazed a little by the sun, and the disregarded emptiness of his body, a beautiful road stretched before him, up, up, into the blue sky, where it terminoted in a city of bright mansions.

* SPRING SWAYS *
* WOMEN'S HATS *
* * * * * * * * * * * *

Most anything goes this spring in determining what is fashionable in hats for women.

At least that is the deduction of Marion Hillhouse, assistant professor of clothing at Michigan State College. Sailors, "salod bowls" and Walt Disney's Snow White all influence what apparently is going to be in style in the Eoster parade.

The flat sailor or boater is considered one of the most popular types. Selection is logical because this kind of hat goes with the trim tailored suits that many women prefer to wear in spring.

Those who are short and round should avoid the flat sailor, Miss Hillhouse suggests, because it seems to decresse apparent height. Instead she points to the rolled up Breton which is being called the salad bowl Breton. Worn tilted forward it offers more height and smartness, if it is becoming.

Peaked Snow White dwarf caps are decidedly tall but popular, yet most of the hats have flutter crowns and wider brims that are more fashionably associated with spring.

Color runs rampant, but the suggestion of fashion leaders is that there shouldn't be too lavish a mixture either in clothes, hats or trimmings. The giant hats of 1910 with a veritable flower garden atop still are not back in style, says Miss Hillhouse.

Shape of the hat is all important, and from there the selection depends on getting something that is new and smart in line.

GIRL SCOUTS TO PRESENT ENTERTAINMENT

Two Plays to Be Given at School Gym, Friday, April 1st

The Girl Scouts of Charlevoix will give two plays in the school auditorium on Friday, April 1st.

"That Awful Letter" in which a snobbish social climber, Margaret Neilson, played by Ardis Usher, is taaght a lessen in courtesy by her "country cousin," Beth Norton, played by Alma Radle. Signe Isaksen, as Edith Browning, and Barbara Bradley as Helen Montgomery, round out the action of this very entertaining comedy which is being directed by Miss Geraldine Millar.

The woman's department of a city newspaper is the scene of the second play, "Scoops," a fast-moving drama concerning a strike, a kidnapping, and a thousand dollar reward, all Incidents which provide highly desirable "copy" for the newspaper's star woman reporter, Ruth Kimball, played by Marie McGhan. Each of the four other reporters handles the news from her own angle — Lucille Bird (Louise Young) from the angle of the young writer of "advice to the lovelorn," Isahel Matterson (Marjorie Wood) from the viewpoint of the society page editor, Mary Jones (Patricia Hyers) from the vivid slant of the "sob-sister", while Dorothy Bartlett (Martha Craig) as Woman's Page Editor manages affairs. Comic relief is afforded by Mary Zeitler in the role of Poll, the office girl.

Four of the workers at the Cooper Cotton Co. appear in Act Two. They are Rosetta Slavinski (Frances Meggison) as the dynamic leader of the strike among the women. Jessie Boardman, an older woman only recently hired at the factory, played by Anna McHugh, and Lena and Nellie, played by Marion Cross and Helen Shapton respectively. Other members of the cast are a detective, Miss Clay, a part taken by Marielle Van Allsburg, Mrs. Crawford Montgomery, a leader of society (Verneice Holland) and her niece, Millicent, Phyllis VanAllsburg. The play is being directed by Miss Phyllis Hustnn with the aid of Betty McFarland, script girl, prompter, and properties chairman.

Usual Musical Program Presented by Neighboring Kiwanians

The third anniversary of Kiwanis charter night was observed Tuesday evening at the Masonic temple.

A program of a different nature than usual was carried on by Kiwanis members from neighboring cities. Twenty-seven out-of-town guests were present besides guests of local members. Singing was conducted by Walter Noa of Gaylord, accompanied by Mrs. Huntley. Mr. Noa, Gaylord's "Rubinoff," also played several numbers on his violin. Other music was furnished by William Barnish of Cheboygan, and the Kiwanis orchestra from Gaylord.

Those called on to speak included Frank Schipp of Gaylord, Fred Bradley of Rogers City, Peter Pierce and Joe Greigware of Grand Rapids.

The Club, in appreciation of the doughnuts and cider which has been served at the Sloan residence during director and committee meetings, and as an incentive for the continuation of this good deed, presented Mrs. Sloan with flour, lard, milk, eggs and nutmeg. Mr. Sloan was presented with a set of drinking glasses and pitcher for cider, but due to the awkwardness of the presenter and the receiver, the glassware set was broken, much to the embarrassment of those present.

WILDLIFE BANQUET EAST JORDAN EVENT

Prominent Speakers to Appear at Meeting Friday, March 25th

A sell-out crowd is expected for the wild life banquet, which will be held in the East Jordan high school gym, Friday evening, March 25th, as a part of National Wibl Life Restoration Week.

The banquet will open at 6:30, and Joe Bugai, in charge of the affair, says plans are completed. The banquet, a smelt supper, will be served by the Latter Day Saint ladies.

Although the main event of the evening will be the showing of motion pictures, made in various parts of the Michigan wild, by Walter Hastings; many other nutdoor notables will be present for the evening, and will be introdaced to the crowd. Hasting, who is official photographer for the Michigan State Conservation Department, may have the pictures which he made of our local girls last summer on the river. He also made pictures of the swans and Sportsman's Park. The pictures were made for the Cleveland Exposition, and since it closed last fall, they have been shown throughout the country. If they are out of circulation by next week, Walt will bring them.

Others who will be present will include Ed. Dreier, chief photographer for the Michigan Tourist. Associations; Ernest Jack Sharpe, better known as "Newaygo Newt"; Paul Mower, oatdoor editor of the Chicago Daily News; Ray Voss, outdoor editor Grand Rapids Herald; Jack VnnCuevering, present National King of Smeltiam and president of Outdoor Writer's Association of North America; Emile Montemurro, Fox Movietone New cameraman; nnd Geo. Bishop, secretary Upper Michigan Development (Tourist) Bureau.

A surprise or two is also being contemplated, should present plans materialize.

Only two hundred and fifty tickets will be old for the banquet and those desiring tickets should see Joe Bugai immediately. — Charlevoix County Herald.

Stover creek is out of its banks and members of the Charlevoix Sportsman's Club are apprehensive of damage to their rearing ponds. A bypass which ordinarily handled flood water broke through. Whether damage to the rearing ponds walls occurred will not be ascertained until the stream recedes.

County highway maintenance men have reported no other serious damage in the county, although all streams were up to flood stage. Roads other than main highways are practically impassable and the usual roadbed damage from the spring breakup has occurred.

Infant Mortality Needs Further Reduction

During the year of 1935 in the United States over 77,000 babies were born dead and over 56,000 babies died during the first month of life. There were also over 14,000 mothers who lost their life during this same year which means that over 147,000 babies and mothers died in one year. This indicates that in this country a baby is born dead every seven minutes; a less-than one month old baby dies every eight minutes, and that one mother dies in childbirth every thirty-seven minutes. Many of these could have been saved but died because public interest has not been manifest to such an extent that it has been interested in saving them. This also means that 35,000 children are left motherless yearly through childbirth deaths. These same figures have existed for the most part for twenty years although we have cut the death rate a little, particularly the infant mortality rate.

Many of these mothers die because they have inadequate or no care when the baby arrives. However, public opinion is now being mobilized to save mothers and babies. This campaign is endeavoring to insure proper training in obstetrics for physicians and nurses and to educate the mothers to the necessity of proper maternal care. Physicians realize that prenatal care and advice is important if we are to keep mothers from dying, but unless mothers obtain proper care when the baby is born, all prenatal care and advice may be useless.

It is at birth that infections set in with a 41 per cent toll. An effective program for cutting the maternal death rate must, therefore, include attendance at childbirth. As a result of this the Social Security Act of 1935 gives a federal appropriation of $3,800,000 to use in this work. However, more money than this will be needed. We spent nearly that much annually to conserve wild life. We have spent more than four times that much to prevent cholera in hogs. We spend 43 times that much annually for federal roads.

If we are to continue our fight mothers must help through knowledge of the needs of healthy motherhood. The community must help by providing care for those who cannot afford it or to whom it is inaccessible. The physicians must help by employing the best methods available in obstetrics and pediatrics.

A Royal Favorite's Dozen Red-Headed Doubles

An article in The American Weekly, great weekly magazine with the March 27 issue of The Detroit Sunday Times, tells of a king's famous sweetheart who fooled her political enemies with six counterparts—but she needed 12 to confuse the ambitious lady with whom her princely brother-in-law found romance in a delicatessen.

"A hint to the wise is sufficient," we are told. A hint to the wives is a lot more so.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SOCIETY

Sunday-morning-service, 10:45.

Meets first Wednesday evening each month at 7:45 p. m.

Reading room open Saturday, 3 to 5 p. m.

"Reality" will be the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches throughout the world on Sunday, March 27.

The Golden Text, from Psalm 125:1, is: "They that trust in the Lord shall be as mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth for ever."

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Psalm 145:3,10): "Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised; and his greatness is unsearchable. All thy works shall praise thee, O Lord; and thy saints shall bless thee."

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mury Baker Eddy, include the following (p. 331): "The Scriptures imply that God is All-in-all. From this it follows that nothing possesses reality nor existence except the divine Mind and His ideas."

LANSING LETTER

But Michigan farmers suffer less, when a business recession arises or when drouth or rains jinx growers, because they haven't all their eggs in one basket.

The development of the dairy industry has been a source of protection against crop losses.

Michigan ranks first in cherries, second in potatoes and field beans, third in grapes, fourth in peaches and pears, fifth in apples, sixth in sugar beets and tame hay, seven in flaxseed and clover and timothy hay, eighth in rye, ninth in winter wheat and oats, and tenth in corn and barley.

Decentralization

Labor troubles in the North combined with rising costs of taxation, have prompted many manufacturers to move plants from cities into small towns or to open branch plants in the South.

Take the factor of rents, for example.

The bureau of home economics of the department of agriculture recently completed a survey of house rents paid in Michigan small towns. The majority of villagers are paying $15 a month, leaving more money available to buy other things.

As Dr. Louise Stanley, bureau chief, put it: "This is one of the reasons why the village family in the moderate-income group is much more likely to have an automobile than is the family of the same wage status in the large city."

Annual Wage

Is it feasible for industry to guarantee the worker an annual minimum wage?

This proposal was advanced some time ago by President Roosevelt as a means to stabilize the building trades. Governor Murphy mentioned it for automobile workers during a recent tour of the Upper Peninsula.

The president's suggestion evoked criticism from both labor leaders in the building trades and from contractors who believe, it is said, that an annual minimum wage is not practical for construction work.

The Ford Motor company submitted testimony to a senate committee at Washington that an annual wage was not feasible in the automobile industry because of the custom of annual models and the uncertainty of sustained buying. In a stabilized industry, like meat packing, the annual minimum wage has been demonstrated to be both feasible and practical. We all have to eat; but we don't have to buy automobiles or stoves.

The annual minimum wage is a symbol of security. For that reason we will hear more of it during 1938.

Half Billion Taxes

Who pays the tax bill?

The $515,511,000 tax bill, paid by Michigan residents last year, was twice as much as the gross income of all Michigan farms.

Booth Newspapers, sensing a public responsibility to tell the truth about taxes, delved into the records and found the half billion tax bill to be the largest ever paid by the people of the state. Twenty per cent of every dollar in income went to pay taxes. For a family of four persons it is equivalent to having a fifth person at the table—an unseen boarder to feed, clothe and house.

Federal	$261,814,000
Local	146,300,000
State	137,400,000

A Detroit motor company recently found that each worker spent an average of $565 annually for dry groceries, dairy products, meats and poultry, produce, tobacco soap and cosmetics. Of the total sum, $141.30 went to pay taxes . . . hidden, indirect, and unseen!

Rise in State Spending

1934	15,184,838
1935	17,197,310
1936	19,714,884
1937	23,485,319

This represents a jump of more than 37 per cent in five years.

Expenditures of all state governments rose from $1,900,000,000 in 1935 to $2,500,000,000 in 1937, as contrasted with $200,000,000 increase for all local governments in the nation.

Easter Seals

The Michigan Society for Crippled Children, Inc., through its many county and city committees, is again this year sponsoring the sale of crippled children Easter Seals.

The campaign opens April 1st for the fifth consecutive year as a means of financially supporting the work being carried on by the international, state and local affiliated groups.

The Michigan Society was founded in 1921 to initiate, extend and improve services for physically handicapped persons—its program includes locating cases and securing for them medical care, special education, vocational guidance and training, and placing the adult in satisfactory employment.

EAST PARK BUILDINGS ARE BEING TORN DOWN

Making way for the East Park improvement program on east Bridge street property purchased by the city, removal of buildings is now nearly completed. Four structure have been torn down and only the clean-up work remains.

Fnint, sweet sounds of music drifted from nn angelic choir. Fray Junipero fell in the dust and raised his arms as one came down the shining road, one in a brown frock like his own, with a cloud of singing birds about his head.

"Mi Padre San Francisco!" he breathed. "Father Francis!" He heard n voice.

"Little Brother Juniper, are you ready to come home? I am waiting for you—"

"Not yet, Father Francis; yet a little while! I have work—work. Another mission—for Santa Barbara!"

"Good, little Brother. But soon. You are awearied!"

Fray Junipero felt the warm earth on hands, face. He stirred and lifted himself. The vision was gone. Only a brown road stretched before him, while overhead a flock of birds circled and cried. Pin's dark face leaned over him in concern, and he heard the young Indian's voice as though from a great distance.

"Little Father—you are aweary!"

He pulled himself erect on trembling limbs and grasped his staff with its strong smooth shaft and little cross at the top.

"Yes, you are aweary, and hungry. Eat, Padre."

He pulled from his pouch some young green onions he had carried from the Mission San Antonio de Padua and held them out to the father, who crunched absently at the pungent, slightly withered roots.

"A vision—a miracle!" he exulted. "Happy augury! Soon will come my friend, Don Pedro Fages, and two strong brothers of Saint Francis. Two men of God to help me found the Missinn Santa Barbara. God has heard me! My prayers have not been in vain. Santa Barbarn shall have her mission at last. Praise God the Fnther, God the Son and God the Holy Ghost!"

All along the flowery miles beside the sea, over mountains and through canons, Eulalia wondered about the famed missionary, Fray Junipero. What manner of man was he? According to the fathers at all the missions they had visited, he was a sainted miracle worker. With these opinions her husband concurred sincerely, and added other praises of his own. Not only was he a saint, but he was a man among men, strong, fearless, resourceful; uncomplaining in the midst of suffering. In short, the Governor gave him a soldier's merits in one phrnse—a good campaigner.

In spite of all this, Eulalia felt that he withheld some opinion of the padre, and was puzzled to know what it might be. Now that they were approaching Monterey, and she would perhaps meet the Padre Presidente before night, she set herself to discover her husband's real opinion of him.

"Tell me, Pedro," she asked tentatively, "more about Padre Serra. I have heard much of him, even in Mexico City. He seems to be the most important person in California, apart from yourself, my dear. I shall have to associate with him, perhaps confess to him. What is he like?"

"Stop doing that!" ordered the lady. "When you do that I know you are thinking what you will say instead of saying it outright."

"Well," he said, but still caressing his beard. "I usually think before I speak. And doing this helps me to think. You have heard all I can say about Padre Serra. I like him, admire him. We nre friends—good friends. And we are enemies."

"Enemies — hum," said Eulalia stroking nn eyebrow with her little finger. The Governor leaned over his horse's neck and caught her hand.

"Don't do that!" he lnughed. "When you do that I know you are thinking what you are going to say, and—"

Eulalia laughed.

"But it helps me think," she mocked.

The Governor still held her hand. How dear, how charming she could be, thought he.

"So you are enemies. Why?"

"My dear, Church and State have ever been enemies. Their aims are loo widely apart for them to work together sympathetically. That is especially true in Cnlifornia. The aim of the Crown—the State—in California is, frankly, the acquiring and holding of this country, and protecting it from other acquisitive nations—England, Russia. The aims of the Church are the conversion of the heathen."

He loosed her hand absently and pulled his beard.

"And—" prompted Eulalia.

"I, representing the State, must do my duty. I must see that the Church does nothing to jeopardize the Crown's holdings. Father Serra is the church in California. He would like to see all the soldiers sent out of the province, and be left here with the rest of the Franciscans, alone to work things out his own way."

Eulalia pricked up her ears.

"He wishes the soldiery away from the province?"

"He does."

"And you?"

"My dear, he would do anything to get me away from here. I believe he would stop at nothing under the sun to rid California of my pernicious influence."

"Ah," said Eulalia, deep in thought.

"He did rid himself of me once, you remember. Humph! The charges he made against me! And the terrible journey he made, sick and suffering as he was, to present them to the Viceroy. He nearly died, with his crippled leg. But his belief in what he was doing led him on, successfully, that time. I admire him. On my soul, I do."

The Governor laughed.

"But I came back."

Eulalia's mind was working rapidly. So the Padre Presidente was that manner of man! One strong in belief in his duty—but one who would stop at nothing, as the Governor had said, to gain his ends in regard to forwarding the Church in California.

And he believed Pedro Fages stood in the way of complete triumph for the Church, therefore Pedro Fages must leave California; Serra had accomplished that once—it might—be—

"A strange man," she said aloud. "But I have made up my mind that we are going to be friends. Yes, good friends. He should be a comfort to me in this strange land."

The Governor frowned doubtfully, then reached for his wife's hand again.

"Splendid!" he cried heartily, squeezing her fingers. "Perhaps you can change his opinion of your husband. Then we can all live here happily, you and I, and all the children, in California for the rest of our lives!"

March 14, 1938

The Honorable Mayor and City Council,
Charlevoix, Michigan
Gentlemen:

We submit herewith the Tabulatinn of Proposals for furnishing a 500 Kilowatt Diesel Engine Unit which were received by you on March 3rd, 1938.

In the preparation of the specifications for this unit which were approved hy your honorable hody on February 14th, 1938, we specified equipment of conservative speed and rating for reliable heavy duty service and long life in nccordance with the best proven American practice.

Proposals were submitted by five manufacturers on furnishing eight different units. Five of these units conform to the specified requirements. Three nf the units have a rotative speed higher than the maximum of 257 R.P.M. specified.

In analyzing the proposals, the important features to be considered are:

1. Reliability of service.
2. First cost nnd cost of operation in service.
3. Adaptability of unit to the present plant and space requirements in the new addition.

While under present load condetions the hydro plant can, under favornble circumstances, carry the load during part of the day, the load is increasing each year to the extent that provision must he mnde to operate one Diesel 24 hours each day throughout the year.

During the peak load season, at present the Diesel nnit is operated 18 to 20 hours per day and the steam plant 12 to 15 hours per day. Within a year or two it will be necessary to operate one Diesel 24 hours per day and the second Diesel 15 to 18 hours per day during three months of the year. Before 1947 it will be necessary to operate two Diesels during eight months nf the year, one 24 hours per day and the second 12 to 24 hours per day depending on the season.

These requirements can only be met by proved reliable equipment as called for by the specifications. As a guide to the standnrd American practice on rotative speed we give below the installations reported in "Report on Oil Engine Power Cost for 1936" by the American Society of Mechanical Engineers which covers 166 Diesel plants containing 458 engines with a total capacity of 246,665 Brake Horsepower. The rotative speed of all installations varies from 120 R.P.M. to 720 R.P.M. as follows:

Speed	No. of Installations	Pct. of
257 r.p.m. or less	361	78.9
258 r.p.m. to 299 r.p.m.	19	4.1
300 r.p.m. to 399 r.p.m.	69	15.1
400 r.p.m. to 599 r.p.m.	6	1.3
600 r.p.m.—54 h. p.	1	0.4
180 h. p.	1
720 r.p.m.—300 h. p.	1	0.2
Total	458	100.0

In the year reported, the 54 h. p. 600 r.p.m. engine was only run 626 hours and the 180 h. p. engine 917 hours.

It is evident that present American practice does not justify the selection of a high speed unit for power plant service especially in speeds above 400 r.p.m.

Since the prices on air injection engines offered were higher than prices on solid injection engines and since fuel economies are better on solid injection engines, we recommend the selection of a solid injection engine.

Since prices on the nuxiliaries specified as extras were near the same for each bidder, they need not he considered in making a selection.

Trans-American Const. Co. — 5-17½x25, 257 r.p.m. engine; base price $43,063.00; price per net KW delivered at switchboard $86.82.

Trans-Amerienn Const. Co. — 6-17½x25, 225 r.p.m. engine; base price $47,970.00; price per net KW delivered at switchboard $93.87.

Fairbanks-Morse — 5-16x20, 257 r.p.m. engine; base price $49,459.00; price per net KW delivered at switchboard $94.95.

With the price of fuel at 4½ cents per gallon and the nnit operating 4,000 hours per year nnder probable operating conditions, the nnnual cost of fuel based on fuel guarantees in the proposals are as follows:

Busch Sulzer — 6-16¼x24½ engine; annual cost of fuel oil $4,220.

Trnns-American Const. Co. — 5-17½x25 engine; annual cost of fuel oil $3,910.

Trans-American Const. Co. — 6-17½x25 engine; annnal cost of fuel oil $3,790.

Nordberg—3-17x25 engine; annual cost of fuel oil $4,220.

Fairbnnks Morse—5-16x20 engine; annual cost of fuel oil $4,220.

After a comparison of these costs and the details given in the proposals, we recommend the selection of the Trans-American Construction Compnny's proposal on their 5-17½x25 inch McIntosh Seymour engine unit at a base price of $43,063.00.

This unit is the lowest in price of those proposed under the specifications by $4,317. It is the lowest in price per net Kilowatt delivered at the switchboard by $6.26 per Kilowatt. The fuel consumption guarantees are better than all other engines proposed except the 6 cylinder 225 r.p.m. unit proposed by the same company.

This unit can be installed in the proposed power plant building addition.

With the proposal, the Bidder, included a list of 29 engines of this cylinder size which huve been installed with the number of cylinders vurying from 3 to 8. Seven of these engines operate at 257 r.p.m., two at 214 r.p.m., seventeen at 225 r.p.m., one at 240 r.p.m. und two at 250 r.p.m.

The engine is a 5 cylinder 17½x25 inch, 257 r.p.m., 730 brake horsepower, 500 gross Kilowatt, 496 net Kilowatt, 4 cycle, mechanical injection unit.

Yours very truly,

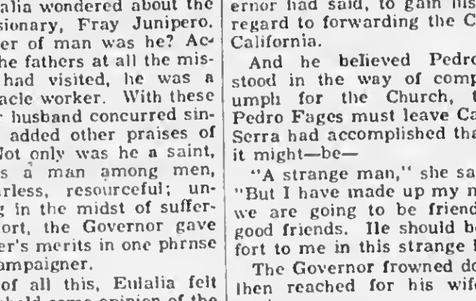
What Every Driver Must Know



STOP AND GO LIGHTS

Most of us know what traffic signals and stop signs mean, but this is a reminder so you will be prepared if asked when applying for a driver's license.

Red means STOP. Yellow in combination with Green also means STOP. Green alone means GO. The Yellow is shown to give drivers approaching on the Green a chance to stop, and to protect persons caught in the intersection when the light changes. They must be allowed to reach safety before you start on the Green.

THROUGH HIGHWAYS

All State Trunk Line Highways, and other roads and streets designated by local authorities, are "through highways". Come to a complete stop before entering them.

Biggest Bargain In CHARLEVOIX

Because a majority of homes in the Charlevoix Community "just can't get along without the Courier", it ranks high as a Household Necessity. More than that, at the low subscription price of $2.00 a year, or five cents a single copy, the Courier is a real bargain.

5c will buy only one of these things . . . a package of chewing gum . . . one cigar . . . a loaf of bread . . . a cup of coffee . . . a candy bar . . . a sack of pop corn . . . ten minutes (or more) at a movie . . . a package of candy mints . . . a pencil . . . a scratch tablet . . . package of pins . . . less than enough stamps to mail two letters . . . and less than a third of a gallon of gasoline.

Some of These are Bargains — Some May Not Be

5c invested in a copy of The Courier will do all of these things: Keep you in touch with the happenings of the Charlevoix Community . . . Bring your messages and pocketbook news of stores and business institutions, with opportunities for saving money . . . tell you about your school, your club, your neighbors and friends . . . yourself . . . Give you a share in a home enterprise devoted to the good of your community . . . make you a part of that community.

LEUCKE IS SEEKING UNIFORM FISH LAWS

Reports Progress On Bill Introduced Recently in Congress 4

The House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries today adopted a committee resolution requesting the Secretary of State to negotiate an agreement with the Canadian Government for the regulation of commercial fishing in international waters of the Great Lakes. A committee resolution only requires action by the committee to be effective. The resolution was offered by Rep. John Luecke of the 11th Michigan District. A similar resolution is being introduced in the Senate committee by Sen. Royal S. Copeland of New York.

The above committee resolution is a companion measure to H. J. Res. 504, also introduced by Rep. Luecke, which authorized State compacts for the conservation of fish resources in Great Lakes waters through uniform regulatory laws. The House of Representatives recently passed H. J. Res. 504. A companion resolution, introduced by Senator Brown of Michigan, has already been reported favorably by the Senate Committee on Commerce and favorable action by the Senate is expected at an early date.

The passage of both of these measures is necessary in order to have complete uniform control of fishing on the Great Lakes.

Coast Guards Displayed Best Methods at Marine Club Meeting

The last meeting of the Charlevoix Marine Club, held at the K. of P. hall, proved interesting and instructive to a large group.

Following an earlier announced policy of providing instruction on marine subjects at a series of meetings, Club officers arranged for appearance of Warren Wilmot and Lloyd Hulitt of the U. S. Coast Guard local unit, who gave demonstrations on the best known procedure in case of marine accidents or drownings, and also devoted considerable time to instruction and practice in knot tying and other rope work in which the skill and speed of the boatmen was tested.

Further meetings of instruction on subjects of interest to Marine Club members will be held in the near future.

CHARLEVOIX LOSES OUT IN STATE MEET

Semi-Final Close Contest

The Rayders fought an up-hill battle for a place in the finals, winning 26 to 24 in the closing seconds of play against Lake Shore high school of St. Clair Shores. On the short end of a 7 to 3 count at the quarter, and trailing 8 to 12 at the half, the Rayders pulled up within a single point at the third intermission. They went into the final frame with the count 18 to 17. Bergmann, who had alternated with Pearl at guard, provided the winning points in the final quarter. With three minutes to play he scored a field goal which gave Charlevoix a 24 to 23 advantage. St. Clair scored from the foul line to even the count. Bergmann's second goal, shot from far out on the side of the court, split the meshes five seconds before the closing whistle for the winning margin.

First State Finalists

To the 1937-38 Red Rayder aggregation goes the honor of being the first Charlevoix team to reach the state finals. It was Coach Kipke's fourth team in down-state competition in ten years and his sixth district winners. One Charlevoix team went to the state semi-finals prior to Kipke's coaching regime.

Close of the 1937-38 season breaks up the most brilliant basketball team ever to represent Charlevoix high school. Graduation next spring will close the local athletic careers of Keith Carey, "Chick" Gallagher, Charles Richardson and Dick Bergmann of the regulars, as well as Gengle, Allison and Smith of the reserves. Brown, Pearl, Withers, Tom Carey and Driggett will be available for next year, the latter until March 3 when he reaches the age limit.

Keith Carey has had no peer in local basketball history in view of his scoring record. Richardson, following Carey in points scored, was an outstanding performer, and Gallagher, while not figuring so prominently in score board totals, was probably the best ball feeder Coach Kipke has ever developed. Bergmann, considering the time he played as a regular, and Brown alike, played brilliant basketball.

COAST GUARDS SALVAGING FISH TUG BONNIE

Second of Two Boats Lost in January Storm Believed in Fair Shape

Coast guardsmen began the work Wednesday of salvaging the fish tug Bonnie, owned by Ernest Smith. The tug sank when crushed by ice in an attempt to leave the harbor early in January. The Cross tug Edna, lost at the same time, has been salvaged.

The Bonnie was found to the south and beyond the pier heads. In view of the depth of water and what observation could be made, it is believed the boat is not badly damaged. Undertow and action of the ice probably carried the hull to its present position.

A line has been fastened to the boat and, by the use of block and tackle on shore, it is being slowly dragged into shallow water.

OPERATORS' TESTS TO START APRIL 1

CITY AND COUNTY OFFICERS MAKE PREPARATIONS

Examination of All Applicants for Driver and Chauffeur Licenses Compulsory Under Law

Prepurations are now being completed by city and county law enforcement departments for handling examinations under the new Michigan drivers' license law which will go into effect on April 1.

Examinntion of applicants for the city of Charlevoix will be handled by Chief of Police Clarence Coblentz, who has established an office over the Dahlquist store. Examinations will be conducted Tuesday and Friday forenoons between the hours of 9 and 12.

Examination of applicants for the county will be handled by Sheriff Floyd Ikens, Deputy Edgar Behren and Mrs. Floyd Ikens in the sheriff's office at the county jail. Exnminations will be conducted between 1 and 6 p. m. on Tuesdays and Saturdays.

Examination officers have received a communiention from Commissioner Dlander of the Michigan State Police which reads as follows:

"The new operator and chauffeur licensing procedure under Act 91, P. A., 1937, as amended, will go into effect April 1, 1938. On that date and thereafter, only applications made in compliance with the established rules and regulations and bearing the signature of a duly appointed examiner will be honored in Lansing."

Preparations for the exumination, which consists of oral, written, visual, and driving ability tests, were made at Traverse City last month when law enforcement officers from Northern Michigan met for a two-day exnmination institute, one of eight held throughout the state.

While in some cases, such as beginners, the examiners will have to supervise a road test according to the law's regulations, applicants who qualify for new licenses by satisfactorily passing the examination will be granted a permit to drive at once.

BASKETBALL BANQUET WAS A FINE AFFAIR

Capacity Crowd Paid Honor to Charlevoix's Champion Cagers

A capacity crowd estimated at two hundred attended the basketball banquet given in honor of Charlevoix's Red Rayders by the Pythians at the K. of P. hall Thursday evening.

Coach Ruy Kipke reviewed the team's outstanding record and records of previous teams during his ten years as coach here. He introduced individual members of the 1937-38 squad, runners-up in state class C competition, who responded with brief remarks. Dick Bergman's statement: "There have been Bergmans before me, and there will probably be Bergmans after me," virtually "brought the house dawn."

Coach "Buck" Reed of Western State College, Kalamazoo, MIAA champion, gave an interesting talk on basketball particularly and athletics generally. The affair was altogether a very enjoyable one.

Pa and Ma banquet will be held Thursday evening, March 31st, 6:30 o'clock, at I. O. O. F. hall.—Adv 11t3

MAP PLANS TO LAND 1939 STATE KIWANIS MEETING

Committee of Six Named to Direct Efforts—Cooperatioo of Public Will be Solicited

Initial steps in a campaign designed to bring the 1939 state Kiwanis convention to Charlevoix were launched by local Kiwanians at their meeting Tuesday night.

Prompted by the near success of efforts to land the 1938 meeting and by encouragement that a Charlevoix bid for the convention next year would be given deserved recognition, a strenunus drive is being mupped out.

President Robert F. Sloan has appointed a convention committee of six members with Robert Bridge as chairman and including members of last year's committee. Acting with Mr. Bridge will be Harold Hallett, William F. Meyer, M. A. Levinson, Rollie L. Lewis and Oscar P. North.

The Board of Commerce, civic groups and citizens generally will be asked to cooperate in the campaign. The convention, if obtained, would bring around 1,000 Kiwanians to Charlevoix.

Cooperuting in a state-wide Kiwanis plan to aid under-privileged children who are wards of the University Hospital at Ann Arbor, each local Kiwanis member is requested to bring a toy to the next regular meeting on Tuesday, April 5th. During the week of April 11 to 15 these toys will be boxed and shipped to Ann Arbor.

LOCAL FORSENIC CONTESTANTS ARE NAMED

Frances Meggison Competes in Declamations, Mary Clockling in Oratory

Charlevoix high school representatives in the sub-district contest for declamntions and oratory, to be held April 5th at East Jordan, were selected last week.

Miss Frances Meggison will compete in declamatinn. She was Charlevoix high school's representative in 1937 and won the sub-district contest. FLOOD DAMAGES HERE REPAIRED

RAIL SERVICE RESUMED SATURDAY AFTERNOON

M-66 Traffic Re-routed Due to Loeb Creek Wash-Out—Inland Lakes Highest in Years

While floods caused by one of the most sudden spring break-ups in local history are still apparent throughout northern Michigan, conditions directly affecting Charlevoix have been partially remedied.

Pere Marquette Railway service was resumed Saturday afternoon with completion of a trestle to replace the culvert washed out by Barber creek 1½ miles south of this city. Railroad maintenance crews put the finishing touches on the job Monday. Prior to Saturday passengers, express and mail had been transferred by automobile from the old Cherry "Y" to Charlevoix and Petoskey.

Diversion of traffic on M-66 due to the washout at Loeb creek still continues and up to this time the county highway commission is without information from the state highway department regarding plans for repair of the damage. Whether a bridge will be built or the fill repaired is a matter of conjecture.

In the meantime traffic is being diverted principally through Ellsworth, the safest route. Continued rains and unfavorable weather have hindered the work of making passable a detour past the north end of Adams lake and joining M-66 at the Mitchell corner. Cars have been using this route, but it is far from satisfactory and cannot be put in good shape until fair weather drys out the roadbed and allows grading.

High water at the municipal hydro-electric plant at Bellaire caused discontinuance of operation for a 24-hour period. The plant was shut down from midnight Thursday until Friday night when water reached a point endaagering operation.

Inland lakes throughout the region are at the highest point in many years. Cottages on the shores of the Intermediate chain at Ellsworth and farther south, as well as in the vicinity of Oden and resorts on Crooked lake north of Petoskey are surrounded by water in many instances. Last Thursday motor travel to East Jordan either by Charlevoix or Ellsworth was impossible due to flooded highways.

SMELT DIPPING ON IN NEARBY SMALL STREAMS

Good Catches Made Monday and Tuesday Nights, It Is Reported

Smelt dipping, so far this spring confined to the Jordan and Boyne rivers, has opened in streams adjacent to Charlevoix.

Stover creek, scene of the first Charlevoix county smelt run several years ago, is providing good dipping, as is also Loeb and other smaller streams emptying into Lake Charlevoix.

Local sportsmen reported large catches from both Stover and Loeb creeks Monday and Tuesday nights. The run in these streams should last a week or more.

CHARLEVOIX HARBOR IMPROVEMENTS RECOMMENDED

A recent Associated Press news released carries the information that Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley, chief of army engineers, has recommended improvements for Charlevoix harbor providing a channel 18 feet deep from Lake Michigan to Lake Charlevoix.

The cost is estimated at $18,000 and provisinn was made for a yearly maintenance appropriation of $6,000.

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Associatioo

Reflecting the administration's concern over the growing treasury deficit is the latest tax "trial balloon" sent up by John Fegan, chairman of the state tax commission.

It was last January, you will recall, that Governor Murphy proclaimed the merit of a state income tax at the Jackson Day dinner in Detroit. George Schroeder, speaker of the house, had previously mentioned the income tax as a possibility for legislative action. And about that time the tax commission's new consultant, Charles Darwin Rosa, a Wisconsin progressive and LaFollette Lieutenant, had publicly denounced the sales tax and had insisted that Wisconsin's income tax had not hurt industry.

If the income tax movement was a trial ballonn, it was quickly deflated, as public sentiment indicated that the Michigan taxpayer was cool to the plan, as he had been in other years when referendums were held.

CORRESPONDENCE

FAIRVIEW BANKS

Mrs. Gerrit Postmus has been on the sick list the past week.

72 degrees in the shade last week Tuesday. How is that for March in Northern Michigan

The annual spring election for Banks township will be held Monday, April 4th. Everybody out and vote.

Gerrit Sloothaak of Atwood was in the neighborhood the past week cutting wood for the farmers in this locality.

Albert DeJong and H. J. Timmer were in Charlevoix last Saturday attending the auction sale of George Engleton.

Mr. and Mrs. Nick Dehhinga of the Essex neighborhood are entertaining their brother and sister-in-law of Chicago, Ill., Mr. and Mrs. Rudenga, the past week.

On account of the extra warm weather and a few rains, lots of washouts occurred last week, and a few bridges washed out and the roads blocked off for a day.

Another of our old pioneers passed away on Wednesday evening, Peter Hennip of the Essex neighborhood. He with his wife (who died four years ago) were among the first settlers in this vicinity, about 40 years ago, and have lived on their farm two miles west of Ellsworth all that time. Mr. Hennip was a native of the Netherlands. Surviving are two sons and four daughters, and a host of friends. Funeral services were held Monday at 1:30 p. m. from the Christian Reformed church, of which he was a charter member. Mr. Hennip was 75 years old and was well and favorably known. We sympathize with the bereaved family.

CENTRAL LAKE

More like spring, but poor sugarmaking weather.

A large crowd of people from the surrounding country attended open Grange at Enstport last Saturday and listened to a fine program, and enjoyed an excellent pot-luck dinner.

Rev. G. A. Weaver and grandson, Richard Bowman, home from Houghton school for ten-day vacation, were visitors last week Tuesday at the J. W. Morse and Joseph Burkholder homes.

Wilmer Morse accompanied by his uncle, J. W. Morse, were business visitors at the county seat last Saturday. Jake Simon of Antrim City was also a visitor on business at Central Lake.

A. Snitseler's niece, the county clerk, was a visitor with her daughters Alice and Laura at Ann Arbor last week, returning home with Dr. Roger, who had been attending the clinic there.

Welfred Davis, our rural route mail man, is back from Florida, and says that he and wife and son Jimmy enjoyed themselves immensely at Clearwater. G. A. Morse, wife and son Clifford are trekking their way back from Clearwater, Florida this week, Rollo Johnson and wife are expected a little later.

Everybody remember the revival meetings which begin a week from next Sunday at Bellaire M. E. church by Flying Evangelist, Rev. C. L. Robey of Union Springs, New York, who comes in his own aeroplane. All Northern Michigan is expected to give him a hearty welcome. Rev. McClinnock of Mancelona Menonite church begins revival meeting there April 13.

Most of the snow has disappeared from our highways. Scatter drifts near the roadside, still are found near Central Lake, while near Mancelona nearly all snow has gone and clouds of dust arise as the autos streak along. Ice has left the bay and Old Torch, and Grand Traverse Bay records another season when it did not freeze over, sign of a changeable weather season for us.

Attendances at Jordan River last Sunday was 35, and at Green River 31. Rev. Weaver of Petoskey was present and gave an excellent talk at Jordan River Sunday school. The Caukins, Morris' and others who have been snowed in the past two months were out last Sunday. At Green River Miss Irma Bradley, who with most of the Bradley family, have been ill for sometime with the flo, are somewhat improved, and are glad to have the church people and others call, and at least look in the window.

An excellent article was written for the Torch last week by Mrs. Ada Zipp-Darling of Central Lake on "ye olden time" and mentions a Mancelona young man at the age of 21, who was found at Mancelona in 1872, by the name of Joseph Burkholder. Mr. Borkholder, Sunday, was still feeling fine, and said Mrs. Darling was right, as he was 86 years of age last November 14. Where are those physicians that say one begins to get hardening of the arteries as soon as he is born. Bro. Burkholder never used much medicine.

Will Farrel's people had quite a time dipping water both night and day, from their cellar, as they have a furnace in the basement. Other people were kept home from Sunday school Sunday, dipping water from the basement. At present, ye correspondent has about foor feet of ice cold water in his basement, and knows that it is ice cold, as he made two unsuccessful attempts to navigate it to salvage his canned fruit, but had to give it up. There will perhaps, be a nice lot of water there for spraying the cherry orchard this spring.

Bay View and Creswell people please take notice that Rev. George A. Weaver, missionary from Petoskey, will be present at Bay View next Sunday, April 3, at 10 o'clock a. m., and at Creswell at 2 o'clock p. m. to reorganize Sunday school at those places. Sunday school is asked to be held at Creswell in the afternoon, next Sunday, so that Bro. Weaver can take in both places while he is down this way. If Creswell people will please condescend to come out for once in the afternoon, Rev. Weaver will be very much accommodated. Everybody come, and make this season one of the best ever in the rural Sunday school work. Rev. Weaver attended Star Sunday-school as a guest east of Alba last Sunday afternoon, after leaving Jordan River. Bro. Weaver is feeling and looking fine. Mrs. Weaver has had a bad cold of late.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE NEWS-BULLETIN

State's Book Prices Lowest, Case Cautions

The Department of State calls attention to the prices at which various official publications are available, in view of the fact that at least one publishing firm is offering them for higher prices than the state charges.

The only source private publishing houses have for official state publications, is the state itself, and there is no limit on the number of books which can be bought at the price available to everyone. The state's prices are for cash payment; in instances where higher prices are charged, with credit arrangements available, it is the belief of Leon D. Case, secretary of state, that the differential should be publicly known.

The department of state will send, charges prepaid, to any point in Michigan, or express charges collect elsewhere, a number of publications. Prices of those in most frequent demand are: Compiled Laws of 1929, $15; Public Acts of 1931, 1933 and 1935, $1.50 each; Public Acts of 1937 $1.75; Michigan Manuel, 1937 edition, $1.75.

Another Balloon Down

The second balloon to go up was the personal property tax, personally sponsored by Chairman Fegan, youthful head of the tax commission. Fegan was impressed by success in other states of putting "hidden wealth" on tax rolls by the simple procedure of examining U. S. income tax reports.

Rebuffed by the governor who vetoed the announced plan of taxing all personal property valued at more than $1,000 per individual, Fegan tried to explain his actions by declaring that legislators had been bribed by vested interests to defeat certain tax legislation in the last session.

The bribe story stirred another tempest, the second as stormy as the first.

Lieutenant-Governor Leo Nowicki jumped into the arena with a demand for evidence. Speaker George Schroeder intimated that Fegan's tax moves and talk were bad in a campaign year.

When the governor left for a vacation in the South, the second tax balloon had returned to earth.

As with the income tax, Fegan's plan demonstrated that Michigan is getting tax conscious. And that is something.

Unemployment Tax

Whereas the income tax and personal tax have been sidetracked for the immediate future at least, the administration has nailed to its 1939 legislative platform a plank to broaden the base of the state unemployment tax.

Michigan's unemployment compensation act applies only to employers of eight or more persons.

Industries of any importance are affected.

But the "little business man", who stirred up such a fuss at Washington several months ago, was exempt from the tax by the legislature in 1936.

Frank Picard, chairman of the commission, wants to see the compensation benefits extended to 300,000 workers. The governor agrees with Picard and has pledged to the A. F. of L. that he would support extension of the tax to cover all employees. Note this: The jobless levy is not taken out of the worker's pay check. It is a tax on the employer, running up to 3 per cent of the annual pay roll.

Chippewa to Ontonagon

Due to the modern railroad, the Hiawatha country of the Upper Peninsula has again been brought closer to the recreation-hungry millions of Chicago.

The lumber and mining industries once thrived in the forest-covered hills of the Upper Peninsula.

Now, the tourist business, second in Michigan of all industries, regarded as the hope of this natural wonderland. The only barrier, distance from large cities, is being rapidly removed as railroads inaugurate super-speed trains and offer de luxe accommodations for passengers.

Ontonagon county, a stronghold of the Chippewa Indians, has been brought within 10 hours' time of Chicago by inauguration of the "Chippewa" speed train by the Milwaukee Road.

She withdrew her fingers.

"Perhaps," she said softly, "perhaps I can."

Pedro the Younger and Escabellito came dashing to the Governor's side.

"Father!" shouted Pedro breathlessly. "Look ahead! See, there is something strange moving down the road! What do you suppose it is, wild Indians?"

"Al, my child, I almost wish for your sake we would meet some wild Indians. Where is this opparition?"

Young Pedro jumped up in his stirrups, "See—down there at the turn. Sumething yellow—"

"Yellow?" The Governor leaned forward. "Ah, yes, I see. I know who it is. It's Fray Junipero, and Pio carrying his yellow umbrella! Andale! We will overtake him."

Fray Junipero, lost in unearthly dreams, was startled at the sound of hoof-beats so near him, and moved off the royal road hastily as the gay party of riders dashed toward him. The Governor reined io his mount, which reared upright on quivering hsunches, and faced the missionary.

"Hail, Father!" he cried, waving his hat. Then he dismouoted hastily.

Fray Junipero blinked, and said softly, "Ah, your Excellency!"

With an impulsive gesture Fages put both hands on the monk's shoulders. The face, though browned and weather-beaten, gave the impression of being pale and wan. The deep lines were deeper, the silver tonsure whiter. Beneath his hands he could feel the shoulders, in their hot coarse brown covering, so bent, so thin, trembling. But it was Junipero Serra's eyes that startled him. Fiery with straoge inoer fires, they burned in his bony skull, oot meeting the Governor's inteot look, but darting avidly among the company of riders on the eamooio.

"My brothers . . . my inen of God . . .," he murmured, "O graeious Excellency, where are the answers to my prayer?"

Pedro Fages dropped his hands. He half turned from the missionary, avoiding his seorching look. For a brief second he stood tense, still, his hand on the hilt of his sword. Then he flung his head up abruptly.

"Father Junipero . . ." he began bravely.

But Junipero Serra interrupted him.

"Don Pedro!" he eried in a trembling voice, holding out his haods fearfully. "Don't tell me . . . but I had a vision . . a promise! Ah, praise to God on high! There they are! Ai, ai, my Brothers! Come here, closer! Let me see you . . . touch you! You are holy men, an answer to prayer!" He stumbled toward Mariano Rubi and Bartolome Gill holding out his arms, tears streaming down his cheeks.

The two did not mova, but stood as though stricken in their tracks.

"Alleluja!" he chanted, "Ave Maria Purisima! The prayers of Junipero Serra are answered!"

Still tha two stood dumbly. Rubi's face was red with a guilty flush, while Gill grew pale; they too, like the Governor, avoided the fires of his eyes.

In his joy, the fervid missionary noticed none of these things. He looked about him for the Governor.

"Ah, forgive me, my son, for not greeting you!" he cried. "You and all your party have my blessing!"

La Gobernadora was staring at him. Then she slipped carefully from her horse and walked to the priest. For a moment she measured him with a look, tben her eyes dropped.

Here was a man, a little man, but he towered toward Heaven, and her eyes could not measure his stature. Her heart pounded. Her knees weakened, and almost against her will she found herself kneeling before him.

"It is my wife," she heard her husband say.

"Ah, La Gobernadora," said the priest. "Your prayers are answered too, Don Pedro." His words to her were simple, a welcome, a blessing. Then she was on her mount again. Dimly she heard Pedrito presented to the padre, and others talking. But she was silent, as though uoder a spell.

"Good Father," the Governor was saying, "you must mount my horse and we will all ride into Monterey together. Come, up with you."

Fray Junipero drew back.

"Ah, my son, you know I never ride. I still have the legs God gave me, though one of them is not very good."

Fray Juniperu Drew Back.

"Then with your permission, Padre, I will walk with you."

"Yes, yes. And my two Brothers-in-God! Where are you, my Brothers?" He looked around him. The two friars who were muttering to each other joined him with sanctimonious smiles. Again Serra put his arms about them. "We will walk together, this way, Brothers, I, the older in the ceoter, with two strong good young trees like yourselves to lean against, eh?" he asked delightedly. The others acquiesced in embarrossmeot.

Young Pedro slipped his hand into his father's and walked beside him. The Goveroor looked at his lady, so still and white on her white horse.

"My dear," he begao. She smiled at him, but addressed the priest.

"I too, would walk with your Reverence, but," laying a haod on her heart with a dignified, significaot gesture, "you see how it is with me."

The priest returned her smile and raised a haod to her.

"But I will follow slowly behind you, if I may."

CHAPTER XII

The Governor's lady sat in a great hand-made chair of native sycamore wood on the portal of her new home, basking in the warm sunshine. Her feet rested on Escabellito, who lay eying Chichi, tethered to one of the upright logs that supported the thalched roof of the portal.

From within the house came sounds af bustle and fuss, and Angustias' exasperated voica as sha and the maids, with tha help of a couple of Indian girls, strove to dispose of the contents of Eulalia's trunks and ehests which erowded the small house.

The arrival had been exeiting. For some time before they, Padre Serra, the Governor, young Pedro and herself, had reached the presidio, they could hear bells ringing, volleys of shots, singing. As they drew nearer they could seo moving figures, black in the glow from great bonfires built in the center and four corners of the walled presidio. It was all too canfusing for her to get any definite impressions of the place or of the people that crowded about her. Only two personalities remained with her. One was a round, dark, officious little man, presented by her husband as Capitan Nicolas Soler. The other was an Indian girl, about fifteen, who was awaiting them in tha house. The girl had glanced casually at La Gobernadora, then kept her eyes on the Governor. He had potted her head and ealled her Indizuela.

Eulalia frowned and kicked Escabellito slightly as be slapped Chichi, who was reaching tentative exploratory fingers toward tha small Indian's thatch of long hair.

Iodizuela. Um-m. Rather pretty. Some Spanish blood in her background undoubtedly. She would hava to inquire, very carefully, about Indizuela. At least she was adequately clothed. La Gobernadora sighed and stared out at the presidio basking in the spring sun.

"So this is the place," she reflected. "This is the Royal Presidio of San Carlos de Munterey. That hut in the center of the enclosure is no doubt the royal chapel. I can hardly believe there were manifestations of joy and thanksgiving when this place was founded or that bells raag, masses were celebrated and congratulations published all over Spain and Mexico."

As Eulalia gazed broodingly across the bay, she knew, suddenly, that this was the first of many hours she would poss so. Hours when she would strain her eyes futilely, watching the bay of Monterey, noping for a ship to arrive with news from the world, and fresh faces, longing for a bresk in the deadly monotony of life in the Royal Presidio of Monterey.

"No!" she exclaimed so suddenly that Escabellito jumped. She pushed him oside with her foot, and stood, hands cleoched at her sides. "No! I will not live the rest of my life like a coptive in chains, or a wild bird caged! I will escope."

She went into the house.

After the blaze of sun shining on the sandy psrade-ground before her house, and on the gleaming whitewosh of the walls and houses she wos blinded for a moment. When vision returned she paced slowly through the six rooms uf the Governor's polace.

She passed down the hall and looked into the dining-room, long, low and narrow, with a hand-mode sideboard, table, benches, ond one wiodow looking out into the kitchen garden. Next the diming-room, a hedroom, Angustias'; across the hall a chamber for young Pedro, and another for the Governor and his lady.

She went into her bedchamber and found Angustias, her maids and the Indian girls in a state of confusion.

"Ah, my lady!" exclaimed the duena, "if you could only give me some word of advice! Where shall I put this stuff? There isn't room in the house for it all."

Angustias," said Eulalia, her voice trembling, "I can't tell you what to do. It seems to me we shall have to live here like a soldier's family. Do our cooking in the middle of the floor, est with our hands, snd throw scraps to the dogs. The Governor's palace, indeed! It is only fit for a soldier's woman, and her brood of dirty brats."

Angustias saw the need for firm action.

"I admit it isn't much of a place," she said, beginning to stir about briskly. "But we will do the best we can. Your clothes of course, can remain in the chests, and they can be pushed back against the walls." She began pulling things about. "And these can go in the sala, and these in the dining-room, and—"

"Ai, ai, Angustias! Stop it! Listen. Unpack only the clothes that I need for the present. As for the other things, leave them alone. What is the use of unpacking them? I will not be here long."

Angustias stopped. "What do you mean, nioo? Not be here long?" She stepped over and looked anxiously into her mistress' face. "Do you feel ill? Do you feel that you are going to—to die? When your time comes?"

Eulalia laughed nervously.

"No, no. Forget what I said. I am not afraid I am going to die. Make thiogs as comfortable as you can, my good Angustias, for the present." She patted the anxious woman on the shoulde and walked out into the sunshine again.

She became aware of a little flurry among the soldiers at the gate. A man was riding into the enclosure, his clothes and horse a bright spot of moving color. Across tha parade-ground he moved toward the palacio, his mount curveting and caracoling spiritedly. He pulled up before the lady in the big chair and, swinging off his hat, bowed low, much to her surprise. Then sha recognized him.

It was Capitan Nicolas Soler, whose face she remembered from the evening before. He was all smiles and bows, and made not an unhandsome figura in his gay clothes, raiment which lookad rather strange to Eulalia as sha had not been in California long enough to become acquainted with the singular and characteristic style the Californian gentlemen had adopted.

"Greetings to you, Senora la Gobernadora!" ha cried. "I know your Excellency is not receiving visitors as yet, but I have made so bold as to eome and call nevertheless. You will not be so unkind as to send ma away?"

Eulalia smiled.

"If it is the custom of ladies in California to receive early visits from gentlemen whila their husbands are busy, I suppose you may, Capitan Soler."

He dismounted and walked toward her. He was short and broad for his height, and Eulalia had a rapid impression that he looked like a fighting rooster, with enormous silver spurs springing from his heels like a game-cock's.

Again ha bowed ceremoniously and kissed her hand. Then, when the lady gave him permission, he sat near her feet and leaned against a post.

"I do not know what the eustoms of the ladies are in California," he said ehattily. "Anything that you may do, any precedent you may establish, will be followed by all the women in the province. For you are the First Lady, and the officers' wives will follow you. Oh, of course, they are ladies, too. Little ladies. You are a grond lady. And now California society will be changed. And if I have helped you make it a social rula that poor bachelor officers may call on the ladies whila their husbands are away, I think that is very nice."

Eulalia was pleased. "I think you put a great responsibility upon me," she said charmingly. "But I must

Huw does this menu sound to you?

Wheat cakes, maple syrup and coffee for breakfast.

Baked potato, roast pork, apple sauce, cucumber salad, hot rolls, pineapple sherbert and cakes for dinner.

Spaghetti and meat balls, a gelatine salad, gingerbread and tea for lunch ur supper.

Belleve it or not, nutritionists at Michigan State College find that constitutes a poor diet. The three meals above furnish only about one third of the daily minimum of vitamins.

Protective foods can be found in such foods as whole grain cereal, an egg or cheese, a pint of milk, citrus fruit or tomatoes and some other fruit and two yellow green vegetables.

Suggestions to the three meals which sound so appetizing and yet in science are found to be inadequate are comparatively simple. A few changes are in order.

Add an orange to the breakfast.

Use a cooked green vegetable and celery and carrot sticks instead of cucumber salad at dinner.

For lunch or supper serve cheese souffle, tomato and green salad, whole wheat rolls or bran muffins and jelly, with milk for a beverage.

CHANGE TO AN OIL-PLATED ENGINE

OIL-PLATING forms throughout your engine as soon as you leave the pit with your Conoco Germ Processed oil—the patented oil that metal attracts. Thus every working surface is lastingly glazed with oil, or OIL-PLATED. Indeed like any perfect plating, OIL-PLATING actually IS the working surface. Like a barrier that's forever commanding wear to "Keep Off," OIL-PLATING is maintained without a break, though your OIL-PLATED engine speeds all day and stands all night.

Even the very first piston-stroke, at every start, has to take place on slippy OIL-PLATING that can't drain down "between times," or simmer all off under Summer sun. So you can well understand what's keeping up your oil level and your OIL-PLATED engine. Continental Oil Company

FARM ACT PROGRAM EXPLANATION GIVEN

The members of the Charlevoix County Agricultural Conservation Committee, including the agricultural agent, received an explanation of the program of the 1938 Farm Act at the district meeting at Gaylord on March 22.

The new program has these aims: 1. Maintaining farm income; 2. Consumer protection through plentiful but not wasteful production of food and fiber; 3. Soil conservation.

Acreage allotments to each farm will be made immediately, so that each farm will have an acreage of crops that will result in ample production plus a reasonable reserve under normal conditions. Provision is made in the new farm program, that for years of unusually large yields resulting in a surplus of basic farm crops, this surplus may be stored on farms until needed by increased consumption, exports or crop failures.

Holding this surplus on farms in years of large yields should result in prices received by the farmers and paid by the consumer, that will be more constant and fair, the committee believes.

Each farm will have a soil building goal encouraging the carrying out of good soil management practices designed to maintain and rebuild the nation's wealth of productive soil.

LUECKE VOTES AGAINST BILL INCREASING NAVY

Congressman Luecke voted against the billion dollar naval expansion bill. That act on the Congressman's part won't hurt him any in his district, because most of his folks have sized up that bill about the same as Rev. Father Coughlin told about it last Sunday.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

Approximately 50 Farmers Will Complete the 1937 Farm Account Year

During the past week considerable time has been devoted to checking in the farm account books now being kept by over fifty progressive farmers in the county.

Three days were spent in this project by three representatives of the Farm Management Department with approximately one hour scheduled for each book. A total of 43 books were checked in during that time with the balance to be visited this week. Some eleven cooperators are now starting their tenth year which certainly proves that the keeping of farm records is greatly appreciated by those interested in the project.

4-H Club Achievement Day Plans Now Being Developed

Present indications point to the largest 4-H club achievement day ever held in the county. 450 projects will be represented by exhibits. A wonderful program is being developed which will be of interest to all folks in the county.

While the program has not been completed yet arrangements are being made for free moving pictures from 10:00 to 12:00 o'clock, pot-luck lunch in the basement of the gymnasium, and a dress review in the afternoon. In addition, musical numbers will be furnished by members of the Charlevoix high school band, and other special numbers.

It is expected that exhibits will be placed on Saturday, April 23 with the program scheduled for Tuesday, April 26. If you want to see results from this wonderful program with the young boys and girls throughout the county, don't fail to see this exhibit and enjoy the program on Tuesday, April 26.

Seed and Crop Loans Now Available

This spring seed and crop loans are available for those who are unable to obtain the necessary items of crop production. As security for the loan it is necessary to execute a crop mortgage covering all crops to be grown this year. If a landlord is involved then it is necessary for the landlord to sign a waiver giving the Federal Government a first lien on all income from crops.

If a seed loan is applied for then it is necessary to give a mortgage on livestock in addition to crops as security.

The interest rate is four per cent with the notes maturing on either August 31 or October 31, depending on whether the mortgage is a crop mortgage or a livestock mortgage. The later date refers to the seed loan mortgage.

Any farmers now being assisted by the farm security program cannot obtain a seed loan as they should receive whatever help is necessary from the Farm Security Administration. If you are interested in applying for one of these loans be sure and do it right away as the time is short.

EVIDENCE BRANDS MERGANSER FISH PREDATOR

Duck Killed at Union City Had 27 Small Fish in Stomach

Evidence which would seem sufficient in any court to convict the merganser duck as a robber of fishermen has been sent from Union City to the state department of conservation at Lansing.

The evidence was comprised of 27 small fish, the majority of them bluegills, taken from the crops of two mergansers shot by Conservation Officer C. J. Cole near the municipal dam in the St. Joseph river.

A survey to determine the extent of the merganser's predation on fish species other than trout is now under way in the Kalamazoo river under the supervision of the institute for fisheries research, the fact finding branch of the fish division of the conservation department.

COMMERCIAL FISHING OPERATIONS UNDER WAY

Charlevoix and Beaver Island Fleets Free from Ice Hinderance

Full resumption of commercial fishing operations in northern Lake Michigan waters is reported here. Beaver Island fishing craft were released Thursday from St. Jhones harbor and set the same day.

Local operators who fished out of Northport, Frankfort and Ludington during the winter season have returned to home port.

While ice is still heavy in the straits, the bay off Charlevoix is completely free and no floes are reported south of here.

WOULD CLOSE TRAVERSE BAY TO GILL NETTERS

Petitions are circulated requesting that the Grand Traverse Bay be closed to commercial net fishing.

The petitions, sponsored by the Traverse Region Sportsman's Club, seek a ban on the use of nets but approve fishing with a line for perch and lisen and Mackinaw deep sea trolling.

Because action by the state legislature will be necessary to close the bay, the program will be sent to Lansing when sufficient signatures are obtained.

TAX....

Taxes here and taxes there,
Taxes, taxes everywhere,
Tax on everything I eat,
Taxed until I cannot sleep.
And at last I do believe,
They'll tax the very air we breathe.
If it happens I can't pay—
And they take the air away,
So I cannot get my breath—

MANY MOTORISTS ARE WITHOUT NEW PLATES

Figures Reveal 100,000 Tardy in Buying 1938 Auto Tags

Approximately 100,000 Michigan automobiles are without 1938 license plates, M. J. Murphy, director of the accounts division in the department of state, estimated Friday.

He reported that on March 19 automobile owners had purchased 826,187 full-year plates and 471,850 half-year plates for a total of 1,298,037. Approximately 1,500,000 cars were licensed in 1937. The actual number of plates issued was 1,649,108 but it was estimated that 200,000 of them were for new cars which replaced junked vehicles.

Half-year plates are more popular this year than last. The number of half-year permits in 1937 was 438,000.

Sunday school, 12 o'clock.

Meets first Wednesday evening each month at 7:45 p. m.

Reading room open Saturday, 3 to 5 p. m.

We cordially invite the public to our service and reading room.

"Unreality" will be the subject of the lesson-sermon in all Christian Science churches thruughout the world on Sunday, April 3.

The Golden Text, (I John 2: 17), is: "And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof: bot he that doeth the will of God abideth for ever."

Among the Bible citations is this passage (Ps. 107:21): "Oh that men would praise the Lord for his gondness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!"

Correlative passages to be read from the Christian Scienle textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptores," by Mary Baker Eddy, inslode the following (p. 119): "God is natural good, and is represented only by the idea of goodness; while evil should be regarded as unnatoral, because it is opposed to the natore of Spirit, God."

DISTRICT HEALTH UNIT

Infant Mortality by Cause and Age

The death rate of infonts from seven days to nne year of age, in the United States registration area, has been redoced 53 per cent during the years 1916 to 1934 inclosive. During the samg time the death rate of infants under seven days of age has been reduced only 10 per cent. In order that the infant mortality rate may bo further reduced the chief effort must he to reduce deaths onder two weeks of age and particolarly tn prevent those that occur during the first few days of life.

A cose stody hy a group of workers revealed thst cerebral hemorrhage was the leading cause of death followed by congenital malformations, pneumonia, asphyxia, pulmonary hemorrhage and edema of the brain.

There are four factors which contribote greatly to infant deaths, these factors being: (1) maternol complications; (2) inexpert obstetric care; (3) incorrect or inadequate neonatal care; (4) prematurity. One of the first things, therefore, thnt we shoold consider is the early dingnosis aad treutment of moternal complications which means adequote prenatal care is essential. The next step is thot the mother should be carefol in choosing a well trained physician for her child. In regards to a premature child, it shoold have the best of attention with proper maintenance, proper body temperature, proper feeding, protection against infection and use of oxygen, these being the main safegoards of the premature infant. Education and proper methods of infant hygiene nre importont to help in further redocing neonotal mortality.

A graph representing the infant mortality of New York state over a five-year period, 1931-1935, was prepared by the Metropolitan Insurance Company. It was interesting to observe that more infants now die in March than in any of the remaining months of the year. In that month the death rate among children onder age one is particularly high from respiratory diseases, soch as influenza, bronchitis, bronchopneomonia, and obar pneumonia. Other diseases, with a high infant mortallty, Incidence in March are measles, whooping cough and congenital malformations.

A totol of 56 infant deaths occurred in District Health Unit No. 3 this past year, that is in the counties of Antrim, Charlevoix, Emmet and Otsego. This number represents an infant mortality rate for oor district of 58. compared with 57.6 in 1936 and 57.1 in 1935. These deaths suhdivided by causes and age are shown below: (under one month in the first column, 1-12 months in the second and total in the last column) ainnit I have no social aspirations toward California. It would be an empty honor to be social leader over some Indinn girls—and some soldiers' women."

Capitan Soler glanced hastily at the quarters on either side of the palacio from whose open shutters he knew they were being looked upon, perhaps overheard.

"Ah, Senora la Gobernadora, but you will be surprised at the social life that goes on here!"

Eulalia raised her brows.

"I will indeed. Is it possible? What is there to do?"

"Well, we have picnics and barbecues in the woods around us here; or on the beach, close by, is a place where there are mussels and clams to be gathered. We go there, the Indinns gather the shellfish, and we cook and eat them. Then we have parties in the different little houses—dancing, music. Or we visit the Presidio of Santa Barbara or of San Francisco, and have fiestas. Ah, indeed," he concluded with a shade of sarcasm, "we are quite gay."

Eulalia looked at him in surprise. Was it possible that he was actually pleased with such bucolic pleasures?

"But no receptions, no theaters, no opera—no music?" she asked.

"Certainly not, Senora la Gobernadora! Why, Sennra, I do not believe you realize that this"—and he waved his hand about the presidio—"is all there is to the capital of California."

"I don't believe I do, Capitan Soler. No, I'm very sure I do not. I am still expecting to see something that looks like a capital city, I am afraid."

"You do not like California."

Eulalia started, but he went on rapidly.

"No, you do not like California, I can see that. And I do not blame you. It is no place for a lady of your culture or your beauty, one used to the life you have had. It is cruel for the King to insist that the Governor should be a family man, and bring his wife to this country."

A trumpet called across the presidio. The great gates swung open and the Governor of the Californios rode in with a party of horsemen. He dismissed them and cantered across to the palacio. Soler rose to his feet and saluted his Excellency.

"Well," said Don Pedro, "calling on La Gobernadora early, I see,"

Soler cast a quick glance at the lady.

"Yes," he replied shortly, "I saw her Excellency sitting alone here and came to pay my respects. I must be going now. I trust I have not bored her."

"Not at all!" chimed Eulalia. "I have enjoyed your conversation. You must call again."

The Capitan bowed again, and swung on to his horse.

Don Pedro called in at the door, "Indizuela?" When she answered he spoke in the Indian dialect, and they laughed. She brought him a chair, and wine in a cup. He threw himself into the chair, stretching out his legs with a sigh, and drank his wine in thirsty gulps. Eulalia fidgeted.

"Why were you so rude to Capitan Soler?"

"I do not like him."

"Why?"

"I never dislike anyone without reason. He is an officious, meddling, ambitious upstart."

"Is that all?"

"No. But why talk about him? I am at home now, would rather talk with my beautiful wife. Look here." He pulled a sheaf of papers from his wallet. "These papers arrived for me on the San Carlos."

Eulalia started. "The San Carlos! Where is she?"

"Oh, she has come and gone again, back to Mexico."

"Ah—she has," Eulalia sighed. "She has gone."

"Yes, but there are plenty of documents for me to look to now." He opened a rattling paper and read it while Eulalia stared across the lonely boy.

A soldier, riding up to the palacio, looked at the Governor in amazement, and saluted.

"What are they?" demanded Eulalia as soon as the soldier was out of sight.

"Letters from home, for you," answered Fages, putting them in her lap. "The San Carlos left them."

"And you had them in your office—wherever that is—all this time and forgot to bring them to me? How could you? How could you when you know how hungry I am for news from home, and how long it has been since I have had any? Oh, I do not see how you—"

For hours La Gobernadora sat reading avidly. Letters from her mother, and from friends; accounts of dancing parties, theater, opera, moonlight horseback picnics, new clothes, gossip of this one and that; all the gay life of the gay capital of Mexico. And she, isolated in this California, read and reread every word.

CHAPTER XIII

Fog crept in from the sea, smothering the Royal Presidio of San Carlos de Monterey, and the Mision San Carlos Borromeo in a damp clinging blanket. It hung in wisps from the pines and cypresses, and muffled the sounds of the horses' hoofs as the Governor and his party traveled the two leagues of the Via Cruces from the presidio to the mission.

La Gobernadora, riding in a litter, watched the gray totters lift for a revealing moment, showing odd tortured shapes of gnarled cypress. Then a breeze from the sea would blow, hiding everything again in gray veils. She could hear the ocean, whispering, sighing, breaking into crashing cries as the waves met frustration against rocky crags where the cypress hung precariously.

Shivering, she pulled her velvet mantle around her, burying her chin in the robe of supple otter skins. Her Indian bearers trotted along the narrow road with an even lope, half-naked, glistening with moisture. At one side of her rode the Governor in such gravity as became the Governor of the Californias on his way to mass.

SPEED

Some of the questions asked when you apply for a driver's license may concern speed. Here are the general limits in Michigan. Usually, 15 miles per hour in business sections and 20 miles per hour in residential districts are legal, although local or state authorities may alter them. Therefore, if signs designate a higher speed, you may drive faster, provided it is safe.

When on rural highways, you may usually drive at the speeds indicated by signs, or in their absence, as fast as safety will permit. But remember, any unsafe speed is unlawful. Keep your car under control so you can stop short of anything obstructing the highway. Your car is as long as the distance required to stop it.

FOLLOWING

The law requires you to keep at such the speed of the car above and go slowly enough and far enough behind that you will avoid it if the driver stops suddenly.

MICHIGAN WILL GET NEW POULTRY PLANT

Federal Research Laboratory at Michigan State College

Early start this year on construction of the first units of a federal research poultry laborntory is expected on the campus farms of Michigan State College at East Lansing.

Officials of the government recently accepted the offer of the college to provide 50 acres of land. The laboratory is designed to define poultry disease causes. It will serve 25 north central and northeastern states in which poultry disease losses annually are estimated at nearly one millinn dollars.

Approximately $80,000 will be put into the first units of the federal laboratory, these men from Washington estimated. In succeeding years additional money will be spent on equipment, staff salaries and on construction of additional units of what may eventually be a quarter million dollar research plant.

RUST CLAIM HEAVY DAMAGES ON FARM

Neglect of Machinery Runs Into Millions of Dollars Yearly

Rusting and abuse of farm machinery worth an estimated $105,000,000 in Michigan are needlessly costing farmers millions of dollars annually.

Too much farm machinery is thrown away because it is out of adjustment, comments A. J. Bell, extension specialist in agricultural machinery at Michigan State College.

He has just completed a series of 25 community repair schools all over the state, part of the college work in trying to make Michigan farming more efficient and profitable.

At Marshall a mower was dug out of a fence corner. For $2.75 it is ready for the 1938 hay crop. At Isabella a 37 year old mower was put in shape at a cost of $8.75 instead of replacing with a new mower which would cost about a hundred dollars.

Eight percent is the figure estimated for annual depreciation on farm machinery. Plus interest, taxes, repairs and insurance this mounts to 15½ per cent. Bell estimated this might be reduced by proper care to 13½ per cent, or an annual savings to Michigan farmers of $2,100,000.

ONLY BOYS OF GOOD CHARACTER WANTED

American Legion Citizenship School Open to Those Capable of Leading

"Selection of a boy to attend Wolverine Boys' State, the American Legion citizenship school at Michigan State college next June, is a real honor," said Leo Allard, commander of Leslie T. Shupton post in Charlevoix this week.

"Wolverine Boys' State is not a program designed for underprivileged boys, nor have facilities been established to take care of delinquent boys. Boys of potential leadership tendencies, who have high moral character and good sportsmanship, are the boys who are wanted in the American Legion encampment next June 16 to 25 at East Lansing."

Any local organization may sponsor a boy, and the sole cost is $12.50 plus transportation to and from East Lansing. Reservations will be limited to 800.

The method of selecting the boy is left entirely to the sponsoring organization. In many communities the high school principals and superintendents have been asked to aid in the selection.

Furthermore, there will be no military drills or discipline other than a morning call or reveille, flag exercise, and lights out at night. Boys will organize city governments, then county governments, and finally a state government with legislature in session and all the present-day functions of public service.

Problems will be entirely apart from existing political parties and will be free from propaganda, according to word received by Legion officers here.

The political parties of Boys' State will be purely mythical, and none of the principles of existing parties will be allowed to be adopted by the boys' groups. Legion leaders emphasize that it is a training school in democratic government, sharply in contrast with militaristic fascism and communism in Europe today.

Mr. Jones married in 1883 to Julia Jacobs of Sturgeon Bay. Surviving besides the widow are five daughters, Mrs. Edna Warner of Saginaw, Mrs. Deed Rice of Alanson, Mrs. Claud Lott of Toledo, O., Mrs. John Cutler of East Jordan and Mrs. John Broadders of Royal Oak; three sons, William of Sacramento, Calif., and Melvin and Elden of Ironton. COSTUMES OF EARLY PERIODS SHOWN AT STUDY CLUB MEETING

Under the direction of Mrs. Rosa Nettleton, the dress of the ancients, the farthingales, and the frills of Colonial ladies were portrayed to thirty guests of the Tuesday Study Club at its annual party held Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Nettleton, an accomplished artist, has after much research, carved and painted miniature figures showing the manner and style of dress from the beginning of recorded history to the present time.

After the showing of each of the miniatures, a club member appeared wearing a similar costume, also fashioned by Mrs. Nettleton.

The ever changing folk on the stage, their counterparts in life, together with appropriate music by Max Smith, director of music at Charlevoix high school, and Arthur Nettleton, transported the members and their guests from the stereotyped life of today to the glamorous pageantry of the past.

In recognition of her untiring efforts on behalf of the Club, a bouquet of flowers was presented Mrs. Nettleton by the members.

TWO NEW MEMBERS FOR SUPERVISORS

EAST JORDAN AND CHANDLER MAKE CHANGES MONDAY

Six Present Supervisors Win Out Against Opposition — Organization Meeting April 12th

Two new supervisors were elected to office out of twenty-five Charlevoix county precincts at Monday's general election. They will take their seats when the board convenes for its organization meeting here on Tuesduy, April 12.

MANY PREDATORS DESTROYED THIS YEAR

Nearly 500 Animals Taken During January and February

Records of the department of conservation to which predator kills are reported show that 249 animals were turned in for hounty during January and February while 82 more were bagged by conservation officers during the same two months. Offieers are not paid bounty. Figures for the March kill have not been completed but the take for the month ran about average.

Last year the bounty system netted a total of 3,110 predators for which bounties of $42,795 were paid.

HONOR STUDENTS ARE ANNOUNCED

ALICE McHUGH VALEDICTORIAN SENIOR CLASS

Lyle Beattie Is Salutatorian—Third Boy in Family to Receive Scholastic Recognitioo

Miss Alice McHugh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. T. McHugh, wins the valedictory honor in the class of '38 of Charlevoix high school with an average of 97.75.

Considerable interest in other activities is evident in Miss McHugh's record. First places in sub-district contests in declamations and oratory, service on many school and class committees, duties as secretary-treasurer of the junior class, a prominent part in the senior play, excellent support of the school paper and fine uctivity as a member of the Girls' League, indicate the all around nature of Miss McHugh's high school career.

Lyle Beattie, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Beattie of Barnard, is salutatorian with an average of 96.25. First it was Carl Beattie as salutatorian in 1932, then Clare Beattie as valedictorian in 1936. The scholastic record of this family is an exceptionally remarkable one.

Lyle has taken part in much committee work, showing his worth to classmates and members of the faculty. While the need of making a drive of several miles before and after school prevented him from participating in many activities, Lyle has been an enthusiastic supporter of all.

Other seniors whose work has heen of high ealiber are Jeanne Campbell, Rosemary Cooper, Robert Dean, Charles Dhaseleer, Pauline Harrington, Margaret Lamb, Florence Palmer and Ben Palmer.

In the only contest, Fred V. Tyler, incumbent treasurer, defeated Clayton E. Brown, a slip candidate, by a majority of 292 votes. Tyler received a majority in every ward. The vote follows:

WORKERS SHOULD OBTAIN NUMBERS

EMPLOYERS AND EMPLOYEES ARE BOTH WARNED

Traverse City Social Security Office Managers Outlined Important Information

All employees, even those engaged in casual or temporary employment, should have social security account numbers. This advice was given today by Clifton H. Little, manager of the Traverse City social security board office.

Mr. Little said that it had been brought to his attention that a number of employers, particularly garages, hotels, and retail stores of all kinds, do not consider casual employees as being covered by the Social Security Act. Some employers huve informed us that many of their temporary employees do not hnve account numbers. Employers should require employees, who do not have account numbers to fill out Form SS-5, Application for Account Number, at the time of employment.

"Under the Social Security Act employers are required, at stated intervals to submit reports to the United States Collector of Internal Revenue," Mr. Little said.

These reports must show the names of persons from whose wages deductions have been made for social security. They must also show the amount of these wage deductions and the social security account number of each worker. If the employer does not know his employees social security account number he must submit an application for the person who is employed.

"In eases where the employee has left the service of an employer, this is often difficult," Mr. Little added.

Mr. Little's office serves the counties of Grand Traverse, Benzie, Leelanau, Manistee, Wexford, Osceola, Clare, Missaukee, Kalkaska, Crawford, Antrim, Otsego, Charlevoix, Cheboygan and Emmet. Persons residing in those counties should apply to the Traverse City office of the Social Security Board in the Weaver Building for their account numbers, Mr. Little said.

Taking the courts and schools "out of politics" are among the new issues before Michigan.

The State Bar of Michigan, representing the legal profession of the state, is sponsoring a constitutional amendment to authorize an appointive system for selection of members to the State Supreme court. Voters will be asked to amend the constitution at our coming November election.

The spectacle of a supreme court judge taking part in a political campaign hus heen repugnant to the bar. Justice would he served by adoption of an appointive system, say the advocutes.

Educators take the same attitude regarding the state superintendent of public instruction. In fact, the Michigan Eduention association is sponsoring a constitutional amendment for 1939 whereby the state board of education would appoint the superintendent for a four-year term. DEPARTMENT OF STATE NEWS BULLETIN

"Short Cuts" Banned by New Operators Law

The new motor vehicle operators and chauffeurs examination statute, and regulations framed on it, have brought about a change in procedure which will hereafter prevent "short cuts" to the department of State for the issuance of licenses.

Heretofore, motorists desiring to renew their licenses quickly, especially when preparing to drive out of the state on long absences, have brought their applications direct to Lansing, after approval by local police officials. This is no longer permitted; local police examining officers are not permitted to return approved applications to motorists. Applications must be forwarded through regular channels, to afford official control over every stage of the procedure.

Used Car Purchasers Must Change Titles

Officials of the license and title divisions of the Department of State are cautioning motorists that failure to transfer titles to used cars from previous owners, to themselves within ten days after purchase, makes car registrations legally void.

The motor vehicle statute on this point provides: "Unless such notice it given . . . such motor vehicle shall be deemed to be without registration and the Secretary of State is hereby authorized to repossess the (license) plates."

AT THE MOVIES

DeMille Fulfills Lifelong Ambition in "Buccaneer"

"It's as big as America itself!"

That's the way Cecil B. DeMille, the dean of director-producers, referred to his sweeping epic of America's struggle for survival during the dark days of the War of 1812, "The Buccaneer," which opens April 9 at the Palace Theatre.

A genuine epic production must contain certain features which, taken together, thoroughly distinguish it from any ordinary motion picture, in DeMille's opinion. It must be built around the triumph of some terrific idea or cause which has changed the course of history. This may be the first flowering of religion, which he so strikingly brought to life in "The Ten Commandments" or the onward march of Christianity during the Middle Ages, as seen in "The Crusades".

An epic is no more authentic than the characters in it. From the title role DeMille chose Fredric March when it was discovered what an amazing resemblance he bore to a portrait of Lafitte. Franciska Gaal, the glamorous importation from Budapest, plays opposite him as the beautiful Dutch girl. The colorful pirate, Dominique You, is played by Akim Tamiroff.

"Cassidy of Bar 20" Mixes Love, Danger

William Boyd is again Hopalong Cassidy, the Clarence E. Mulford hero he has made a ranking favorite. On his high adventures he is accompanied at every moment by his loyal saddlemate, "Lucky", played by the familiar and popular Russell Hayden. Others in the cast are Frank Darien, Robert Fiske and John Elliott.

For best reports on the Detroit Tigers, read H. G. Salsinger's column, "The Umpire". It appears daily on the Sport Pages of The Detroit News.

LET'S DRIVE SAFELY

(First of a weekly series of articles on rural and urban highway safety prepared through cooperation of the Michigan State Police and the Michigan State College course in Police Administration.)

Signal lights are substitute police officers. Obey them.

Traffic lights are installed only at hazardous intersections where volume of traffic makes their assistance to drivers essential to safety. Sometimes a source of irritation to Michigan's cross-state drivers, they are a symbol of safety to the local motorist.

All Michigan drivers know that green means "go" and red means "stop". But careless drivers frequently forget that a combination of yellow and green also means "stop". Michigan law requires all traffic to halt during the yellow light period while the intersection is cleared for cross traffic.

Conforming with United States standards, Michigan traffic lights have red at the top, yellow in the middle and green at the bottom. Uniform signals throughout the country eliminate confusion, and colorblind drivers can tell by position of the light whether to stop or go.

Blinker lights are used on some Michigan highways. The yellow blinker means proceed slowly and with caution, prepared for a quick stop. If the blinker is red, come to a full stop before crossing intersection.

For safety, and for the safety of fellow motorists, obey all signal lights. Failure to wait a few seconds at traffic signals resulted in death to too many Michigan motorists last year.

At the other side of La Gobernadora rode Pedro the Younger, his small face serious. Following the Governor's party came the entire population of the presidio, riding in order of their rank: the officers, their wives, children and servants; the soldiers, their women, children; the storekeeper, the blacksmith and other artisans.

It was Eulalia's first visit to the Mission San Carlos. She was curious about the place, eager to hear Padre Junipero; he who spoke words of flame with a tongue of gold. She had not seen the Padre Presidente since her arrival at Monterey, but had pondered deeply upon the strange man of God, and sought to discuss him with the Governor.

To him she had expressed herself with an admiration for the monk which, in its heartiness, was foreign to her usual expressions of regard for others. Silently in her own mind, she was building great hopes. Serra was strong, the strongest man in California except her husband, and sometimes she wondered if he were not stronger than the Governor himself.

But he was the man she needed. And her need was greater than the guilty fear of him which assailed her at times. Then there was Capitan Nicolas Soler. He was an ally of a different caliber. But with the two of them on her side—Serra, bringing his fanatic belief and strength in his holy convictions to bear on the Governor, and Soler, with his personal ambitions and desires to worry and harry Don Pedro—her own hopes of leaving the province she hated might be realized.

The Governor turned to her with a smile.

"Are you comfortable, my soul?" he asked tenderly. She nodded indifferently, and he spoke again.

"I am sorry for your sake that it is foggy for your first trip to the mission. For myself, I like the fog as well as the sun. It is all one to me, whether the air be hot and dry, or cold and damp, just so it is the air of California."

The bell sounded suddenly closer, and then Eulalia saw the white-washed walls of the mission. Through a great gate in a palisaded wall, the people from the presidio passed, by low buildings and conical Indian huts—jacala—to the door of the little church.

At the entrance a priest, in his ceremonial vestments, met them, swinging an aspersorium that sprinkled holy water on them, while two little Indian neophyte acolytes swung censers that smoked with burning copal.

"Are You Comfortable, My Soul?" He Asked Tenderly.

As they bowed their heads for the priest's blessing, Pio of the yellow umbrella, now in spotless white trousers and shirt, his head encircled in a red handkerchief, spoke to the Governor. Don Pedro excused himself and followed Pio, as La Gobernadora entered the church.

The Governor followed Pio into the sacristy. Standing upright in the center of the small apartment that was almost filled by a great chest of drawers sent from Spain to hold the priestly vestments, Fray Junipero was in his sacerdotal robes.

He spoke abruptly without any ceremonious preamble.

"I have been awaiting you, Don Pedro Fages. You have not been to see me. And I have not been in the presidio. The time that has passed since my return has been spent on my hands and knees, day and night, in close communion with Our Seraphic Father."

Serra's eyes gleamed large in his wrinkled face. The pupils seemed to spread over the entire iris, and they gleamed feverishly. Deep lines made furrows from nose to twitching gray lips. Fages noticed that his hands clasped and unclasped nervously, and that tremors shook his frame constantly.

"Father," said the Governor, "I will forgive the lack of ceremony with which you greet the representative of your King, for I see you are ill."

"Ill?" said Fray Junipero hoarsely. "Ill in body? Not I. But my soul suffers agonies untold. I have not called you here to speak of these things. I call you here to ask you about a faith broken, a promise unkept."

Fages started to speak, but Serra moved close to him.

"Do you remember your promises, before you went away? No? Where is the mission in Santa Barbara? Where are the Franciscans you promised me? Where the soldiers to guard the work? Where is that mission, Pedro Fages?"

"Father—"

"You will remind me that you brought two Franciscans with you. I need not tell you what they are. You know them. Why did you bring Rubi and Gil here? To insult me? To desecrate the Mission San Carlos, whose bricks are made from my flesh and moistened with my blood?"

He tottered and Fages put a hand toward him.

"Fray Junipero—"

"Touch me not! Your hands are unclean! You are betraying your trust! Betraying the Holy Church—"

Fages took a quick breath.

"Fray Junipero!" he cried sternly. "Those are serious charges against me! I did not choose the two priests who came from Mexico. They were sent by others."

"Then I am betrayed in Mexico!"

"No! No one is betraying you! But your own suspicions are—"

"Ah—ah—mea culpa—mea maximo culpa—" He tottered again. Again the Governor moved to support him, but Fray Junipero staggered in the great chest and leaned against it.

"Leave me, infidel, unbeliever! You who stand in the way of the Mission of Santa Barbara—dearest wish of my heart—to be the brightest pearl in the Virgin's crown.—Go! And if it were in my power to send you—like Lucifer out of Heaven—away from this land your presence curses, I would do it, God help me, I would do it!"

He choked, and bent his head in his hands. Tears trickled through the fingers that had woven and sewn raiment for Indians, and built adobe houses to shelter the heathen.

The Governor went quickly from the apartment. Then he walked slowly into the church, knelt a moment and sat beside his wife. She looked in alarm at his face.

"Pedro," she whispered, "what—"

He touched her hand. "Nothing," he said, "hush."

She could hear his heavy breathing. His fingers strayed to his beard. Then Fray Junipero entered the church, and they rose.

He celebrated the mass in a hoarse voice, then turned to climb the steps to the pulpit. Eulalia gasped when she saw his face, gray above the stiff richness of his brocaded robe. Twice he stumbled and nearly fell. Eulalia watched the veined hand on the rail of the balustrade with fascination.

A bell, suspended from the center of the wooden canopy over the pulpit, rang mysteriously. The Indians turned their eyes toward it, saw it ringing without aid of human hands, and fell to their knees in superstitious awe.

Then the priest began to speak. The huskiness left his voice, and it rang loud and clear in the still church. What he said, Eulalia did not know, but the words poured forth in ringing cadence.

Suddenly, feeling her husband beside her gripping the arms of the chair with both hands, she caught the import of Serra's words.

"There is one among you who is sent by the devil! Listen not to him! Satan is lashing his tail in this land! Oh, beware, gentiles, beware the tempter's voice! Listen to the words of God that come through the lips of your Father Junipero Serra, who is nothing—nothing itself—and who wishes to suffer, only to suffer for all your sins as Jesus Christ and His Holy Mother suffered. Pains unspeakable — pains unbearable—thus—"

He tore open the breast of his robe. Eulalia, through a mist of agonized emotions, saw the thin chest encrusted with half-healed sores and ancient scars.

The Indians moaned. A sigh ran through the congregation. Serra raised a cross, its lower end sharpened into a point, in one hand. In the other he balanced a stone.

Lifting both with a wide gesture he brought the cross against his lacerated chest, and pounded the cruel point again and again into his flesh with the heavy stone.

He staggered down the steps and mounted the altar. Seizing one of the branched candelabra he held it aloft a moment.

"Ye who fear!" he cried. "Ye who fear, behold the courage God gives those who are true to Him!" His eyes glared straight at the Governor.

That evening Don Pedro sat beside Eulalia, watching her anxiously. When at last, to his delight, she smiled wanly and dismissed the alarmed Angustias, he knelt to kiss her listless hand.

"How you frightened me, alma mia, my soul," he murmured tenderly. "Do you feel better now stronger?"

"I suppose I am better, though I feel dreadfully weak, oh, dreadfully, Pedro," she replied listlessly. Really she was deliciously relaxed and comfortable. "So you were frightened when I swooned, really frightened?" she asked after a moment.

"Of course!" he said, kissing her hands again.

"Pedro," she said thoughtfully, "why was Padre Junipero so angry, so bitter, this morning? Are his sermons always so . . . so fiery?"

He told her of the scene in the sacristy.

"So you see," he concluded, "he believed he had reason to denounce me. But, by Heaven," he said bitterly, rising to his feet and beginning to pace the floor, "I am not to blame for his defeat. If he were in his right mind he could not believe I maliciously and deliberately chose those two rascally Franciscans to found the Mission Santa Barbara. But he does believe it, and there will be endless trouble for me from this affair." He tugged at his beard. "I must establish the peace with Fray Junipero in some way. Officially, of course, I can overlook everything. But personally, something must be done between us. And God knows what it can be, or how it can be done."

Eulalia's eyes were closed, but her mind was working busily. The Governor paced the floor back and forth, back and forth.

"Pedro mio," said the lady softly, opening her eyes at last, "I think that here is something I can do. Why not let me try to be the peacemaker between you?"

The Governor stopped his pacing. "That would never do," he said after a thoughtful silence. "The Padre Presidente would never come here, unless I ordered him to. And of course I would not do that."

"Your Excellency," said the Governor's wife with a trace of raillery, "sometimes you are very stupid. Of course you couldn't order him here. But a poor helpless lady, who has been blessed by the Holy Virgin, and is unable to make the long pilgrimage to Carmelo, might send for a spiritual adviser, a father confessor . . . might she not?" she questioned softly.

"She might. And then . . .?"

"If your Excellency will leave that to me," answered the lady with a demure smile.

The Governor laughed aloud. "I will then!" he cried, and knelt to kiss her hand.

CHAPTER XIV

"My Lady, he is coming, Padre Serra is coming!" exclaimed Angustias from her lookout at one of the barred windows. "He is walking across the parade-grounds toward the palacio."

"Ah!" said Eulalia with an excited flutter. "Quick, Angustias, hand me my sewing. You, Indizuela, pull up a chair here to the fire for the holy father, and be quick about it. Angustias, is there chocolate made? Escabellito! Where are you, you imp? Here, get where you belong."

When Junipero Serra, who had trudged across the hills from the Mission Carmelo, limping on his ulcered leg with Pio beside him, reached the door of the palacio, he paused. Angustias, with a deep bow and murmured greeting, ushered him within.

"A blessing on this house," he muttered, making the sign of the cross.

He blinked. The room was bright with candlelight, for though it was only late afternoon, a heavy fog darkened the day, and made it cool, so that the open fire was comforting and cheery.

"Ah, your Reverence!" La Gobernadora's voice was respectfully cordial. "Please do excuse me for not rising. Sit you here by the fire, Father, where you may rest, and warm yourself after your long

STATE 4-H CLUB PROGRAM SETS NEW HIGH

Enrollment During 1937 Set at 39,853 in 83 Counties

Summaries of 4-H achievements in Michigan for 1937 indicate that the boys and girls in club work set new records in which a total of 39,853 participated.

All of the state's 83 counties are involved in the club work. There were 46,439 projects in the 24th year of 4-H in Michigan. Of these there was an 84.07 per cent completion, a slight drop from 1936 when 84.6 per cent completed what they started out to do.

A. G. Kettunen, state club leader, issues the report from club headquarters at Michigan State College. Those serving the boys and girls in the state include 71 county agricultural agents, 20 home economics extension agents, eight full time county club agents, 12 district club agents and a state club staff of 11.

In the 24 years of the work the total enrollment to date is nearly up to the half million mark. In recent years the enrollment of boys has been approaching that each year for the girls. In 1937 there were boys in 20,768 projects and girls in 25,561.

Most popular with the boys is the course in handicraft, offering five years of useful training, second is dairy calf club work. Girls prefer the five year clothing courses, with canning second.

Four new projects begun in 1937 are to be continued and expanded in projects for this year. These include forest fire study, pheasant raising, farm mapping and soil conservation and farm use of electricity.

Kettunen pays high tribute to the 5,512 volunteer local club leaders, men and women who worked with the 4,908 organized club groups in 1937.

FARM PROGRAM ACREAGE ALLOTMENTS GOING OUT TO FARMERS

To qualify for full payment under the new farm program, a farmer need make no reductions from these allotments but must meet the following requirements on his farm:

2. Plant only his farm potato acreage allotment on commercial potato farms. Payment will be made only on the actual acreage of potatoes planted in 1938.

3. Plant not more than three acres of potatoes on noncommercial potato farms.

4. Carry out soil building practices to meet his farm soil building goal.

Deductions will be made from the maximum farm payment if these provisions are not met on the farm.

The total allotments for all farms in the United States are set so that production under normal conditions will result in ample supplies of farm commodities rather than surpluses which are wasteful of soil and farm income, and so that there will be a well managed reserve supply against short years.

It is intended that both farmers and consumers will be safeguarded against disastrous and prohibitive price fluctuations by this system and the soil of the nation will be preserved.

CHAPTER XIV

walk. It is so good, so very, very good of you to make this visitation upon me, in answer to my plea to you!"

Serra sat down absently, and stretched his hands a moment toward the fire. Then they fell into his lap, and his fingers twined about the beads of the rosary suspended from his rope girdle.

Eulalia waited nervously for him to speak. She stirred impatiently. Beneath her feet Escabellito sneezed. The sound exploded the silence. Junipero Serra leaned forward, and looked at the child.

"What is this!" he exclaimed. "What do I see? Senora, are you resting your feet on a little Indian child?"

"Why, yes." Eulalia flushed.

The missionary's eyes blazed suddenly.

"But he is a human being, Senora! A soul! Not an insensate object, nor a dog."

"My husband, the Governor," she raised her eyes to the priest, "brought him to me in Lower California, and gave him to me for a foot-stool. We call him Escabellito. He is really my little slave. You may run along, Escabellito."

The child rose and darted from the room.

"A slave!" exclaimed the priest. "Dear God, how pitiful. My poor dark children, slaves! But it is what I would expect of the Governor of the Californias, in his arrogance."

Eulalia's hands trembled a little at her stitching.

"It is not my wish to have him a slave, Padre. It is my husband's. He . . . he seems to think it befitting my position as his wife, to have an Indian for a slave. I have always been guiltily uncomfortable with him at my feet. But my husband . . ." She sighed virtuously, and shook her head.

"Praise God, then, your heart is tender toward the Indians! That cheers me, Senora. I am most encouraged to know your feelings. I had not dared hope for such aid from . . ."

Junipero Serra looked at her searchingly.

"You may speak openly, frankly, with me, Padre, I feel that I know what your problems are, and deeply sympathize with you. I would like to help you solve them, if I can."

The old man leaned eagerly forward, his eyes brightening.

"I believe you could do much, Senora la Gobernadora. Perhaps," he exclaimed as a thought seized upon him, "perhaps it is you who have been sent as an answer to all my prayers, instead of those two . . . I can not call them Franciscans . . . but you know to whom I refer."

La Gobernadora laughed nervously, and dropped her sewing. "Padre mio, that is too much, to call me an answer to prayer. I . . . I really can not . . ."

"But you are, dear daughter! I prayed for help to found the Mission Santa Barbara, and you will be my help. Yes, I am sure of it!"

His eyes were gleaming. Eulalia rubbed her hands restlessly before the fire.

"Father," she began, then hesitated. "Father, what stands in the way of founding that mission?"

"Nothing! The time has been long ripe for it. Nothing stands in the way. But there is one man that does."

He stopped abruptly, and looked sternly at La Gobernadora. Beneath his glance, she stirred and gathering up her needlework crumpled it in her nervous fingers.

"I need not ask you who that is. I feel . . . that it is my husband. Am I right, Father?"

"So you know it then? Yes, it is he, Senora. The Governor himself, that proud rash man, who arrogantly believes his vain temporal power can stop the progress of Mother Church. And that, he must learn to his sorrow, he can not do!"

Eulalia shivered.

"Yes, he must learn that. But how am I to help him, and you, and the Church?" she asked.

"Daughter," said the priest earnestly, "you are as close to Don Pedro as his very heart. You know how to reach him. And as a pious God fearing woman, a true daughter of the Church, your prayers will surely be heard. He must be made to see that plans must go forward swiftly for Santa Barbara. You must make him see that. I, it seems, can not reach him, through any channel, though he has my prayers."

"And if I can not reach him, Padre. What then?"

"Then there must be someone else!"

Eulalia took a deep breath.

"You mean someone else . . . in his place?"

"There is no other way. The Governor of California must be a man willing to aid and succor the Church at every step. And Don Pedro Fages unless you can influence him, Senora, is not that man."

La Gobernadora was trembling. When she tried to speak, her voice was lost. With an effort she controlled herself.

"Then, that would mean . . . leaving California?" she asked in almost a whisper.

"That would mean his leaving California. Ah, Senora, if it comes to that, would you be willing, after all the long wearisome journey you have made to this place, to leave it? For the sake of our Holy Mother Church?"

Eulalia lifted her head with a deep breath. She faced the missionary's questioning eyes, that gleamed into hers, bright with fires of new hope. Then she averted her head, and looked into the fire, answering, "I would, for the sake of Holy Mother Church."

Serra lifted his hand toward her in a gesture of blessing.

"The Holy Mother bless you for that!" he exclaimed in a happy voice. "God will reward you for your unselfishness!"

Eulalia dared not raise her eyes. That guilty feeling, which had assailed her at her first meeting with the holy man made it impossible for her to look at him, even to speak.

The priest rose slowly.

"Now I must depart, Senora la Gobernadora. It has been a happy visit with you, my good daughter. My heart is lighter for it. God has answered my prayers in sending you here to intercede with the Governor for me . . . how I am counting on your help, Senora. Something will be done now, I know. I have sent messages to the Viceroy begging for more help for the Mission Santa Barbara. He may grant it . . . he may deny it. But if he denies it, it will need the influence of the Governor to bring things about. And there is where you will help."

Junipero Serra sighed. "I still have some temporal, some worldly influence, Senora. And if I must, I will use it, to justify my just and holy plans."

"Of . . . of course."

Fatigue, cough that hangs on, inexplicable loss of weight, chronic indigestion, blood-spitting, chest pains—any one or a combination of these symptoms may mean tuberculosis. It is a good idea, says the Michigan Tuberculosis Association, to visit the family physician when they appear, and be modernly examined with a tuberculin test and an x-ray.

WILDLIFE PLANNING COMMISSION PROPOSED

To Draft Comprehensive Wildlife Conservation Program

The first outcome of Wildlife Restoration Week is a proposal for a comprehensive wildlife conservation program for the state of Michigan. The proposal recommends the appointment of a wildlife planning commission to outline Michigan's wildlife problems, suggest the order in which these should receive attention and the sum that should be made available to carry out adequately the research to find a solution to each problem and then the sum necessary to apply the solution in the field. This suggestion is made by Professor Paul A. Herbert, of the forestry department of Michigan State College and a former member of the State Planning Commission.

"It is a fitting time during Wildlife Restoration Week," states Professor Herbert, "to suggest that a committee of experts, citizens and public officials be appointed by the State Director of Conservation to compile a complete outline of the wildlife problems as they affect each species and each section of the state. This outline would include (1) the past abundance of each species in each locality, (2) its present depleted supply, (3) the known causes of depletion and their relative importances, and (4) known means of replenishing the species in each locality, and (5) the feasibility and cost of increasing the supply of a species in each locality by the several known methods.

"With this information in hand it will at once be apparent just what the most acute situation is in the state as a whole and in each locality. It will also show clearly where we are in most urgent need of further wildlife research. The commission can then weigh the nature and acuteness of the different problems and establish priority ratings suggesting the order in which these wildlife conservation problems should be studied and the approximate cost of financing each part of the program.

"Wildlife conservation has made much progress in Michigan in recent years but some problems because of vociferous minorities have absorbed too much time and money of our experts when compared with others and acute diminution of some species has continued unabated because of powerful pressure groups."

NEW FANGLED FISH BAITS ARE ILLEGAL

Michigan Bars Illuminated Lures from State's Waters

Lighted baits for night fishing may be the sensation their manufacturers claim in their advertising but they are definitely illegal in Michigan.

Commenting on the appearance of a new type of bait made of transparent material and equipped inside with small flash-light batteries to illuminate them, H. R. Sayre, head of the field administration division of the department of conservation, said:

"This type of bait is unquestionably illegal under the laws of Michigan, Act 165, of the compiled fishing laws of 1929, explicitly prohibits the 'use of jack or artificial light of any kind' in fishing. This type of bait clearly violates that act and any fisherman found using it will be prosecuted."

Another type of bait which has appeared recently and which is outlawed in Michigan as well as in the unwritten rules of sportsmanship, is an ingenious device which has a pair of hooks attached to a spring. The thing operates much as a pair of quick-snapping pinchers. The two pincher hooks are located on either side of the bait. The slightest touch on the bait hook springs the two, larger pinch hooks in such a manner as to catch the fish from both sides.

32 OUTSTANDING STUDENTS TO GET M.S.C. SCHOLARSHIPS

Thirty-two Michigan State College alumni scholarships, worth $90 each, will be awarded to freshman students next fall, it was announced here today by Glen O. Stewart, alumni secretary.

One outstanding student in each senatorial district will receive the scholarship, which is equivalent to college fees for the three terms of the freshman year.

Scholarship chairmen in each of the state's 32 districts also were announced today. Chairman for District 29, including Charlevoix, Emmet, Cheboygan, Alpena, Presque Isle, Otsego and Montmorency counties, is Arthur W. Glidden, courthouse, Gaylord, Mich.

Alumni scholarship chairman, Mr. Stewart said, will provide proper application blanks to high school seniors who apply for them.

Scholarships will be available only to students graduated from accredited Michigan high schools, who will enter M.S.C. in September, 1938. Candidates will be nominated by M.S.C. alumni clubs or committees in each of the 32 districts, in cooperation with high school principals.

Candidates must be from the upper one-third of their high school classes, and nominations will be confined to students whose financial circumstances definitely warrant scholarship aid, the announcement said.

Candidates are expected to have their qualifications completed and filed with a member of the committee before May 1.

Final award will be made by an M.S.C. faculty committee on scholarships after results of an examination, transcript of the high school record and other information have been considered.

Announcement of scholarship winners will be made by the faculty committee as soon as possible after examinations are completed.

How Would You Like To Be Told---

"Your Child Was Killed Today"

A thing so horrible . . . so unthinkable . . . can't happen to you! Thus you reason and perish the thought from your mind. But mothers and fathers are told nearly every day, "Your child was killed today" . . . and practically every time, the finger of blame can be pointed at a careless motorist. If it can happen to the other person . . . IT CAN HAPPEN TO YOU! But . . . it won't happen to you or anyone else if you and every one else obey traffic laws and regulations. Merely expressing your intentions of driving carefully is not enough. You've got to learn the laws if you don't know them. You've got to think . . . you've got to keep your mind alert . . . you've got to keep your ears and eyes open to avoid disaster. Above all . . . you've got to DRIVE CAREFULLY!

TROUT ANGLERS FORCED INTO TRUCE THIS YEAR

Season Opening Last Day of Month Stops May 1st Agitators

A feud which has been going on among trout anglers may be forced into a truce this year because of the calendar.

Although the opening of the trout season has been fixed as "the last Saturday in April," a considerable number of anglers hold fast to the argument that May 1 is the proper opening date.

This year "the last Saturday in April, is also the last day in the month, which reduces the schism in the opposing fishing camps to a matter of hours.

A depression by any other name smells just as sour.

Facts Regarding Unemployment Compensation Answered for Benefit of Workers

Editor's note: In cooperation with the Michigan Unemployment Compensation Commission, the Charlevoix Courier today presents the first in a series of questions and answers on job insurance.

Today's installment will deal with some of the questions now being asked by the 1,400,000 workers covered by the law. Workers of Charlevoix are invited to submit questions either to this newspaper or to the Information Service of the Michigan Unemployment Compensation Commission, 814 Fox Bldg., Detroit.

1 What is unemployment compensation?

A Unemployment compensation is a form of compulsory insurance which provides the payment of cash benefits to eligible, unemployed workers over a stipulated period of time.

2. Is the payment of benefits the only way unemployed workers are helped by the Michigan Unemployment Compensation law?

A No, the law endeavors to stabilize employment and to provide new employment for the unemployed through the agency of the Michigan State Employment Service, a Commission division.

3 What does the worker gain by the establishment of this law?

A The payment of benefits enhances the worker's sense of security and thus promotes morale. His receipt of these benefits tpermits him to maintain his purchasing power at a certain level, thus reducing the cost of relief and the cost of taxes. The maintenance of purchasing power stimulates business and puts a brake on depressions.

4 Are all workers in Michigan covered by the law?

A No. Only workers in certain occupations employed by an organization or employer having eight or more workers employed during 20 different weeks of the year.

5 What are the occupations excluded from coverage by the law?

A Agricultural work. Domestic service in private homes. Service as an officer or member of the crew on a vessel on the navigable waters of the U. S. Service performed in the employ of a son, daughter or spouse. Service performed by a child under 21 in the employ of a father or mother. Service performed for federal, state, county, or municipal governments. Service performed for non-profit organizations formed and operated for charitable purposes.

6 Who pays for unemployment compensation.

A Only the employer pays. The employer pays a contribution of three per cent on the wages paid to all of his employees during the year.

7 When will the first claims for benefits be accepted by the Commission?

A On and after July 1st, 1938. First payments will not be made until approximately one month later.

8 How much compensation will a totally unemployed worker be entitled to receive if he is unemployed after that date?

A The rate of compensation amounts to approximately one half of the worker's past average weekly wage, but will not exceed a maximum of $16 a week, for a maximum of 16 weeks in any one year.

9 How much must the worker have earned to be eligible for benefits?

A The worker must have earned at least $50 in each of three quarters since July 1st, 1937.

10 How is the weekly benefit computed?

A The weekly benefit rate is four per cent of the worker's earnings in the calendar quarter since July 1st, 1937 during which he earned the highest amount. Example: A worker earns $250 in the first quarter; $300 in the second quarter and $400 in the third quarter. His benefit rate will he four per cent of the $400, or the maximum of $16.

Editor's note: The next installment in this series will answer some of the questions being asked by employers.

VACATION DIRECTORY READY TO DISTRIBUTE

Fifty Thousand Copies West Michigan Booklet Off Press

Fifty thousand copies of the West Michigan Vacation Directory have rolled off the presses and are ready for distribution to the thousands of recreation seekers of the nation, the first of the four regional booklets to be ready for Michigan's potential summer visitors. The directory follows the high standard of excellence set in previous years and contains even more information than ever before.

The four color cover of vacation activities in Michigan is familiar to many vacationers and on the back cover Michigan's autumn attraction, the Flaming Forests, are pictured in color. New communities have actively entered the resort picture by advertising and publicizing their recreational advantages through the medium of the Vacation Directory.

Most of the informational features of last year's booklet have been repeated and amplified this year. The detailed county maps and fish plant charts, which proved to be of so much value to vacationers last year, have been brought to date and repeated in this year's book.

Information on tourist camps and state parks has been augmented and the latest listing of canoe camps and trout fishing camps along some of Michigan's famous trout streams have been included in the booklet. Information on the recreational attractions of the vast Manistee National Forest also have been included in the booklet.

A directory of the entertainment features of West Michigan around the calendar will be of interest and value to vacationers in planning their holiday. Hunting and fishing regulations also are contained in the booklet.

NEW CITY COUNCIL IN FIRST MEETING

FIRST SESSION OF NEW ADMINISTRATION MONDAY

Council Hits Snag Over Legality of Bond Issuance for Electric Light System Extension

Clarence F. Wood returned to familiar duties as alderman from the first ward and Charles Heise, new second ward alderman, took his seat. Hold-over council members are J. J. Hallett, re-elected, Harry F. Hooker, Karl Erber and Fred E. Cartier. Arthur L. Fitch, newly appointed city attorney, took over his duties also.

The council struck its first snag upon consideration of opening bids for the purchase of a proposed $98,000.00 issue of Electric Light System self-liquidating revenue bonds authorized at a special election for an electric light plant addition. While Monday was the bid deadline and two bids were on hand, the council voted to postpone consideration until an adjourned meeting Thursday evening due to uncertainty over legality of the bonds in the absence of a franchise approval which the State Supreme Court has held is a legal requirement. Unless prospective purchases will waive the franchise requirement, it is quite possible that the matter of granting a franchise will be placed before electors at a near future special election. In the meantime, the mayor and city attorney will act upon authority given them to seek an opinion from the attorney general regarding validity of issuing the bonds.

Applications of Goldie I. Pant and Min-Eva Cafe for tavern beer licenses were approved. The bond of Fred V. Tyler was approved and the Charlevoix County State Bank and the Charlevoix State Savings Bank were named official city depositories.

A communication from the Charlevoix Marine Club, offering suggestions for changes in Ordinanec No. 70 controlling harbors and docks, was Nellie King was born in Charlevoix county, December 4, 1867. She was married in September, 1889, to C. B. Sheldon, who preceded her in death last June. The couple had lived here their entire lives.

Surviving Mrs. Sheldon are her sister, Mrs. Etta Burns, and three brothers, Bert and Hugh King of Charlevoix, and George Trimble of Cheboygan.

Arthur L. Fitch Named City Attorney; D. F. Meech Assessor

Along with the customary routine of canvassing the vote of the April general election, the city council cleaned up standing business and affirmed by unanimous vote two appointments by the retiring mayor.

A precedent was established by the retiring administration in the appointment of a city attorney to serve the new administration. Arthur L. Fitch was named to succeed Rollie L. Lewis, who was a hold-over through the Bergeon administration after serving under ex-mayors L. S. See and L. P. Adams.

Darwin F. Meech was appointed city assessor to succeed Oakley J. Hammond.

SPRING ATHLETIC PROGRAM PLANNED

CLASS C BASEBALL AND TRACK SCHEDULES ARRANGED

Annual Meeting of "Little Eight" Conference Officials Held Saturday at Boyne City

At a meeting held Saturday, April 9, at Boyne City, officials of the northern Michigan "Little Eight" class C conference elected officers for the ensuing year and arranged baseball and track schedules for spring.

James Quinn of Rogers City, was named conference president to succeed Stewart Coleman of this city. Other officers elected were: vice-president, William Camburn, Boyne City; secretary-treasurer, Mr. Bates, Harbor Springs.

Following the Boyne City meeting, Coach Ray Kipke announced a 6-game baseball schedule with four contests signed and two open dates. Games scheduled are: April 22, Boyne City here; April 27, East Jordan here; May 4, open; May 11, Boyne City there; May 18, East Jordan there; May 24, open. Games with Petoskey will be arranged for the open dates if possible.

Boyne City is the defending champion in baseball. Boyne, Charlevoix and East Jordan were tied at the close of the regular schedule last year and Boyne defeated both schools in the playoff series.

Six track events are scheduled for the spring season. Harbor Springs comes here for the first meet and Mancelona for the second. The dates of these events have not been definitely set. An invitational event is scheduled at East Jordan on May 6. The annual Class C conference meet was returned to Charlevoix for the second year and is scheduled for May 14. The regional is at Cadillac on May 21, and the state will be held at East Lansing on May 28th.

The annual conference meet is the outstanding track event for class C schools. All conference members will be represented. Mancelona was the 1937 winner.

Charlevoix's prospects for both baseball and track appear bright. With the exception of Radle, 1936 state class C champion in the mile, and Leslie Shapton, quarter-miler, most of last year's strong track team are available.

The same situation applies to baseball for which a group of veterans are available. Practice for both sports is under way, although, due to cold weather, little outdoor activity has been possible.

PLAN PROGRAMS FOR MICHIGAN'S GUESTS

Everything from Blossom to Fish Festivals Are on List

West Michigan's summer entertainment program will get underway the last of April with everything from blossoms and fishing festivals to religious observances and sailing races.

First on the list is the Kalkaska Trout Festival on April 29 to 30, to celebrate the opening of the trout season. Cadillac will celebrate a fishing festival on the same two days honoring not only the trout but its lake fishing. The city is built on two excellent fishing lakes.

A new festival has come up on the horizon with Michigan's many festivals this year with Glenn, a hamlet on US-31, celebrating a Pancake Festival on May 27, 28 and 29. The festival grew out of the big blizzard of last winter when scores of motorists and truckers were marooned there and after exhausting the groceries in the village lived on pancakes for several days.

Blossom Time, Tulip Time and the Blessing of the Blossoms head the list of events celebrating Michigan's fruits and flowers.

April 29 and 30—Trout Festival at Kalkaska.
April 20 and 30—Fishing Festival at Cadillac.
May 7 to 15—Blossom Festival at St. Joseph and Benton Harbor.
May 15-23—Tulip Time in Holland.
May 27, 28 and 29—Pancake Festival at Glenn.
May 30—Blessing of the Blossoms on Old Mission Peninsula at Traverse City.
May 30 — Memorial Day Regatta, WMYC Class C Boats at Reeds Lake, Grand Rapids.
May 30—Second Pilgrimate of Marquette University Alumni to the Father Marquette death site and a field mass at Buttersville in a grove above Pere Marquette Lake and Lake Michigan near Ludington.
May 30—Yacht races on Kalamazoo Lake at Saugatuck.

By GENE ALLEMAN

Field Manager, Michigan Press Association

The valleys are industrial centers where factory machines today are idle and thousands of workers are either on WPA or relief. At Grand Rapids, for example, leading plants are operating only at 20 per cent capacity as compared with capacity production 12 months ago. And this figure goes for metal trades as well as for furniture, for furniture represents only 30 per cent of the west Michigan metropolis' industrial life.

Farms and small cities and towns constitute the plateau. While conditions are far from being rosy, Main Street is well off. Farm income has been relatively stable; Michigan enjoyed the largest percentage increase in 1937 farm income of any state in the Middle West. Ask your country cousins!

NORTH COUNTY NEWS

It is estimated that 200 people heard "Sky-Pilot" Robie at Bellaire M. E. church Sunday night.

Mrs. Dennis of Eastport is very low at present writing. She is stopping with her son-in-law, Jack Smith.

Rev. A. A. Wall is feeling better again after several weeks' illness. Several members of the Methodist church, the Congregational pastor, and neighbors, have called to see him.

Jack Muckle's condition Saturday was very serious, and not much hope was held out for his recovery. It is said that he had his fourth stroke of paralysis. He is about 76 years of age.

Miss Hildred Stafford of Central Lake conducted church exercises at Eastport Baptist church Sunday afternoon. Rev. Watts of Baltimore, Maryland, who is preparing for the India Missionary work, also gave a talk.

Maurice Dawson and family, who have been living on the Abe Arnold tenant farm and working for Raymond Lamereaux, moved last week onto the H. R. Morse farm at Bay View, which they will work this summer.

The Nuckle family north of Eastport, entertained his son-in-law and wife, and daughter and husband from East Jordan at their home last Sunday. Mr. Nuckle lives on the former John Triplett farm north of Eastport.

Rev. John Snider and wife and family's many friends here are rejoicing to hear of his safe return to his home in Nebraska, from war torn China, and hope he will soon be with us again as pastor, and help in the Sunday school work.

Rev. G. A. Weaver and other ministers from Petoskey expect to attend the Ministerial Association at Bellaire this week Monday. Mr. Weaver and family will visit during school vacation this week and next with relatives at Dayton, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Patton of west of Central Lake are entertaining a nine and a half pound baby girl, Juanita Joan, which arrived Friday morning last. The young lady was named by her daughter, Vera, about ten years old. They reside on the Zike DeForest place. Miss Sylvia DeForest helped with the work.

Rev. Robie gave a fine message to people at the Methodist church at Bellaire last Sunday evening, and Pentacostal, United Brethren, Holiness, Menonites, Congregationalists, and Methodists were in the crowd when Rev. Robie asked them to stand up and be identified. The revivalist played several selections on the trombone, and piano accordian. Services will continue all week, and probably longer.

Attendance at Bay View Sunday school Sunday was 33; at Creswell, 22; Eastport, 62; a week ago, 79; two weeks ago, 78. Splendid co-operation by Methodist, Pentacostal, Congregationalists, as well as Baptists have helped in swelling the attendance at Baptist services, and attendance by Baptists, Free Methodists, and others at the Pentacostal services at Central Lake, and Holiness and Methodist revivals at Bellaire and Central Lake will show the character of real Christian Brotherhood.

Many people of Central Lake and community were shocked last week to hear of the sudden death of Andy Warner, an old-time resident of this vicinity, living about a mile north of town. He had been down town not many days before, feeling, apparently, as well as usual. He was married some years ago to Mrs. Croil and had since lived on a little farm north of town. He had not been very well for several years but had been able to walk down town and do light work around the farm. At present we have not heard of funeral arrangements. Many sympathize with Mrs. Warner, in her loss. She had been very faithful in caring for her husband during his illness.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS
By B. C. Mellencamp

July Pastures Limit Livestock

Amounts of pasture available in July and August is the limiting factor in proper handling and development of livestock on many Michigan farms. The hot, dry months usually cut available low cost feed.

For sheep, especially, farmers in Michigan are advised by G. A. Brown, head of the animal husbandry department at Michigan State College, to plan now for summer pasture.

Profits from the lamb crop can be made or lost in midsummer. In Charlevoix county, it is pointed out by B. C. Mellencamp, county agricultural agent, the dried up June grass sod fails to provide food. Lambs lose their baby flesh and finish.

An alfalfa or clover meadow is the natural solution. But where there is none, or not sufficient for the entire flock, then some supplementary pasture can be planned for an abundance of green food.

Rape is suggested as probably the best single crop to sow for this purpose. It can be sown by drilling rows 28 inches apart at the rate of two to three pounds to an acre, sown any time after May 1. Sudan grass is another crop, sown about June 1, to make considerable summer pasture. Sheep sometimes find it difficult to stay even with sudan grass growth so that the feed doesn't become too coarse.

Flockmasters in the state are patting themselves on the back. Recently Professor J. W. Wilson of the University of California picked and paid for Michigan Black Top Delaine sheep after first visiting flocks of this breed in other states. Three ewes were bought from W. C. Hendee, Pinckney; two rams and two ewes from George Haist, Chelsea; and one ram and 15 ewes from L. B. Gage, Chelsea.

County 4-H Club Members Win State Recognition

Announcement of Michigan's 4-H club members state honor roll and scholarship winners for the year 1937 reveals the fact that local club members have carried on an exceptionally fine program. Probably one of the most prized awards is that of receiving a scholarship to the Michigan State College. Three scholarships were won out of eighty-three offered in the state.

Irene Brintnall, East Jordan, received a canning scholarship. She has completed many years of club service climaxed by winning a trip to the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago last fall. Einer Olstrum, East Jordan, received a potato scholarship. Einer made a wonderful reputation, winning blue ribbons on his potatoes at the Northern Michigan Show, State Seed Show, and National Show last fall. Melvin Somerville, Boyne City, was awarded a forest fire scholarship. He made one of the outstanding maps in the state in last year's program. At Detroit he won second place in the wood identification contest. All of the above mentioned club members received a trip to the National Boys and Girls Club Congress last November, as recognition for their accomplishments. Likewise all three have lead local clubs during the last two or three years.

Appearing on the state honor roll are Gladys Larsen, East Jordan, in clothing club activity, James Eaton, Charlevoix, in handicraft work, Bob Straw, Charlevoix, also in the handicraft work. In addition to having received a state scholarship, Einer Olstrum appears on the farm mapping honor roll. Thus it is seen that six outstanding club members received state wide recognition. Let's hope that this year just as fine a program will be carried on in the county.

It is generally conceded that America leads the world in the quality and extent of telephone service.

Important factors in this supremacy are the efforts of the Bell Telephone Laboratories "to find a better thing or a better way," and the experience and skill of the Western Electric Company, the manufacturing department of the Bell System.

Because of our association in the Bell System, every improvement so produced is made available promptly for us in Michigan . . . a continuing assurance of high-quality telephone service at reasonable cost. That is why Michigan's telephone service is as fine as any telephone service in the world.

And that is why your telephone . . . although it can connect you with any of 35,000,000 other telephones all over the civilized globe . . . retains such simplicity that even a child finds it easy to use.

"But I will only use that, and very much against my will, if every other channel, and your gentle influence, fails. Ah, but I would hate to! I do not know if you can understand how I feel toward Don Pedro; how, although we differ on every point in life, I admire, respect, yes, love him, as a friend . . . even a brother." His voice trembled, and his eyes misted. "That is why all this hurts me so deeply, so mortally, for I love the man. Ah, well, you do not understand. Tell his Excellency for me, that he has my sincere, earnest prayers, and to listen to his wife's gentle counsel. Will you, Senora?"

The lady nodded dumbly.

"Adios, Senora la Gobernadora." Again he blessed the house and, followed by Pio, was soon swallowed up in the fog.

When he had gone, Eulalia pulled closer to the fire. She cast her sewing impatiently on the floor.

The child scurried to his place beneath her feet.

It was thus the Governor found her when he came into the palacio, his beard and eyebrows beaded with fog.

"Junipero Serra has been here," she said slowly.

"He has? What did he say?" questioned the Governor eagerly.

"He . . . he . . ." she hesitated. "He is impossible. Nothing can be done, I am afraid. It is hopeless for you, or for me, to try to move him."

"I was afraid of that. He left no word, no message?"

"None."

The Governor sighed.

CHAPTER XV

In the cell that was their quarters at Carmelo, Fray Marinno Rubi and Fray Bartulome Gili were indulging themselves in a little recreation. It was only a tiny adobe cubicle, but the two friars were able, through their peculiar talents, to amuse themselves wherever they chanced to be. No spot was too small or too grand, too low or too lofty.

Fray Mariano sprawled on the boards of his celibate cot. Fray Bartolome was poring over a stained half-finished letter that lay before him on the wine-stained table.

"Yes," he said thickly, "it is well I got this away from Fray Junipero in time, or it might have been finished and dispatched to Mexico. Then where would we have been? Eh, answer me, can't you, you . . ."

Fray Mariano scratched himself. "I don't know where we would have been. In limbo, probably. How did you get this letter from his Sanctimonious Reverence?"

"Ha! What a glorious strategist I am, Brother!" the other replied. "Listen well. It was this way. Fray Junipero had called me to his room. I went. He was reading all the dispatches that arrived this morning on the San Antonio. He had his spectacles on his nose, and his face was very intent, so that he did not see me at first. I made a little noise. A-hemmed, you know, very softly and respectfully."

The other sniggered. "Yes, I can imagine how."

"Then he looked up, and told me to wait a moment, that he had been writing a report about you and me to the Father Guardian in Mexico, and wished to speak to me about it. I was worried, and hard put to wait patiently. So I stepped outside the cell, and met an Indian. You know him, Estevanico."

Fray Mariano stretched himself on his cot.

"Indeed I do. He is the sweet neophyte from whom I won this nice blanket at gambling. Go on."

"The very one. So I whispered to him, and plotted a little plot. He was to steal the father's spectacles. Steal them, you understand, so that Fray Junipero could see to write no more letters! Wasn't that a beautiful plot?"

The other grunted a grudging admiration. "But what is he to get for doing that?" he asked suspiciously.

"Oh, I am to give his blanket back to him, the one you won. But then . . ."

"You are! Just try . . ."

"Ah, be quiet. I said I would. That is all. So in a moment he slipped into the cell and watched the father writing. Now of course you understand the father treats all those louse-ridden Indians like favorite sons, so when he saw this one standing there, he took off his spectacles and asked him what he wished."

"The Indian expressed a great curiosity about the spectacles. 'What are they?' he asked, 'and do you see God through them?' And then well . . ."

"Well, the father said yes, I suppose. Continue."

"Yes, he said he saw God everywhere, with the glasses or without." He stopped a moment thoughtfully. "What if he does see God?" he asked abruptly with a little shiver.

"Don't be a superstitious baby," the other snarled. "Get on with your story."

"Then the Indian said, 'I want to see God!' Oh, it was wonderful, Brother, so cute, so sly, just like a spoiled child! So he snatched up the spectacles and put them over his nose. He began to leap and dance." The friar began illustrating his story. "Up and down, thus, with the spectacles hanging from his greasy ears, flinging his hands about and shouting, 'I see God! I see God!' He circled around and around until he reached the door, then he scrambled out, still shouting, and was gone in a trice!"

"And what did the father do?"

"He ran to the door in a panic, calling Estevanico back. And when he saw he had gone, he shook his head and said, 'Poor little one, he doesn't know he has taken his father's eyes.' "

"Then what happened?"

"Well, in the meantime I had quietly moved to the table, picked up this letter, and slipped it into the sleeve of my habit. But the father

"Slipped It Into the Sleeve of My Habit."

did not notice. He seemed quite distressed, and dismissed me, saying he would call for me again. And here is the letter."

"Read it."

"There is the usual preamble. Then it goes on thus: 'Upon reaching here these padres withdrew themselves. They passed the day in sleep and idleness and the night in outrages, disturbing the repose of those who, having spent the day in work, must needs sleep at night. They behaved, indeed, like sons of darkness; breaking the jars where the chocolate of the community is kept, stealing the chocolate-pots to beat them for drums, and appropriating the balls which were kept by the community for the recreation of the religious, bowled them through the dormitories at unseasonable hours of the night, with result to the religious of terror and confusion. And they scaled the walls of the mission establishment by night, scarcely on deeds of virtue bent . . .'"

"Scarcely!" crowed Fray Mariano, sitting up on the edge of his cot and rocking back and forth. "Scarcely! Ai, por Dios, that is fine! Brother, you did a noble deed to get that letter!"

The other rose and walked over to the table, and poured wine for both of them.

"Now I want to speak of something else seriously to you. The other day when the Governor and his party were here at the mission for the confirmation of his spoiled little Excellency, young Pedro, I overheard many things. One of them was that, because you and I had not turned out to be the shining lights Junipero Serra had hoped us to be, the founding of the Mission Santa Barbara could not take place." He gazed sternly at the other.

"Oh, tut, tut, tut. Aren't you ashamed, Brother?"

"Stop it, hypocritical wretch! So I have been thinking that if we mended our ways, things might turn out so that we could be, if not actually the founders of that mission, at least those in charge of it. Is that not worth thinking about?"

Fray Rubi gazed open-mouthed in admiration.

"Splendid! Oh, what a brother have I! What a mind, what a soul! Yes, let us do that. I shall be Father Superior, and you shall be my subordinate."

"Oh, no! I shall be Father Superior, and you the subordinate . . . I am . . ."

"No, I shall be superior, you misbegotten dog!"

Fray Rubi dashed his wine-cup at Gili's face.

The other screamed, and reached blindly before him, but Rubi had retreated to a corner, for in the doorway stood the Father President, looking in at them, shielding with a protective gesture, the Indian youth, Pio.

For a moment the padre stared at the two, then covering his eyes with his hands, stumbled away, limping painfully to his own cell. As though his legs could not support him, he sank on his knees beside his bed, and resting his head on the rough uncovered planks, wept. Pio stood awkwardly beside him, watching compassionately the thin heaving shoulders.

"Padre mio," he said at last very softly. "Padre mio, come, Pio is here beside you. Do not grieve, Father." He laid a timid brown hand on the priest.

"Yes, Pio, you are beside me. Thank God for that. Thank God for you, my own, my true little son." He allowed Pio to lift him to the cot.

"Pio," he groaned, "I have been a sinner. I have failed, somewhere, somehow, or else I would not be now forsaken. I had gone to those two with love and forgiveness in my heart, to beg them to help me, to be my eyes, since my spectacles are gone. And you saw them, Pio. Your innocent eyes saw them. Ah, why have they been sent to me, for I do not remember any sin I have committed black enough to deserve them as a punishment."

"No, Father! Say it not! You are no sinner."

"Dear son." The father smiled faintly. "Little loyal one. You are all I have, Pio, it seems. Everything else is falling away from me; my right of confirmation, my beloved mission to Santa Barbara, my friendship with Don Pedro and now these messages that have come today, denying me even hope for the future. Pio," he said suddenly, "you can read?"

"A little, Father."

SAVE MONEY?

The Standard Coupe

300,000 new owners acclaimed the "thrifty 60" last year. Hundreds a day are buying it in 1938. Why?

Because it is priced low—includes essential equipment without extra charge—and goes farther between filling stations than any Ford car ever built. Owners all over the country report averages of 22 to 27 miles on a single gallon of gasoline.

But economy isn't all the story by any means. The Standard "60" is built with the same precision as the De Luxe "85," and has the same 112-inch wheelbase chassis. It is easy to look at and ride in—as well as easy to buy and run. There's a Ford dealer near you.

SELLS COLORCRETE IN SIX COUNTIES

Norman Feather of the Northern Concrete Products company, four miles east of Harbor Springs, announced that his company has completed a deal with the Colorcrete Industries, Inc., manufacturers of colorcrete, for their products in six Northern Michigan counties. Mr. Feather declared, that with the increased use of masonry for both homes and business buildings the demand for colorcrete was steadily growing. It is equally desirable in both warm and cold climates, and on both old and new buildings, he says.

It takes more courage to live by the Constitution than to die for it.

KIWANIS TAKES HIGHWAY PROBLEMS TO LANSING

Expect Visit to Bring Results Beneficial to Charlevoix

Highway and harbor conditions in Charlevoix, particularly centering on U.S.31 and the swing bridge over the channel between Round lake and Lake Michigan, were the topics discussed Monday at Lansing between state highway officials and a local Kiwanis delegation.

A committee of four Kiwanis members, with Ray S. Hamilton as chairman, and including Robert F. Sloan, Clair S. Webster and Floyd J. Fessenden, took Charlevoix's problems to State Highway Commissioner Murray D. VanWagoner. While the group obtained promises of action beneficial to the city, the matters are too premature at the present time to make public announcement.

That Charlevoix will benefit from the Lansing trip is practically certain and reflects credit on the Kiwanis Club for its initiative and interest in these vital problems.

CONG. LUECKE TELLS AIRMAIL POSSIBILITY

Appropriation for Route Between Detroit and Soo Approved

Rep. John Luecke, of the 11th Michigan district, has been advised by Harllee Branch, second assistant postmaster general, that in all probability, bids for the new air mail route between Detroit and Sault Ste. Marie would be advertised within the next two weeks.

The appropriation for the establishment of the new air mail route has passed both House and Senate and has been signed by the President. It was explained by C. P. Graddick, Supt., Division of Air Mail Service, that advertisement of the bids was being delayed temporarily by the P. O. Department's desire to include additional mileage in the bids for several of the recently authorized routes, and advertise for bids for all routes simultaneously.
